There was a large attendance at the Lions Club Halloween celebration held in Mentone Tuesday evening and the parade of masked individuals was as large as in past years. There's that old saying about not being able to see something even though its right under your nose, and LeRoy Cox has the proof. He was in today showing a colored picture taken at the "devil's backbone,"" between here and Warsaw, and the picture contains as much color and beauty as you would be able to find in many of the well advertised uncertainty and the picture of the well advertised uncertainty as you would be able to find in many of the well advertised vacations areas hundreds of miles

Mr. and Mrs. Christian have placed consistently in the higher brackets with their exhibits each year. I asked Deanna's mom, Linda, if she would use the $100 check they sent her for something spe-cial. "It's going in her college fund," Linda replied, and I heard Deanna in the background add, "Mom says it has to!" Deanna won at the county fair with the same recipe previous-ly, and took it to the state fair, where she got a blue ribbon for it. Having sampled some of the Burch girl's baking in the past, I can't wait to try this recipe!

Capistrano, with its swallows, has nothing on Indiana. Each year, from late September until early December, sandhill cranes stop at the Jasper-Pulaski Fish and Wildlife Area, near Winamac, on their way from their summer homes in Michigan, wisconsin, Minnesota and southern Canada to their winter homes in Georgia and Florida. Special management programs at the wildlife park provide food and nesting areas for the birds, which as recently as 1973 were included on the endangered species list.

Jerry and I went with Pat and Loren Gross last weekend to see the spectacular, graceful takeoffs and landings of the beautiful blue-grey birds. It's worth the trip to get a peck at nature at its finest. It's estimated as many as 10,000 of the birds make the stop at the Jasper-Pulaski Fish and Wildlife area each fall.

Marie Benzing Stained Glass Artist

by Tonia Weller

Stained glass artist, Marie Benzing, and her husband, Robert, who works for Pike Lumber Company, are relative newcomers to the Akron area, having moved here last April. But Marie is no newcomer to her chosen art form, having produced beautiful, colorful stained glass windows and cut glass objects of art for 11

Marie first became interested in glass work while a student at North Miami High School. She made a cut glass mobile as a 4-H project from glass from a house that was being torn down. Marie's mother had taken a stained glass course and had supplies left. Marie took over where her mother had left off and the's beam at it more since she's been at it every since. Marie makes windows, lamps, panels, suncatchers and standing table top ornaments in addition to stained glass repair. She has repaired antiques and church windows. Because stained glass repair is so expensive, difficult and time consuming, it is Inequently easier and cheaper for Marie to remake a window using the same glass than it is to repair it. Marie sells her stained glass through a shop owned in partnership with her parents, Jim and Susie Winters. The shop, known as Winters' Stained Glass and Craft Boutique, is located between Maries and Dorn and in craft is output. between Mexico and Peru, and is open by appointment, by calling 317/985-2447. Marie has also had a booth at Borkholder butch Village in the Amish country near Nappanee for the last six months. This past weekend she displayed her work at the Logansport Mall. She has also shown her work at the Plymouth

Logansport Mall. She has also shown her work at the Plymouth Blueberry Festival and at shows in Huntington, Fort Wayne and South Bend. Marie ships her stained glass all over the country. She has plans to open a shop closer to home in the near future. Marie is quick to credit her parents for their help. She says, "Without my parents, there wouldn't even be a shop." Her mother does most of the copper foil work and shipping. Her dad is a big help with the cutting and grinding. Marie works with both the traditional lead and the power copper foil methods. She is primarily self-taught. The production of a stained glass window requires many steps. First, the design must be decided on and sketched. Marie has several books containing hundreds of patterns. She can combine elements from several patterns to provide a one-of-a-kind design for her customers. Marie than works with the customer to select the colors of glass to be t = d. The pattern is then drawn to a scale and the glass scored and cut. Each piece of glass must then be ground to smooth the edms. After grinding each piece is either wrapped in copper foil or set in lead channels, depending on which method is being used. Then it must all be soldered together. Finally, the finished piece is washed and a true or antique finish may be applied. Marie has a ide windows as large as 4' X 6' and has made a few large circular windows. Of all the pieces she has made, she is most proud of a window icaturing rose and cream colored humingbirds that she made for her mother.

hummingbirds that she made for her mother. Marie purchases most of her colored glass in Kokomo, and her jewels (faceted pieces of glass) and bevels from a mail order company.

While fine stained glass work is always fairly expensive, Marie takes great pride in keeping her prices as reasonable as possible. She has suncatchers as low as $2.50 and on up to $25. Her windows range from $75 on up depending on the size and the number of jewels and bevels used.

The Christmas season is always a busy one for Marie. Special Christmas items include stained glass nativity scenes and angel suncatchers

When Marie does a show, she will usually take $2000 to $3000 worth of merchandise. All the pieces must be carefully wrapped in bubble plastic to prevent breakage during travel. Besides the glass work, Marie also works with silk and dried flowers. She does wedding flowers in addition to center pieces, wall hangings and other country gift items.

Marie and Robert have a one year old son who goes by his middle name of Thor.

Since moving to Akron this spring, they have been busy completely remodeling the farm house they purchased south of St. Rd. 14 on C.R. 1075E (Akron Cemetery Road). Marie has chosen a country theme with Amish influences and the result is delightful.

When asked about other hobbies, Marie laughed and said, Being a mom is about the only other hobby I have time for." She did add, though, that both she and Robert enjoy hunting and fishing. Robert also enjoys archery. According to Marie, "He's a real outdoorsman.

The Benzings enjoy their new home in Akron and are looking forward to the completion of their remodeling project.

When the library held its 50th Anniversary, in 1965, there were over 200 guests in attendance. It is hoped that Sunday's were over 200 guests in attendance. It is hoped that Sunday's celebration will be even larger. This is an excellent opportunity for area residents, both past and present, to visit with old friends, and become acquainted with all the services the library has to offer. Everyone is invited and special invitations have been sent to former employees and board members. First Bank has donated the popcorn and the use of their popcorn wagon, and Day Hardware is providing glass for the displays.

In the early days of the community, there was no library. Prior to 1870, there was a small collection of books kept in a drugstore and cared for by Milo Hott. Later, when Jacob Whittenberger and E.A. Arnold became Trustees of Henry Township, they took over the care of the books. In the early part of this century, there were small church and school libraries. Then, in 1912, Rev. M.H. Krause and a few other community spirited citizens began a campaign to obtain a Public Library. A petition was circulated and a library because the community spirited and a library because the school was accused and a school was accused and a school and a scho spirited citizens began a campaign to obtain a Public Library. À petition was circulated and a library board was established and by-laws were adopted. The first board consisted of: Estil A. Gast, President; Mrs. P.L. Ferry, Vice Pres.; Wilbur C. Hosman, Secretary; Dessa Sayger, temporary librarian; Mrs. M.L. Patterson; Emory Scott; W.F. Neal and Delno Whitcomb. Saturday, August 17, 1912, was declared "Library Shower Day" and board members went around town with wheelbarrows, gathering books donated by the townspeople. These books were placed in rooms above Wilhoit and Hoffman Meat Market (now Fashionette Beauty Salon). The rooms were rented from the Edna Wilhoit was appointed assistant librarian and the library opened on August 19, 1912. In February 1913, Edna was officially named Librarian.

In early 1913, Rev. Krause began the necessary paperwork to obtain a grant from the Carnegie Corporation. A condition of the grant was that the library board guarantee a sufficient amount of grant was that the library board guarantee a sufficient amount of money would be available, yearly, to run the library. This money was provided by the township library tax. Several sites were considered and the present location was decided on after much discussion. The property was purchased by Fletcher Stoner and Daniel Leininger, for $1500, and presented to the library board. When it was discovered the lot was too narrow, Mrs. M.L. Patterson, then president of the board, purchased and donated a strip of land to the west. The Carnegie Grant provided $12,000 for construction and the contract was let to local contractor, Milo Cutshall in September of 1914. Wednesday. October 28, 1914 was a big day for A kron as the

The Akron Band led the big parade and Rev. Krause, who had led the drive for the new library, gave a speech. The building was completed in just over a year. The books were moved to the new building and on October 21, 1915 the dream of Akron Camegie Public Library became a reality. In 1926, a library station was established in Athens and continued until it was closed in 1969. In 1962, a branch was established in Silver Lake, but after Lake Township officials refused to provide funding, it was closed in late 1964. In the 1970's glass blocks were placed in the windows and dry-wall and paneling were added to the basement. In 1983, the restrooms were remodeled, in 1987 a wall was added to the basement auditorium, forming a new room and in 1989, the main floor was air conditioned.

1989, the main floor was air conditioned. Through the years many fine women have served as librarians or assistants. They are; Mrs. Cccil Kuhn (Miss Wilhoit), Edith Studebaker, Helen Waite, Mrs. P.L. She is assisted by Gloria Bowen, Janet Hawley, Carol Graham and Jenny Moore. Although the library officially opened in October of 1915, the 75th Anniversary Celebration is planned to correspond with the beginning of National Children's Book Week on November 11. Through the years, Book Week has always been a big event at the library and that is especially so this year. School children will be entertained with movies each day and a series of six weekly story hours for pre-schoolers is planned. These story hours will also include crafts, fingerplays and other surprises for children. They will be held on Friday mornings at 10:00 a.m. and any pre-schooler is welcome to attend. A schedule is available at the library.

The present library building has served the community to show the same spirit the citizens of 1912 did. It is time for the community to begin thinking of providing an addition to the library so that it can serve our children as well as it has served us it has served us.

Letter to the Editor

Editors Note: The following letter was forwarded to the News by Dean Baker of Pike Lumber. Bill Cornell, Sr. has been an employee of Pike's for many years. Pike employees sent two cases of Gatorade, with assistance from Viking Foods, to Bill, Jr. and his buddies on October 31.

Dear Dean and Family, October 11, 1990 How are you? I'm fine and hope that you are too. Thank you for your letter. I'm a Second Class Hospital Corpsman in the U.S. Navy (E-stationed with the 3d Marines Regiment out of Kaneohe Bay, HI.

A Hospital Corpsman is a Navy medical trained person assigned to do a wide variety of things. Such as a Doctor's or Nurse's Assistant, EMTs, Ambulance Drivers, Deliver Babies, jump out of perfectly good airplanes and helicopters (why I don't know) and trained in Combat Medicine to be able to fix the wounded and further save their lives.

That's my job for now. There are over 850 Marines in my unit and only 17 medical people including the doctor. You can see how we can become really busy in a short amount of time.

We're ready for comba if need be. Let's hope we don't have to. The Marines and Sailors in Hawaii are especially trained in Jungle Warfare and Hostage Rescue. We do six month deployments to the Far East, including South Korea, Thailand, Republic of the Philippines and Okinawa, Japan. We were the unit deployed to the Philippines during the Coup Attempt last December. That's the closest I've been to combat thus far. As for Saudi Arabia. It's very hot here and we have to drink a lot of water to stay healthy. Approximately two gallons of water a day. That's a lot of water for a little place to come up with for a lot of temporary people so the majority of water we drink is from the Gulf of Oman. The desalinization plant is next to our camp. Just to make sure that its drinkable, we the medical people, have to add bleach to the water to kill the germs. It's the same kind of chlorine found in your school found in your school swimming pool. You get used to the taste after a while so we drink a lot of Tang, Gatorade and Sugar-free Kool-Aid.

Here goes my sales pitch. If Pike Lumber Company would to further support the like Operational Forces here in Saudi Arabia, magazines and Gatorade would definitely be the key to better morale. All the Gatorade sent over was consumed, hidden and kept by the Air Force and none distributed to the other branches of the services. Why? I don't know. I've yet in the seven years I've been in the Navy to see a Zoomie hump anywhere with sixty plus pounds of gear on their backs or get shot at. I'm not asking for a whole lot but perhaps a case or two that would be put to very good use, keeping our personnel adequately hydrated and ready to fight in a moment's notice. What more can you ask for a tax deduction and for a good cause. How's that for an add campaign?

In the field we're approximately 40 miles from the Kuwait border. I've filled enough sandbags for our bunker to build Walt Disney a castle. But isn't this every child's dream to have a never ending sandbox? We have a lot of varied wildlife here. We have camels, scorpions, lots of snakes (including cobras), jackals, sand foxes and a whole lot more. So far we've had very few snake bites and scorpion stings. But being medical people, we collect specimens and put them in jars to take back to Hawaii. The only hazardous part of that is the majority of everything that moves here is poisonous. We have a Basketball goal set up, two Volleyball nets and we have frisbees and baseballs. Almost all the comforts of home. We also have electricity but no TVs

We'll do our best to make you proud. And we pray many times during the day that this ordeal will be over soon and that we'll all be able to return home safely. I know that you probably have a lot of questions and I'll be happy to answer them if you want to write back.

Take care of yourselves and remember us in your prayers. Sincerely

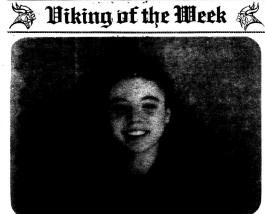

Bill Cornell, Jr.

Mentone Business of the Week

Plant manager Sam Slaymaker in his office at Winona Corp. With hard work and an obvious love for his job, Sam has ad-vanced from his entry level student job of maintenance helper to the Mentone Plant Manager.

Winona Corp.

by Leafy Hudson Winona Corp., located at the south edge of Mentone on State Road 19, is a custom powder coating company. It is an old com-pany, originally started in Winona Lake, Indiana, to do metal fabricating. It is still headquartered in Winona Lake, with Mr. Ron Everson as its president.

Winona Corp. began powder coating of metal parts in 1979 and does it almost exclusively now. The process of powder coat-ing is rapidly replacing liquid painting. There are two reasons for this. First, it is environmentally safe. When the process is complete, there are no hazardous wastes to contend with. Sec-ord it is merge correctional ond, it is more economical.

In 1984, with business growing rapidly, Winona Corp. needed

In 1984, with business growing rapidly, Winona Corp. needed room for expansion. They found their present Mentone building, one of the early pole buildings in the area, erected in 1966, available and already furnished with some painting equipment. They moved into the building in May, 1984. Sam Slaymaker, formerly a foreman at the Winona Lake plant, came to Mentone with the company in 1984 as Plant Man-ager and still holds that position. A native of Kosciusko County and a Warsaw High School graduate, Sam began working for Winona Corp. in 1974, while still a student. Beginning as a maintenance helper, he was promoted to foreman in 1978.

Winona Corp. in 1974, while shill a student. Beginning as a maintenance helper, he was promoted to foreman in 1978. In 1988, again experiencing rapid growth, the company was forced to seriously consider its future in Mentone. With the promise of the new sewage system a priority consideration, the company decided to stay in Mentone. "The new sewage system," says Sam, "made it possible for us to stay here." As a result, an addition in the spring of 1989 doubled the size of the building to ghout 15 000 serious fort and dubled their context.

of the building to about 15,000 square feet and doubled their ca-pacity for production. They presently employ twenty men and women in Mentone.

Women in Mentone. The powder coating process began in Europe during World War II, becoming popular in the United States in the 1970's. Today, it is used almost exclusively for coating metal parts. Some of the industries who use powder coated materials are the R.V., van conversion, medical, automotive and restaurant furniture industries. Examples of use are powder coated wire gridding behind the driver's area of UPS trucks for protection against tumbling packages and in police cars, forming barrier between the drivers and suspected criminal passengers. Perhaps a more familiar example is the powder coated wire racks found in dishwashers.

In disnwasners. The powder coating process begins with a fine powder similar in texture to common cooking flour. The powder comes to Winona Corp. in the desired color of the finished coating. As the process is started, the powder is heated to 400 degrees Fahren-heit, for ten minutes. It turns to liquid and is applied electrostati-cally, thus clinging to the metal parts. At Winona Corp., they can coat any metal from the circ of a small washer to parts can coat any metal from the size of a small washer to parts

Polyester is similar to epoxy, but is designed for outdoor use. It stands up to the sun's ultraviolet rays. It's excellent for such things as lawn furniture, wheelbarrows and lawn mowers. Nylon is very hard, functional and durable. It's used in applications where the part needs much wear resistance. Plastisol is used in applications of very thick coatings. It lends itself well for outside restaurant and roadside furniture.

Vinyl is very durable, chip resistant and the best insulator of the group. It gives a soft, warm feeling to the touch. It is the

the group, it gives a soit, warm recling to the touch. It is the material used in dishwasher racks. Sam says powder coating is a fast growing industry. The automotive industry, for instance, has gone to it because powder coated component parts within the car will wear longer. They are corrosion resistant and rust free, resulting in longer lasting cars

Floor sinks are another example. Traditionally porcelain, they are now almost exclusively powder coated with epoxy. The por-celain, to be applied, must be heated to 1600 degrees Fahrenheit, so, the epoxy is not only durable, but also more economical. Sam sees Winona Corp, as a strong company and anticipates good future growth. "One thing that has helped the company grow," he says, "is that we still cater to small businesses. The key to our success is our fast turnaround on parts." They present-ly do business with over one budged companying in a reserve ly do business with over one hundred companies in six states.

Sam says, "I've had an opportunity to grow with the compa-ny. I've worked really hard and I enjoy what I do. I especially enjoy working with customers as I've had the opportunity to go out and see parts installed." Sam has two children, Andrew, seven and Brittney, four. He lives about four miles north of Sidney, near Sellers Lake. In ad-dition to his job at Winona Corp., he farms 450 acres in partnership with his father, Wayne Slaymaker, where he raises corn, soybeans, wheat, cattle and hogs.

Although he doesn't live here, Sam finds Mentone a pleasant community with nice people. He foresees a long and prosperous future for Winona Corp. here.

The faded curtains were replaced with brand new ones made from fabric donated by a scout grandmother, Doris Cooper. Plans are also being made to have the carpeting professionally cleaned.

Although the spiders may not appreciate the improvements made, the boys are hopeful that the others who are noperul that the others who use the building will be. The scouts have an unofficial creed which says, "Leave your campsite in better condition than your found it." They have tried to apply this idea to the building we use and hope others will learn a lesson from the boys and do the same. the boys and do the same.

The food will be distributed on Nov. 20 from 2:00 to 6:00 p.m. at Helping Hands located on the comer of 1000 and 600 South.

Jerry Secrist estimates close to 75 families will come out for this give-away. Jerry commented, "There are so many families out there that are in need of some assistance. There is a lot of unemployment right now."

Helping Hands is a clothing and food bank and is a nonprofit organization. Donations are always accepted to help replenish food supplies. Already, in the past three weeks, the organization has spent close to $400.00 for food.

Everett and Bernice Miner in their home near Mentone. "Mother taught me to work and to read a chapter a day in the Bible," Bernice says. "I feel like it's the best heritage she could have given me." Everett is proud of the eleven years he spent on the Syracuse Fire Department, serving as secretary-treasurer all that time. Theirs has truly been a exciting life of useful service. (News Photo)

Profile of Everett and Bernice

by Leafy Hudson

Everett and Bernice Miner, who have resided in one of the Manwaring houses at White City (one mile east of Mentone on CR 1000W), for the last eleven years, have "rubbed elbows" in the past with some very important Hoosiers. Their list of former employers reads like a "Who's Who" of Indiana business people. Everett, now 86, and Bernice, 88, began life a long way apart.

Éverett, now 86, and Bernice, 88, began life a long way apart. Bernice was born in a log cabin about a mile from Algiers, which is near the Buffalo Trace leading to Santa Claus, Indiana. "There was no electricity, no telephones," Bernice recalls, "and we drew water from a well. It's hard for our grandchildren to un-derstand," she says, "but my brother and I were happy kids." Bernice has many memories of those halcyon years. They cooked on a four burner wood stove. "It got hot real quick," she says. "It worked well. We made angel food cakes on it. Mother was a good cook. We had our own fruits and vegetables and we ate well balanced meals. We had meat and gravy, even for breakfast. And we ate what was set on the table. We never said 'we don't like this or that." we don't like this or that."

They bathed in a tub and changed clothes once a week. One pair of shoes was all they had at a time. They attended a one room school, where they had to carry water and all drank from a common dipper. "But," she adds, "it didn't seem to hurt any-

When Bernice was twelve years old, her father built a beauti-ful modern house to replace the log cabin, with a new cast iron range--which took lots longer to heat up for use. Bernice's father, Fred Myers, a fur buyer, traded furs for 77 years in southern Indiana. He probably holds the record for the longest fur buying career in America! Bernice also remembers her grandmother, who was wealthy,

Bernice also remembers her grandmother, who was wealthy, with enough land to divide generously between her fourteen living children. Bernice chuckles as she recalls her grand-mother's banking methods. She kept her money buried in buckets in the garden. There was speculation as to whether all of it was ever found!

Everett, on the other hand, born in Coldwater, Michigan, was still a baby when his family moved to Montgomery, Michigan, in Hillsdale County. Death claimed his mother when he was just twelve years old, and an aunt took Everett and his little sister to raise.

Although one of Everett's vivid memories is of grocers' peddling wagons, when the grocer would deliver his products to farmers, picking up fresh eggs as he went, he was, basically, a town boy. He remembers how they bought milk from farmers. They filled their half-gallon enamel buckets from the farmers' (now) old-fashioned milk cans. No processing -- no regulations to abide by--just fresh country milk.

"We didn't have so many vegetables in town," he says. "I had to learn to like most vegetables later."

Transportation highlights Everett's memories of those days. He remembers Old Road 12, from Niles to Detroit, as a fourlane gravel road. Travel was by horse and buggy then, and sometimes by surrey, a vehicle with six rows of seats. They would fill it full to go to the next town, twelve miles away, to the movies, singing all the way. Two songs, he fondly recalls from those times were "The Surrey With the Fringe on Top" (it did indeed have fringe on top, he says, as well as shades to pull down in bad weather), and "Goodnight Irene."

Singing was always important to Everett, who was a high tenor in the Presbyterian Church Choir for a long time.He regrets that hearing loss prevents him from singing today.

It was chance and mutual friends that brought Everett and Bernice together from so many miles apart. Everett had moved to Indianapolis in 1925 to attend the YMCA Business College, with a few classes from Indiana University Extension at In-dianapolis. He completed his course of study in business administration and accounting in 1928. Bernice, who had worked alongside her father on the farm for ten years after eighth grade graduation, decided in 1923 it was time to make her own way in the world. A friend, visiting at home from her Indianapolis job, promised Bernice a job as a professional cook if she would return to Indianapolis with her. Bernice went, intending to work just long enough to earn tuition to business school. By then, however, she discovered she was making more as a cook than her friends made in business, consequently, she never attended business school.

Mutual friends invited both Everett and Bernice to their home for dinner. They started dating and were married a year later, May 18, 1938.

Bernice's first good job was cooking for Mr. and Mrs. Wil-liam Elder, Indianapolis' foremost real estate people of the time. Their son was a well-known Hoosier politician, Bowman Elder. The Elders were Indiana pioneers.

Later Bernice worked for the L.C. Boyds, who were the prin-cipal owners of the Indianapolis Water Company. She added chauffeuring to her accomplishments in this job. They motored to the Boyd's summer home in Michigan each year, where they employed another cook so Bernice would always be available to drive them as desired.

Everett's first job following school was accountant for the Vonnegut Hardware Company. Brothers Franklin, George and Tony were all involved in the business at one time or another. Another Vonnegut brother was superintendent of Indianapolis Schools for at least one term. Notable among the Vonneguts' achievements was the development of the bar release for doors, prevalent in all public buildings today. Having heard of some children in Chicago who smothered while unable to exit from a burning building, the Vonnegut brothers joined forces with DuPonts and Princlers to form a company named VonDuPrin. Together, they manufac-kult vormegut, the famous indiana author or today, is a meta-ber of this illustrious family. Everett worked for the Vonneguts until their hardware compa-ny fell victim to the depression and went into bankruptcy. Al-though the bank stood behind them and they were able to recover, Everett wasn't making enough money to support a family.

By this time, Bernice and Everett had built a house near Central Christian College in Indianapolis' south side and Bernice, expecting their first child, had quit working.

Bernice had an inspiration to solve their dilemma. She had cooked as a substitute for a friend of Mrs. Eli (Ruth) Lilly, of the famous pharmaceutical company, and knew Mrs. Lilly was pleased with her. She wrote to Mrs. Lilly's friend, requesting employment for Everett.

The result was Mrs. Lilly invited them to her Indianapolis home, where she offered Bernice and Everett jobs as cook and superintendent of buildings and grounds at their Lake Wawasee home

So, Everett and Bernice made the move to Syracuse, Indiana, in April, 1939. They rented a small house for the first few months, but bought an acre of ground to build on and by December of that year they were snug in their own home on North Shore Drive in Syracuse, overlooking Lake Wawasee. They enjoyed their Syracuse home very much, where they raised their children, Jim and Mary. They always raised a garden and a few chickens for meat and eggs. The Lilly buildings, as the Miners found them, were quite rustic. There were no furnaces and no closets. They went unheated through the winter and clothes were hung on nails on the walls.

The main house, built by Colonel Moore in 1886, except for In the main nouse, built by Coroner Moore in 1000, except to farmhouses across the lake, was the first house built on Lake Wawasee. It consisted of a living room, four bedrooms, a storage room, bathroom and a large unfloored attic--no kitchen! In the early days, when family and friends occupied the house, the total their main comes the loke at the Scinger House land they took their meals across the lake at the Spinks Hotel and, later, at the nearer and newer Sargent Hotel. Both these hotels had a long and interesting history. For example, Everett can re-member watching Hollywood's comedy team, Laurel and Hardy, as guests of the hotel, clown around on the beach at the Spinks Hotel. Mr. Sargent, of the Sargent Hotel, was, at one tie, a member of the John Philip Sousa Band.

Mr. Lilly didn't care for eating out, however, and he built a second house, about twenty-five feet from the first one, a rustic kitchen with no modern conveniences: not even a built in cupboard or a modern stove. He greatly enjoyed his summers at the lake and would often invite fishing parties of 17 or more to share his "cottage." They would fill the bedrooms and overflow to the eight white metal twin beds lined up in the unfloored attic. Sometimes the only place left for Mr. Lilly was a cot in the living room.

With Mr. Lilly's approval, Everett soon made the Lilly Estate much more comfortable. He contracted Coppes Kitchens of Nappanee to install a beautiful modern kitchen in the second house. Eventually bedrooms and a back porch were added, as well as an adequate dining room table. Paved walks replaced gravel ones between the two ouses and the Miners created a fragrant rose garden behind the house. From 1939 until they retired to Mentone, about 1979, Bernice, sometimes with extra help, did all the cooking and housekeeping for the Lilly family and guests at Lake Wawasee. Everett took re-sponsibility for improving the buildings and grounds and hearing eventition in good buildings and grounds and keeping everything in good repair.

Just as Everett and Bernice were about to leave for Florida for the winter of 1972-73 they received a call from Mr. Lilly. He told them sadly that his wife was on her deathbed and had requested some of Bernice's scrapple. So, she with Mrs. Lilly's favorite pumpkin cookies. Thev stopped with their goodies at the Lillys' Indianapolis home, where they were welcomed warmly. Although Mrs. Lilly officially was not allowed company, she insisted on a visit with Bernice and talked enthusiastically with her for some time. Shortly after they reached Florida, they received another call from Mr. Lilly with the news of his wife's death.

Everett and Bernice cherish their memories of working for the Lillys'. They say the Lillys were considerate people, paid well and were "the best to work for.

Everett and Bernice are justproud of their family. Jim, a It proud of their family. Jim, a champion boat racer in his younger days, "always wants to be first at whatever he does." He set a record on the Ohio River that has never been broken. Before the Miners moved to Mentone, Jim was awarded a Lawrence D. Bell Scholarship and offered a job in the Bell Aircraft Plant at Buffalo, New York. Today, he and his wife, Fern live in Lebanon, Indiana, where he teaches science and she is head librarian at the Lebanon Public Library. Their daughter, Jill, an honor sudent, is a senior in high school.

Mary, Mrs. Frank Manwar-ing of Mentone, is a graduate of Ball State University. As a teenager, she was "Miss Vacationland" in Syracuse and a princess in the "Queen of the Lakes Contest." They have three children, Jennifer, Fort Wayne, Julie, Indianapolis and Sam, a student of Vincennes University.

Harvey's Dime Store, Inc., 106 W. Rochester Street in Akron, prides itself in remaining an old-fashioned, small-town dime store. They offer an amazing variety of merchandise or as assistant manager Carolyn Petrosky says, "a little bit of just about everything." for 13 years, Peggy Myers is the store's other employee. Because Carolyn and Marilyn are identical twins, wear their hair in the same style and frequently dress alike, they have had a lot of fun in the store. According to Carolyn, "There have been customers who thought, for a long time, that there was only one of us." Marilyn teaches Sunday School and Carolyn remembers the time a small boy from Marilyn's class came in and started talking to her at the front of the store. Then he went to the back of the store and ran into Marilyn. When she asked how he'd been, he told her he'd just been talking to her up front. When he saw them side hy side, he was totally confused. "Even our boss saw them side by side, he was totally confused. "Even our boss and grandkids get us mixed up," laughs Carolyn. When the two were girls at Mentone School, the teachers would make them wear different colored bracelets so they could tell them apart. "Of course, then they would accuse us of switching bracelets,

"Of course, then they would accuse us of switching bracelets, but we never did," says Carolyn. As teenagers, Marilyn grew her finger nails longer and that's the way the boys told them apart. The building where Harvey's is located, along with Day Hardware next door to the west, used to be Leininger's Department Store. Leininger's sold groceries, meats, clothing and just about everything else. Carolyn remembers going there as a little girl and getting cheese, cut from the big round block. She also remembers the little trolley cars, on tracks, that ran up elseng the ceiling and back to the office, where sales were along the ceiling and back to the office, where sales were recorded and change made. Besides her work at Harvey's, Carolyn has also worked with the Akron EMS for ten years. She and her husband, Rudy, who

A dime store is defined in the dictionary as a store selling a variety of inexpensive items. Harvey's is certainly that and more. With all the years experience the employees have, when a customer walks into Harvey's, they don't see a sales clerk, they see an old friend.

Peggy Myers is the store's other employee.

Because Carolyn and Marilyn are identical twins, wear their hair in the same style and frequently dress alike, they have had a lot of fun in the store. According to Carolyn, "There have been customers who thought, for a long time, that there was only one of us." Marilyn teaches Sunday School and Carolyn remembers the time a small boy from Marilyn's class came in and started talking to her at the front of the store. Then he went to the back of the store and ran into Marilyn. When she asked how he'd been, he told her he'd just been talking to her up front. When he saw them side by side, he was totally confused. "Even our boss and grandkids get us mixed up," laughs Carolyn. When the two were girls at Mentone School, the teachers would make them wear different colored bracelets so they could tell them apart. "Of course, then they would accuse us of switching bracelets, but we never did," says Carolyn. As teenagers, Marilyn grew her funce nevit longer and that's the way the boys told them apart.

but we never usis longer and that's the way the boys told them apart. The building where Harvey's is located, along with Day Hardware next door to the west, used to be Leininger's Department Store. Leininger's sold groceries, meats, clothing and just about everything else. Carolyn remembers going there as a little girl and getting cheese, cut from the big round block. She also remembers the little trolley cars, on tracks, that ran up along the ceiling and back to the office, where sales were recorded and change made. "The kids used to love to watch them," she says.

them," she says. Besides her work at Harvey's, Carolyn has also worked with the Akron EMS for ten years. She and her husband, Rudy, who works at Sonoco Products, have three children and four grandchildren. Their sons, Steven and Michael, live in Akron and their daughter, Teresa, lives in Wyoming. Carolyn also collects plates and thimbles, of which she has 390. When her daughter returned, recently, from a trip to Europe, she called to tell Carolyn she'd brought her a piece of the Berlin Wall. Carolyn was disappointed and said, "But I wanted a thimble." "Well, you got both," her daughter replied.

Carolyn and Marilyn both help out with the 4th of July Committee and are active in their churches, although they don't attend the same one.

attend the same one. A dime store is defined in the dictionary as a store selling a variety of inexpensive items. Harvey's is certainly that and more. With all the years experience the employees have, when a customer walks into Harvey's, they don't see a sales clerk, they see an old friend.

On October 27 and 28, 255 Swimmers from all over Indiana converged upon Tippecanoe Valley High School's pool to take part in Tippecanoe Valley Aquatic Club's "Spook Splash" Divitational Teams from Club's Spoon Invitational. Teams from Bloomington, Fort Wayne, Concord, Kokomo, Elkart, Concord, Kokomo, Manchester, Huntington and Marion were among the 15 teams entered in this annual competition at TVHS.

For the first time in this meet a trophy was awarded to the team receiving the most points in the two days of competition. If it does, and if the battery does not get "hung up' or become damaged, it will usually pass normally through the digestive system. Another hazard of letting small children gain access to small (button) batteries is that in many cases they will stuff

Letter to the Editor

Open letter to my FELLOW (SO CALLED) "ANTI-ZONING RADICALS"

"ZONING VOTE SEEN AS PIVOTAL ISSUE IN DAVE CLAUSON DEFEAT" (so reports the Rochester Sentinel of 1/7/90).

The credit for such a "huge" victory goes to those of YOU who donated the scores of 5, 10, and 20 dollar contributions to finance the full page ads in the Shopping Guide News, the Akron-Mentone News, the Kewanna Observer, the Rochester Sentinel and the hundreds of mail outs and copies of the proposed zoning ordinance produced and distributed to insure that the voters were informed.

that the voters were informed. Even though the ads were impressive, the bottom line was YOU, with the voluntary making of signs, the passing out of fliers, the personal talk it up with your friends and neighbors and seeing to it, that in this projected low voter turnout year, almost 3/4ths of the Fulton County voters did go to the polls. There is no question that County-wide ZONING, was THE big issue in this campaign and an 1100 plus vote victory over an impression provide a set of the provide set of the polls.

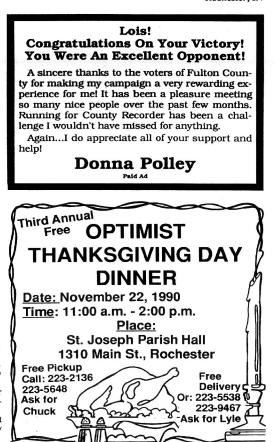

incumbent politician certainly is a strong message. But equally as big was the issue of representation of the people by their elected officials and the people's right to be heard. And they spoke with clarity, emphasis and conviction. What is most impressive is that more and more people everywhere are realizing that YOU can FIGHT the proverbial "city hall" and WIN.

But our fight isn't over yet. We still have some narrow minded Commissioners who need to be replaced. The state legislature needs to be directed to pass legislation to insure that this denial of the opportunity to vote never happens again. The money misspent by the misfeasance of this zoning subterfuge needs to be returned to the public coffers. And in my opinion, we need a new county attorney who has a greater desire to represent Fulton County than to promote his own lust for power.

And Randy Sutton needs your attention also. We can't put a man into office to represent us and then ignore him. We need to keep him informed so he can represent all the people of the

But for the moment, you can savor the sweetness of this victory. It was yours. You did it. You deserve it. And I THANK YOU very very much!!!

The Akron-Mentone News - November 14, 1990 public reading. The bylaws will be published in the next FCHS Quarterly.

The meeting dates for 1991 were approved. Suggestions for programs are needed.

The board denied a request to use a metal detector on FCHS land.

Approval was given to plan a spring rendezvous the fourth weekend of April.

Fees for copying on acidfree paper were set for 50 cents a sheet on the copying machine in the museum. Copying on regular paper is still 20 cents a sheet.

Construction of the roof on the round barn has begun. Safway Steel rented scaffolding to FCHS for building the roof, which will be 24 feet taller than the sidewalls.

Because good used yellow pine could not be found, new rafters were purchased for the first circle of the roof.

THE BIBLE IS YOUR OWNER'S MANUAL FOR A GOOD LIFE

When you buy a car or a household appliance, it comes with an instruction booklet called the owner's manual. It tells you how to operate it and what to do if a problem develops. All of this sounds very modern, but there is an ancient precedent for this book of advice. It's called the Bible. However, in this case the instructions apply not to some material possession but to your life, and the way you should live it. Moreover, just as you could misuse your household device, you could also ruin your life by your failure to follow the instructions. So read your Bible and obey its mandates. Hear it explained at your House of Worship, where you learn that, unlike your household appliances, the rules for a good life will never become obsolete.

Scenes Around Town

Ellie Yazel has some unusual postcards that depict scenes of the 1893 Columbian Exposition in Chicago. Ten were issued and Ellie has nine of them. Wonder of wonder-they only cost 1¢ to mail!

Cindy and Terry Spitler, Brandon and Valerie, and Cindy's parents, Jim and Helen Whetstone, returned recently from a four day trip to Michigan's Upper Peninsula. They report it was a very enjoyable trip. A highlight was finding pieces of copper on the beach in the Houghton, Michigan, area. They were in the vicinity of many now deserted copper mines. Work is almost completed on the beautiful garden of the new addition to the United Methodist Church. A walk has been laid, with shrubbery and vines planted. The focal point is the black metal cross which originally adomed the sign that used to stand in the side yard. A gate, still to be constructed at the back of the garden, will complete the project. The garden will provide a beautiful view through the plate glass windows in the new entrance to the Church, a wonderful inspiration to all.

"Ideas Plus is a package of ideas and services designed to provide older adults with more time, less worry and more choices in how they are served by our company," said Donna Kovaleski, PSI Energy's customer caring coordinator. "There's no cost or obligation to those who sign up now or in the future. It's just one of the many ways we're showing our customers we care about them."

About 20,000 PSI Energy customers are already members of the 18-month-old Ideas Plus program. As part of this latest offer, they and others who join the program this fall receive PSI Energy's newest Ideas Plus booklet, as well as a free glow stick.

School Board discusses drug testing

The Tippecanoe Valley School Board met Monday evening, November 12:

A program involving random drug testing of Valley athletes was proposed. It was explained that athletes and their parents would be required to sign a form consenting to urinalysis, at any time. The drug tests would be conducted randomly and only the parents, the student, athletic director and coach would know the results. A positive test could result in a student being banned from athletics, however students would not be suspended or school property. Students refusing to sign the consent form would not be allowed to binn would not be an over to articipate in sports. Superintendent Baxter Paige stressed that the program is being considered to discourage drug use and not as a punishment.

A student who challenged the results of a test would be permitted to retest at his or her own expense. Each test would cost from $12 to $20 depending on which agency was contracted for the service. TVHS principal Robert Schultz supported the proposal.

A similar program has been adopted at the Tippecanoe School Corporation near Lafayette. Federal courts have upheld the legality of those tests.

Board members will study a policy manual for the proposed program and will discuss it further at the next meeting.

In other matters, the board approved an Educational Needs Assessment to be conducted by Indiana State University. The study will focus on community, school, enrollment trends, educational progress, building and site conditions and finances. The study will help the board plan for the future.

The board also approved a leave for Schultz to attend the National Principals Conference in Florida, next spring. Mike Walters was approved as freshman boys'

Fire Chief Joe Day attends Symposium

Akron Fire Chief, Joe Day attended the 7th Annual "Extrication Competition and Learning Symposium 1990" in Altamont Springs (near Orlando) Florida, October 31 through November 4. The symposium was hosted by the Seminole County Fire Department and was sponsored by the International Association of Fire Chiefs.

International Association of Fire Cheets. Chief Day attended the symposium to learn more about the use of the "Jaws of Life" equipment that the Akron Fire Department recently purchased, with the help of community fund raisers. The hydraulic spreader, which cost $12,200, is used to extricate accident victims from wrecked vehicles. All sixteen members of the local fire department have taken the special training required to use the equipment.

Training required to use the equipment. The symposium in Florida was designed for EMT's, firemen and paramedics. Approximately 300 people from the United States, Canada, England and the Islands attended the learning sessions and 20 teams (of the 35 that applied) took part in the Extrication competition.

Day attended 12 hours of classes and numerous demonstrations and competitions. He considered the slides and videos shown by TERC the most valuable learning tools. General Motors had donated 400, 1990 automobiles from their crash tests to TERC and these videos showed how to quickly dismantle a car to rescue an accident victim. Rescue workers seldom get to train with new vehicles and they come apart differently than the older models usually used in training films.

Day also took many photographs and five hours of video tape to share what he learned with other local firemen.

Valuable information was presented on equipment storage. In order for the department to operate quickly and efficiently, all equipment that is used together should be stored together. Day also learned the importance of pacing oneself in an emergency situation. It is vital to maintain a steady flow of action and not get flustered. Teamwork is essential.

situation. It is vital to maintain a steady flow of action and not get flustered. Teamwork is essential. "I was impressed enough with this program, that I'd like to see the department send someone next year," said Chief Day. "If fall behind." He felt the symposium was "very professional." Because the program was not covered in the department budget, Day attended the symposium at his own expense. Chief Day first learned about this course from an instructor at the State Fire School, last spring. While leafing through a copy of "Fire News", he saw an application and enrolled. It was very timely that the symposium was held the week before the "Jaws of Life" equipment was delivered to Akron. While in Florida, Day also had an interesting dining experience. "I got to eat alligator," he said. "It was the best meat I've ever eaten. It was outstanding."

Chief Day, who has been with the Akron Fire Department workers almost totally self reliant. "Except for a disaster or maybe an unusual semi accident, Akron can now handle emergency situations without being dependent on other departments."

Thailand Opens Tobacco Market

Thailand will open its borders to foreign cigarettes. That announcement was made by the Thai government after an international trade panel ruled that the country's ban on importing American cigarettes was illegal. The panel was part of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), a world trade body based in Geneva.

The GATT panel determined that American cigarettes cannot be kept out of Thailand as long as they are legal both there and in the United States. A spokesman for the United States strade office, Timothy O'Leary, told the New York Times before the Thai announcement, "What the Government of Thailand has done create a monopoly under which they alone sell cigarettes. It is simply discriminatory.

The ruling that the Thai ban on imported cigarettes violated international fair-trade rules came as a result of the U.S. trade representative's request that GATT consider the issue.

Doug, Justin and Lori Miller in Justin's delightfully attractive bedroom. Justin's shown here in his cradle, a gift made by hand by Jim Romine. "It's through my faith that we got Justin," Lori declares. She and Doug hope to adopt another child later.

by Leafy Hudson

The phone rang as if on a programmed schedule. The tuneful doorbell played a constant melody. A flashing light placed in the front yard by a friend alerted passersby of a special event. The whole town of Mentone, it seemed, turned out Friday, January 13, 1989, to welcome the arrival of Doug and Lori Miller's new baby, Justin. Over 200 people visited their house the first two weeks. "I didn't know the Mentone community could be so supportive," Lori says.

Now married for ten years, Doug and Lori, owners of Miller's Hardware in Mentone, had tried for years to adopt a baby, but had always met with discouragement. One difficulty was that most agencies have many restrictions, such as requiring residence in their county. Also, not as many babies are available as formerly, because of the changed attitudes in today's society. Today, many girls either opt for abortion or decide to keep their babies and raise them alone. Recently, one of the agencies Doug and Lori dealt with placed only eighteen babies during one year.

and Lori dealt with placed only eighteen babies during one year. At one point, Lori recalls, after being told it would be at least five years for them, " I just sat down and cried. Then, I finally gave it to the Lord. We would get a baby when He was ready." Then they made contact with an agency whose response was much more encouraging. This agency differed from more traditional agencies. The mother (and father, if possible) are allowed to participate in choosing the adoptive parents. The birth parents choose the type of home they want their baby to have and list characteristics they prefer in their baby's new parents. They are allowed to choose from five carefully selected biographies of potential parents; then, if everyone agrees, they meet with the prospective parental couple.

biographies of potential parents; then, if everyone agrees, they meet with the prospective parental couple. Although Doug and Lori's prospects seemed much better after applying to the new agency, the adoption process was still not simple. First, they went through group therapy with other prospective adoptive couples. Then, in a comparatively short time, after their many years of disappointment, they were notified they had been selected by a young mother-to-be and her baby's father. The birth couple wanted to meet with Doug and Lori. Lori

Lon. "Many of our friends and relatives disapproved of our meeting with the birth parents," Doug says. They feared it might cause complications later. "But," Lori adds, "when you want a baby so badly, you'll do anything (that's legal) to get it."

The meeting, about three weeks before the impending birth, went very well. The birth parents seemed to match Doug and Lori perfectly. They liked the idea of the Miller's family business and of their being so family oriented. The mother, like Lori, is a musician. Both the father and Doug like baseball. Like Lori, the mother has strong Christian faith. Doug says, "Even in size, it seemed their characteristics mirrored our own." So, the crucial hurdle of the birth parents' approval of Doug and Lori as new parents of their baby had been cleared. But, it wasn't over yet.

That was when the waiting began--leading up to what Doug

That was when the waiting began-leading up to what boug refers to as their "roller coaster ride." Doug and Lori's lawyer called on Wednesday, January 11. "Doug." he said, " I have good news for you. I have a little boy for you. But," he continued, "we have to wait twenty-four hours before the out of the providence." before she can sign any papers." This precaution is routine, giving the birth mother time and space to be certain of her decision

Thursday morning the roller coaster started down. Another call came, telling Doug and Lori that their possibilities didn't look too good. The mother was holding her baby and appeared to be forming an attachment. Joug and Lori felt the disappointment that day of any parents losing their own child. To their surprise, friends rallied around in a way they never could have imagined. They sent cards and flowers, supporting Doug and Lori all way. "They hugged me with tears in their eyes. It seemed like all of Mentone knew about it, "remembers Lori, still expressing awe. "They went through it with us."

Then Friday morning, in the store, Doug answered the phone and it was the adoption agency. Having prepared himself for the worst, he advised Lori to pick up the phone downstairs. He didn't want her to receive bad news in front of customers.

But the roller coaster was on the upswing again! It wasn't bad news! The birth parents had signed adoption papers. Everything was legal. They met the birth parents once again that afternoon, in the hospital, where they received their baby boy.

Lori notes, the girls who had worked with them at the adoption agency were ecstatic. They had also been disappointed the day before when indications were that the mother might keep the baby.

"He was very young when we got him," Lori says. "We have a bond with him as strong as a biological one. He seems like our own." Like many other new fathers, Doug adds, "He was the first newborn I ever held."

After having been married eight years without children. Justin's arrival completely changed Doug and Lori's lives. They experienced the same tiring sleepless nights and stresses of a new baby's presence that all new parents do.

Doug recalls with humor his first evening taking care of Justin. Lori had gone, as usual, to choir practice on Justin's first Thursday night there. Although Doug's parents, Jim and Lois Miller, were there looking on, Doug had to do his first diaper change "on his own." "I went through ten or fifteen Baby Wipes," he laughs. "But, I soon got used to it." Doug and Lori, just like all parents, glow with pride when sees him as a musician. "He loves music now," she says. A tow headed blonde, with huge blue eyes, Justin "repeats everything he hears." He can tell the world his name is Justin and he lives in "'tone."

"He is loving, likes to be hugged, "Lori says. "I just hope we can raise him to be honest." Doug adds, "I hope we can show him the love our families showed us."

Both parents claim resemblance to Justin. "A lot of people say he looks just like a Smalley (Lori's maiden name) baby," she

The Millers feel they gained immeasurably from meeting Justin's birth parents. For one thing, they have complete medical histories on his birth families. Those could prove invaluable someday. There is comfort in having met them personally and knowing something of them firsthand. Through the adoption agency, Lori has communicated briefly with the birth parents. assuring them of Justin's health and progress. In return, they have received from the birth parents a note of appreciation, concern and love for Justin, as well as a brief update on the direction their lives have taken.

Doug and Lori intend to explain his situation fully to Justin by the time he's old enough to understand. But, for Justin, hearing the time he sold enough to understand. But, for Justin, hearing casual discussion of the circumstances surrounding his birth and relationship to the Millers as he grows up, it appears explanations will hardly be necessary. By age six, it will probably be as natural to him as his blond hair and blue eyes. If Justin wants to meet his birth parents, Doug and Lori intend to try to arrange it when he turns 18 years old. "Justin has changed our lives a lot," Lori says. Before he came

we had the time to do the things we wanted to do. Now, I can't imagine life without him." Doug and Lori would unhesitatingly

Imagine life without limit. Doug and Lon would undestantingly encourage other childless young couples to adopt. Doug and Lori are still awed by the outpouring of love and concern shown to them by the whole Mentone community. From the first day everyone, family and friends, were thrilled with him. Justin is truly the baby everyone wanted!

The Akron-Mentone News - November 21, 1990 Who's Who In Akron

These are just a few of the many wood carvings Raymond Hoover has produced in the last two years.

Raymond Hoover Prolific Wood Carver

by Tonia Weller

Akron resident, Raymond Hoover has only been carving for two years, but you'd never guess that by viewing his many projects.

He was watching Channel 34 one day and saw a man carving a horse. Raymond decided he'd like to try something like that. However, he didn't stop with a single horse. Raymond's first project was a 20 mule team pulling a wagon, that is, in all, about four feet long.

Tour feel long. Most of Raymond's carvings are made from bass wood which is a light, soft wood and easy to carve. They frequently rest on walnut bases. Raymond gets most of his wood from sample scrap at Pike Lumber Company, where he worked for 12 years before being disabled with emphysema. Raymond begins a carving by gluing and clamping several boards together to form a block. The design is than sketched on all sides of the block Raymond uses a band saw to cut the block all sides of the block. Raymond uses a band saw to cut the block into roughly the shape he needs. Then he takes his knives, and sometimes a chisel, and carves the rough shape into buffalo, deer, mule, sheep, bears or maybe even a huminingbird. The finished shape is then sanded with two or three different grades of sandpaper

Raymond uses a wood burner, similar to a soldering iron, for burning details into the wood. He has used this technique on the feathers of an eagle, ducks and hummingbirds and the results are remarkably life-like.

Some of the carvings are painted using a water-based acrylic

Some of the carvings are painted using a water-based actylic paint, Raymond never uses spray paint because it runs. His carving of a Budweiser wagon pulled by a team of eight Clydesdale horses is extremely detailed. The horse shoes are carved separately and painted silver. The horses' leather harnesses are cut from deerskin. Raymond has been offered $2000 for this carving which is approximately three and a half feet long. The Clydesdale team and the 20 mule team each took

The Clydesdale team and the 20 mule team each took Raymond an entire summer to complete. He does most of his carving outside under a shade tree in his back yard. The project Raymond is working on now, was inspired by a bronze statue he saw on television. By putting the TV on pause, Raymond was able to sketch the design. This carving moves with the help of springs and clock works. A long haired fairy or nymph rises from the wooden base and her large butterfly wings unfold. Raymond intends to use bronze paint for the body and the wings will be painted like a monarch butterfly. While most of Raymond's carvings are done for his own enjoyment, he has made a few pieces for sale. Family members have been given several carvings. He made a cowboy for his brother's wife and another brother was given a fish with scales and other details burned into the wood. In the two years that Raymond has been carving, he has made over two dozen workable pliers from single pieces of wood as gifts for friends. Future projects include a unicorn carved from walnut for his son. Raymond is about half finished caring a 14 foot chain from a single piece of wood. He recently demonstrated this project at the craft show at the United Methodist Church.

Raymond gets some of his ideas and plans from a carving magazine called "Chip Chats" which he subscribes to. While most of his carvings are three dimensional, Raymond also uses a method called chip are into ambient and and a so uses a method called chip carving to produce flatter plaques with raised designs. One, he is just completing, features calla lilies with a rope border and two hummingbirds. Raymond and his wife, Lois Gene, have two sons, Fred and

David, and four grandchildren. Before moving to their home southwest of Akron, 12 years ago, the Hoovers farmed just south of the county line in Miami County.

of the county line in Miami County. Raymond especially enjoys sharing his carved gifts with his brothers and sisters, because as children they were separated. His mother died a few days after his youngest brothers was bom and the seven children were placed in orphanages. Five went to Marion Children's Home and two went to Knightstown. The children became separated and didn't know of each others where abouts until they were adults. On April 6, 1986, all but one sister, who was unable to attend, met at Raymond's house for a family reunion. It was the first time they had been together since family reunion. It was the first time they had been together since entering the orphanages as children.

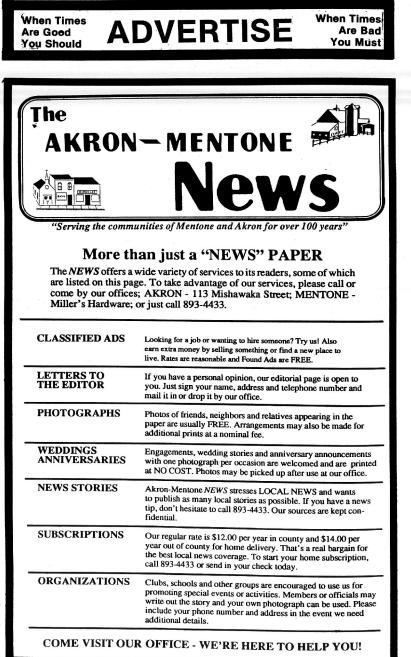

A symbol has several carvings, including a majestic, two foot tall eagle caught in mid take-off, on display in the Barnhart Gallery at the Fulton County Historical Society Museum. The museum is located north of Rochester on U.S. 31 and the items will be on display through December.

Raymond spends most of his spare time carving. According to Lois Gene, "He works at it day and night." "Carving takes quite a bit of time," says Raymond. "I'll bet each link of the wooden chain takes me 20 minutes to cut." And there are a lot of links in 14 feet.

Mentone Business of the Week

Wayne Bowser demonstrates men's cologne to guest Kenny Romine (Esther was there, too!) at the Avon Christmas open house he and Phyllis held last Saturday in their home. Two other Avon dealer, Helen Good and Jean Pritchard, have also served the Mentone community faithfully for many years.

Avon Calling

by Leafy Hudson

"Ding-dong, Avon calling", has been the familiar greeting of the Avon lady for many years. But, for many ladies this past year in Mentone, that greeting has heralded the arrival of their Avon man, Wayne Bowser.

Wayne took the business over in October, 1989, from his wife, Phyllis, who began her career as an Avon lady in 1979. He works about forty hours during each two-week campaign, serving 75 to 100 customers.

"I really like the business," Wayne says. "It gives me a

"I really like the business," Wayne says. "It gives me a purpose to live again--a reason to get up in the morning. I've always been in sales, and I like meeting old customers and making new ones." His territory covers about 200 homes. Phyllis still helps with the business. She still sees a few of her old customers and when the merchandise arrives--they both say that's exciting to them--they can't wait to see it all--"just like Christmas." She and Wayne form an assembly line to package the orders and arrange them bu routes

Christmas." She and Wayne form an assembly line to package the orders and arrange them by routes. Wayne and Phyllis (Lemler) are both Mentone natives. After graduation from Mentone High School in 1942, he expanded his part-time job at Clark's Store on the south side of Main Street to full-time until he went into the U.S. Army. Phyllis tells about the circumstances of Wayne's induction into the Army. In those days there was mail delivery every day, including Christmas. Christmas moming, 1942, Wayne received his "greetings" from Uncle Sam, his draft notice. He unselfishly waited until evening, after everyone had enjoyed a carefree holiday, to tell his family he was leaving soon. Wayne took medical training at O'Reilly General Hospital, a Wayne took medical training at O'Reilly General Hospital, a military hospital in Springfield, Missouri, and then spent most of World War II in the Pacific area. One of his experiences was participation in the invasion of the Marshall Islands.

When the war ended, Wayne was offered the opportunity to remain in the Army and attend college and medical school, but that would have required a commitment of two years in the Army beyond the completion of his training, and Wayne was ready to come home. He was honorably discharged December 17, 1945.

Phyllis, meanwhile, had graduated from high school in 1944. Wayne says, "When I hit the States, I called Phyllis and we set a wedding date. She had from December 17th to December 30th wedding date. Sne nad from December 17th to December 30th to mail out invitations and make arrangements." In spite of the short notice, Wayne and Phyllis had a church wedding conducted by her grandfather, the Reverend Silas M. Hill and her uncle, Dr. John Knecht. "Wa plannad to take a month's honourmoon", they recell

We planned to take a month's honeymoon", they recall, chuckling. Starting it in Fort Wayne, they were icebound by an ice storm for three days. Then they went to Kentucky, where they visited one of Wayne's Army buddies. At the end of six days, Wayne wanted to see just one place--Mentone. So they turned around and came home!

One memory of those days is the lack of adequate housing for the many young couples like Wayne and Phyllis after the war. He remembers that members of the Town Board considered buying barracks from Camp Atterbury to move to Mentone for veteran's apartments, but for some reason, that didn't work out. So, in the summer of 1946, Wayne and Phyllis built the house on N. Tucker Street that is still their home. At that time, so soon after the war, building materials were still scarce and Wayne says he had to scour the country to find the necessities to build the house.

Following high school graduation, Phyllis had worked at Lemler's Market on the north side of Main Street, the grocery store owned and operated by her parents, Fred and Lois Lemler. Settled in back home, Wayne started work at Lemler's too. He stayed there 32 years. When Fred and Lois retired, Wayne and Phullie bought the store During them and the store of Phyllis bought the store. During those years, they raised three children, Vicki (Mrs. Charles Swihart), Debie (Mrs. Terry Reed), and Fred (married to the former Lana Tinkey).

Finally, like so many small businesses, the day came when they had to make the difficult decision to close the store. April 1979, was the closing date for Mentone's last uptown grocery store, Lemler's Market.

At that point, Wayne went to a supervisory job at Tip-E-Pak, in Burket, and Phyllis began selling Avon. When Tip-E-Pak moved to Illinois in 1982, Wayne went to work at Midwest Spring in Mentone.

Phyllis, in the meantime, still keeping her Avon route, started helping nut interacting surface a stroker's aide at Mentone Elementary School. She worked there intermittently as needed and also spent a year working at Bell Memorial Library. In July, 1987, Wayne suffered a stroke, an event that changed their lives forever. After many months of recuperation and therapy, he was able to function on his own again, but returning

"Wayne's never had time for hobbies," Phyllis says. "That was part of his problem." But, during recovery from this illness, he started feeding the birds in their back yard. Now they both enjoy watching the many birds that visit their bird feeders. They but out about 100 pounds of feed each month. It has become an interesting hobby and good therapy for Wayne. When school started last year, Phyllis had the opportunity to return to an aide position at grade school. But, combining that with her Avon sales would keep her very busy. It was then Wayne said, "Let me give it a try," and soon took over the business himself business himself.

He says their customers have accepted him very well. Phyllis "Actually, they thought it was great," she says. "Many already knew him and were some of those who had prayed for us through his illness.

Wayne and Phyllis have both won awards for their Avon work. In 1980, Phyllis won a never to be forgotten "Fantasy Trip" to Monte Carlo. They had two two-day side trips to France and Italy. But, the highlight of the trip was dinner in the Spartan Club with Princess Grace. They were just about ten feet from her. She appeared in a shimmery gold fitted dress shot through with colored threads, with her hair up in her usual style. Wayne and Phyllis say she was a truly beautiful and gracious woman. At the end of the banquet, Phyllis was presented an elegant scarf designed and signed by Princess Grace designed and signed by Princess Grace. Other Avon honors include a silver figurine for sales increase and a collection of Mrs. Albee Awards, for sales, delicate figurines of graceful ladies in period clothes. Phyllis has won nine of these and Wayne recently won one for his first year with Avon

Wayne and Phyllis have done some other exciting traveling. In the 1970's, Wayne won a trip to the Bahamas through grocery sales. They laugh as they recall that trip. The beach was closed sales. They laugh as they recall that trip. The beach was closed to swimming because of a temporary predator and the hotel pool was unheated. There they were in the Bahamas, unable to swim! But they had a good time, anyway. In 1981, they spent two weeks visiting daughter Debie Reed and her family in Frankfort, Germany. They saw many sights around Frankfort, but the most memorable, and depressing, was a tour of Dachau, one of Hitler's first concentration camps. It was quite a history lesson!

Through the years, the Baptist Church has been important in the Bowsers' lives. Wayne has served various times on the Board of Trustees. He is active in the Mentone Lions Club, Board of Trustees. He is active in the Mentone Lions Cuto, belongs to the Masonic Lodge, and is Past Patron of Eastern Star. Phyllis is Past Matron of Eastern Star, a long-time member of the Jolly Janes and the Be About Missionary Society. A favorite hobby is collecting bells; she has over 100. She enjoys knitting and crocheting, and they both enjoy their grandchildren very much.

Their family has grown from three children to a total of eighteen, including one great grandchild.

Although Phyllis regrets the passing of many activities, such as twice-weekly free show, and the variety of stores that used to make Mentone a lively place, she agrees with Wayne that it is still a good place to raise children. The three good churches in town, new sewage system and new homes being built east of town are indications of a town that is keeping alive and well in these changing times. Wayne and Phyllis will celebrate their forty-fifth wedding anniversary December 30th. "We've worked together all these years," Phyllis says. "All in all it's been an eventful life!"

Recycling For Children For many youngsters today, the three R's often mean Reduce, Re-cycle, Reuse. Why?

It's never too soon to recycle.

When today's five-year-olds are 25, over half of America's 9,300 landfills may be closed. When these same youngsters are only 15, the U.S. may be producing almost 200 million tons of garbage a year, more than 40 tons more than Americans currently produce. The volume of U.S. garbage is up 80 percent since 1960. By 2000, it's expected to rise another 20 percent. Yet we currently recycle only about Student of the Week was B. J. ten percent of our trash. We incinerate another ten percent, but with potentially serious consequences to the atmosphere.

Children can be taught to recycle from a very young age, but to be-come committed recyclers, they need to understand that recycling in-cludes not only separation and col-lection of discarded objects, but also reuse because, until an object is returned to the marketplace and reused, recycling really has not occurred.

The Akron-Mentone News - November 21, 1990 Scenes Around Town

by Leafy Hudson

I just found out the little gremlin who put Darrell King's picture in last week's paper (we can't figure out who did it!) added four years to his age. He's just a kid of 52! This has been a big time for the King's and their family. Kathleen had the a big time for the King's and the family. Kannech had the opportunity to slip home for a weekend recently. She got to watch brother Herb coach a football game and enjoy seeing Herb and Nancy's little Jordan. Herb's North Putnam team is still in the state playoffs as of this writing, down to the final four. He could be playing in the Hoosier Dome in Indy the day CG ill writing the state player of the sta of Phil's wedding rehearsal in Cleveland, Ohio. What wonderful problems!

Two Romine families--Kenny and Esther and Gerald and Harriet-recently returned from an enjoyable trip to Pennsylvania. They visited with Denton and Harriet Abbey and attended the Penn State-Syracuse football game.

June Reed called the other day for David and Lynn's address for the Mentone War Mothers. They are getting ready to send Christmas checks to Mentone's service men and women. They always remember each one's birthday, too. David says the War Mothers can never know how much it means to receive their testimony of care and concern from home.

Which reminds me. Did you notice how many flags flew and how many beautiful ceremonies were held to commemorate Now many beautiful certennoines were next to committee the vertice of the vertice to remember those sad times.

Where's the Turkey

Burket third graders in Mar-cia Ousley's class are writing creative stories. Here 'they respond to "Where's the Turkey?"

You are at Aunt Gertie's house for Thanksgiving dinner. Twenty of your hungry relatives sit around the table. Aunt Gertie lifts the fancy silver platter but there's no turkey! What happened to the turkey? Here are several responses.

Oh, no the turkey is miss-ing! All the kids start yelling," We want turkey! We want turkey!" The smell of the turkey was coming from the dog house. They went out to check but all that was left was the turkey bones. Luckily Aunt Gertie had baked another one.

Lindsay Stephens

Oops my saber tooth tiger must have eaten the turkey because you can see it on his face. I told him not to do that again. For Thanksgiving we had dessert.

Billy Jacobs

Aunt Gertie ran into the room. Then she tried to think of something. So she said it burned. They didn't belive her. One thought she wanted it for herself. I imagine she didn't want to share.

Ginger Ervin Fe Fe and I will look for the turkey. First we looked upsters. Second we looked downsters. Next we went outside and checked out the barn. We saw our cat and dog going to eat the turkey. We yelled "No!" So we took the turkey in washed it off and had a Happy Washeu n one Thansgiving. Naomi Meredith

She goes in the other room. Nothing there. Her husbin said, When is it time to eat? In a cuple hours if you don't help me find the turkey. What do you mean? Someone took it. Not really her husbin said, I have the turkey. Well Gee whiz. Dig in folks! Russell Rhamev

Everybody thot it was a trick. Since Todd and Lindsay just got marred. They thot it was some kind of wedding trick. Sam burped. We all looked at him funny. Before he came he had a large pep-perroney pizza. Derek said I guess we'll just have to have steak. Aunt Gertie said, not a chanse. Later on they found out that Francene ate the turkey. Gross!

Sarah McSherry

My mom thought Uncle George ate the turkey. But I knew the turkey grew legs and walked away. So we had to have frog legs. I hate frog legs so I ate mash potatoes and com.

Jamie Baker All the children started crying. So did Aunt Gertie. over for the turkey, Rachel screamed "Snake." The snake went out the back door. Amanda thought the snake ate the turkey. They ordered out for pizza. All the children liked that. Abby Lewis Everyone was there. It was

A break in the main line from Claypool's water tower left residents without water for seven and a half hours on Sunday. The ten-inch long, half-inch wide break was too large to patch and required the fitting of a new length of pipe. It is believed there was damage to the line at the time of installa-tion in 1968.

Town Superintendent, Gene Warner, who is completing schooling for his certification, was assisted in the repair by Milford town Superintendent, Dallas Winchester. The water caused damage on the surface, in addition to at least one road washing out under ground.

Because of the danger of a cave-in, Graceland Avenue will be closed until repairs can be made.

Angie's Angels Daycare

By Tonia Weller

Angie's Angels Daycare got its start during tough times for owner Angela Conner, but it has turned out to be a blessing in disguise. In 1981, due to a company redistricting, Angie's husband, Rod, lost his job with Farm Bureau and along with it, his company car. The previous spring, Angie had quit her job as a kindergarten aide to help on the Conner farm, on the Fort Wayne Road. With both of them out of work, money was tight. Angie placed an ad in the Shopping Guide and began babysitting to help make ends meet. She began with two children. In the past nine years, the business has grown to be a full scale licensed daycare center and the Conners have moved from the licensed daycare center and the Conners have moved from the country to Cherry Street in Akron. At the present time, Angie cares for seven children full-time and eight children on a part-time basis. The children range in age from three months through the second grade.

the second grade. Angie enjoys being able to work at home and feels daycare is a "great profession." She loves "her kids" and gets very attached to them. When the time came that one little girl was leaving for the last time, Angie went out on the back porch and cried and cried. Angie keeps a scrapbook with pictures of all the children she's cared for, about 200 in all, and cards, letters and drawings they've given her. With the same pride that grandmothers carry a "brag book". Angie's purse contains a "brag book" with pictures of "her kids". While she does not officially nu a pre-school. Angie's form

There are charts on the wall that show each child's progress in learning to count, recognize their ABC's, know the days of the week, tie their shoes, name the colors, print their name, know their address and phone numbers and other basic skills. When a child masters a skill, they get a festive sticker to put beside their name. The children also memorize well know Scriptures.

name. The children also memorize well know scriptures. Television doesn't have much of a place at Angie's Angels. Although the children occasionally watch it during snack time, Angie feels it is much better for the children to "learn to play together and use their imagination." Angie gets books and movies from the library for the children to watch.

With permission from their parents, Angie sometimes, takes the children to the park. Summer brings a special treat. The children get to go swimming a couple times a week in the pool belonging to Rod's parents, Harold and Jean Conner. Recently the children joined hands and walked, in two's to Jack Miller's house to view his model railroad collection. The children are served a hot, well-balanced meal everyday.

The children are served a hot, well-balanced meal everyday. Not surprisingly, their favorite meal is hot dogs, but because of the danger of choking, Angie cuts the hot dogs in small pieces and makes a casserole with macaroni and cheese. A vegetable and apple sauce complete this lunch. Angie says the kids are good eaters and she doesn't have much of a problem with finicky appetites. The rule is that you must clean your plate in order to get treats and the homemade cookies provide quite an incentive. Every Monday, Angie bakes fresh, wholesome, homemade Snickerdoodles, peanut butter or, everyone's favorite, chocolate chip cookies. Other healthy snacks include popcom or fruit.

popcom or fruit. Birthdays always mean a party at Angie's. There are cupcakes and balloons for everyone and a present for the birthday child. Due to the varying working hours of the parents, schedules must be flexible. Basically, the morning in filled with playtime and learning, then lunch, which is followed by nap time. "We have quiet time every afternoon. Angie needs it!" she laughs. After the children wake up they are given a snack. Angie usually tries to give the younger children their snack before the older ones arrive from school. Then there is more play and learning time until the parents arrive to pick them up. Angie's day runs from 5:30 in the morning until 5:00 or 5:30 p.m. Not surprisingly, Angie isn't interested in babysitting p.m. Not surprisingly, Angre isn't interested in babysitting evenings or weekends. When Angre first starts caring for a child, she explains her rules to parents. While she will bend for work schedules, she has to be firm about drop-off and pick-up times. "I love what I do, but it's also a job," Angre explains. "I think most parents understand that I just want to be treated with the same respect they are, where they work." Angre feels the key to a good plationchip between carecipers and parents is communication relationship between caregivers and parents is communication. "Everybody needs to be honest and open with each other. If been problem, just talk to your babysitter and let her know your desires." Angie feels she is very lucky. She says "her kids" parents are "the cream of the crop. They are all very considerate." Most all of them let her know if they'll be a little considerate." Most all of them let ner know if they it be a little late or call when a child won't be coming. The only disadvantage Angie could think of concerning her profession was the enormous pressure of being responsible for the safety and well-being of so many children. Angie always makes sure she has a telephone number where she can reach parents at any time. During the cold and flu season, Angie must sometimes keep track of several kids' medication schedules at once. She, herself track of several kids' medication schedules at once. She, herself, seems to have become almost immune to the many colds the kids get, having been sick only three days in the last nine years. Angie also assists parents with potty training, which she says "takes everybody's help." At one time, Angie cared for six children in diapers at one time. Angie was apprehensive, at first, about beginning the procedure to obtain her state daycare license, but is now very led she did. Both Agrie and Bod had to sign affidavits stating glad she did. Both Angie and Rod had to sign affidavits stating they had no arrests or history of child abuse. The home was inspected by a case worker from the Fulton County Welfare Department and by the Fire Marshall. She will have had her license two years in March.

Last summer, with the help of "her kids" and their parents, Angie's Angels entered a float in the Akron 4th of July parade and won second prize. She plans to repeat this project, next years.

Angie and Rod, who has successfully weathered the career crisis and is now a supervisor at Pike Lumber, have two daughters. Alisha, 14, lives at home and Ashley, 19, married Matt Sutter this fall and lives in North Manchester. "I have to give the girls a lot of credit," says Angie. "If it hadn't been for their help, I'd have never managed." She also stresses how loving and helpful Rod has been. "In this business, you have to have a very understanding husband." The Conners attend Sweetwater Assembly of God in North Manchester and Rod is on the Town Council. Both Angie and Rod were raised in the Akron area, although Angie's parents, Ray and Susie Riley, now live in Kokomo. When Angie's own daughters were small, they were cared for by Phyllis Thompson and Carolyn Tilden, who Angie says were "wonderful babysitters." Angie says it wasn't until she started babysitting herself the she realized just "how important their roles were in my children's lives."

important their roles were in my children's lives." Angie was recently honored by being asked to serve as guardian for a family whose children she babysits for. This attests to the confidence parents have in Angie's caregiving abilities Watching Angie interact with "her kids" is a very uplifting experience. Her pretty face radiates warmth and caring as she attends to their needs and the love the children feel for her is written all over their cherubic faces. It's easy to understand why they're called Angie's Angels.

Profile of Rita

by Leafy Hudson

Thirty-two years ago, Rita Price (Simpson), a high school junior from Bourbon, popped into WRSW Radio Station in Warsaw and requested, an opportunity to try her luck in her chosen career, broadcasting. Evidently impressed with this plucky teenager, the decision makers at WRSW gave her a chance, offering her a half-hour at 1:00 on Saturdays for a variety show.

Since then, Rita's smooth and easy voice has become familiar to almost everyone within the WRSW listening area. She has been an established regular to WRSW audiences through the years, while juggling the many other hats of wife, homemaker, mother, businesswoman and community leader. For that first summer radio show, Rita was given the choice of

For that first summer ratio show, Rea was given the choice of performing as an amateur or as a professional. As a professional, she would have to sell advertising to finance her show. That is what she chose to do. Broadcasting in those days from a live studio, Rita, who has an exceptional singing voice, sang six to seven songs, usually show tunes or pop tunes, talking a little about each song. She often included a hymn in her program. The next summer, Rita's air time was expanded to Wednesdays and Thursdays, and she expanded her advertising area to Bourbon and Etna Green. Her responsibilities expanded, too, as she became a disc jockey for some of her programs. By the third summer, she had become a "fixture" at WRSW and had sponsors from as far away as Nappanee. sponsors from as far away as Nappanee.

sponsors from as far away as Nappanee. Well know in the area by 1970, that year Rita started going along to sporting events to do interviews or "color work." Then, in 1976, when the Warsaw Girl's Basketball Team went to the state finals, Rita did the play-by-play announcing. Today, Rita does the "Golden Oldies Show" which has delighted nostalgia buffs for years, and she regularly announces ballgames for both boys and oils sport everything ready to go." Rita announces ball games primarily for Tippecanoe Valley, Triton and Northwood. She especially enjoys the personal contact, through announcing ballgames, with players and their parents. "And," she adds with a laugh, "I've done it so many years, a lot of the original players are parents of players now!" Rita has led a busy life in addition to her demanding radio schedule.

After all these years, the structure of her shows remains the same. She sells her own advertising for every show and writes her own ad copy. She says "it takes a lot of leg work to get everything ready to go.

While SIII a student in Bourbon, her high school principal introduced her to his brother-in-law, Jack Simpson, of Plymouth. Rita grins as she admits her first impression of Jack was one of arrogance in the tradition of "the Fonz." However, they began dating right away and were married in 1970.

The Akron-Mentone News - November 28, 1990

During those early years, Rita and Jack lived in Plymouth. Rita was invited to sing at a Plymouth restaurant, The Hayloft, and soon was busy every weekend singing there, as well as in private clubs in the South Bend and Elkhart areas. She often sang with John Keck, of Plymouth, who plays guitar and banjo, and other bands. At one point she was offered the Midwestern Holiday Inn Circuit. It would have been good pay, she says, but she turned it down because she would have been gone too much. Finally, she made the decision to give up professional singing altogether, because it became too time-consuming, taking her away from her family.

In 1978, while calling at King Furniture and Carpet, Darrell King mentioned to Rita that he was considering selling the store. That evening she told Jack she "would like to have it." Jack was agreeable, so they made the necessary inquiries and, within a week, they owned a furniture store! The store, now Valley Furnishings, one and one half blocks east of where it started out, is still a thriving business on Mentone's Main Street.

Rita and Jack also opened two other stores, Lazy Jack's, one in both Mentone and Warsaw, but after seven years, decide to focus all their time and energies on the furniture store. They closed the Lazy Jack stores, at the same time expanding the carpet department in Valley Furnishing. "When we opened the store," Rita says, "we decided we would bend over backward to give good service. We are price competitive and we draw customers from many surrounding communities." Rita describes their business as "basically a 'Mom and Pop' store." It requires many hours--many evenings--lots of hard work. But they enjoy it. "The thing I like about it is the small town atmosphere," Rita says. "We never experience the kind of problems city businesses do. There's no problem getting help to unload or getting someone to go on deliveries. Our city contemporaries say they would never have that happen. I think that's one reason people from away like to come here." Rita and Jack moved to Mentone when they bought the store in 1978. They moved on to Warsaw for three years, but soon came back to Mentone. She says she liked the Mentone community from the very beginning. She found people here open and established close friendships here while still living in Plymouth.

Rita, who has emceed programs at the Mentone Egg Festival for many years, is active in community affairs. The new president of the Mentone Chamber of Commerce, she says her primary goal is to get young people involved, so they can take over when their tum comes.

"Church has always been very important in my life," Rita says. A member of the Mentone United Methodist Church, her beautiful voice blends in song with other members of the United Methodist Choir on Sunday mornings.

Methodist Choir on Sunday mornings. Rita and Jake are the parents of three daughters, of whom they are very proud. Tracey will be leaving soon to spend a year on the mission field in Lima, Peru. Rita says Tracey, a Grace College graduate, has always had a strong commitment to missionary work. A beautiful singer like her mother, she has already spent some time in Hondouras, Panama and Peru, where her ministry is primarily in music. She is also adept at signing. Kelly, a graduate of Ball State, married pro-athlete Bernie Doering last September and lives in Columbus, Ohio, where she undered meansfully with a coalition of people including Bob where he swam six miles, bicycled eighty miles and ran twentysix miles.

Their thrid daughter, Dana, graduated in 1985 from Tippecanoe Valley High School and currently attends IUSB, where she is studying environmental protection.

Citing Mentone's many service businesses, Rita predicts Mentone's future as a popular "bedroom community" for Warsaw and Rochester. "We're a welcome alternative to the bigger communities," she says. "Mentone is very caring and responsive to people's needs. A lot of people come here for services from out of town We have a lot to offer them."

Janice, Jim and Janell Felix spent a couple of hours with us the other weekend while visiting Jan's Mom, Jeanette Mollenhour. Jan told us my mention of Mr. Krathwohl in the News October 17 article on Ruth Culum evoked pleasant memories. When Jan was a little girl, the Krathwohls were their memories. When Jan was a little girl, the Krathwohls were their neighbors on N. Tucker Street, living in the house occupied by Jim and Tracey Moore now. Jan remembers running errands for Mrs. Krathwohl and spending hours in conversation with her. Jan says she often admired a lovely "ladies desk" of Mrs. Krathwohl's, and, because she liked it so much, Mrs. Krathwohl promised it to her "someday." To Jan's surprise, many years later, after Mrs. Krathwohl's death, her heirs presented the desk to Jan. It's in use today in the Felix's Anderson home.

Jerry and I so looked forward to babysitting with Bud (Jerry, Jr.) and Jill's children when they moved back to this area from Michigan a few months ago. Well, we haven't done too much babysitting yet, but the other weekend we dogsat with their playful silver haired Chappy. For two stodgy old people who haven't had pet responsibilities in a long time, it was an interesting experience. But Chappy behaved very well and seems to like to come to our house. Hmmm--maybe we should see a dog-then again. get a dog--then again.

Gift of Knowledge

How can parents turn their "TV generation" kids into eager students and successful learners? It's no secret that, like most Americans-twice as many of us watch TV as read a book—many of today's youngsters spend far too many hours in front of the TV screen. They're constantly assaulted with many other visual images as well— flashy ads movies loces and nicflashy ads, movies, logos and pic-tures on T-shirts and other clothing. Small wonder, then, the act of reading, without all that visual stimuli, seems boring in comparistimuli, seems boring in compari-son. Consequently, many experts feel visual images are needed to lure youngsters back to learning—we have to make learning as enticing and stimulating as the images youngsters see every day in the world around them. Fortunately, there are some exciting new ways to make reading and studying more enjoyable for children. One of these is a reference book that's quite a a reference book that's quite a change from the dry tomes of the past. The third edition of the acclaimed Random House Encyclopedia brings learning to life for youngsters and parents who want to be involved with their children's education. Its 11.325 color illustrations, graphs, charts and photos are so attractive, clear, and convey so much knowl-edge that they may turn even the most reluctant students on to learning. The new reference book takes its cue from the latest education theocue from the latest education theo-ries, which hold that learning in context rather than just presenting facts for memorization, makes edu-cation far more fun. For instance, trying to memorize when the Berlin Wall came down is easier and far more memorable when studying it Wall came down is easier and far more memorable when studying it in the larger context of all the recent upheavals in Eastern Europe. Therefore, most of the new encyclo-pedia is arranged thematically in a colorful Colorpedia, each subject relating to that which precedes and follows it. In the Colorpedia, read-ers find the world of knowledge pre-sented the way the mind naturally recalls it.—ideas, facts, concepts and visual images linked and associ-tated subjects in other sections of the encyclopedia. This up-to-date, 3-million-word all-income reference book has a 25,000 entry A-to-Z references upica, a 132-page World Atlas and a 52-page Time Chart tracing the important events and developments in all areas of human culture from 4,000 B.C. to the present. It's available at local bookstores for holiday eith giving.

PULL OVER The One That Follows

It's hard to keep a good investment down. Case in point: The Rate Riser Certificate of Deposit. It offers everything you'd expect from a traditional CD. Safety, security and a guaranteed return. With one extra advantage. Namely, the one-time opportunity to raise the interest rate should rates go up during the term of your CD. That means you can take advantage of the higher rate that comes with a longer term in-

Blue Flame Akron Gagnon Chevrolet Akron LET LOVE ADORN YOUR HOME WITH HOLIDAY HAPPINESS Your favorite stores are all a-glitter with lights, ornaments, tinsel, candles, wreaths and gift wrappings. However, these seasonal adornments may not put you in a gala holiday mood, and if so, assuming that you have no major problems or sorrows, something must be wrong. Have you quarreled recently with a relative or friend? Are you normally impatient with people? Then it's time to get rid of these negative tendencies. Mend that quarrel, no matter whose fault it was. Let your House of Worship put some love and kindness in your heart before you plug in the Christmas lights or ignite the Chanukah candles. Then your home and your life will be much brighter during the upcoming holidays, as well as at all other times of the year.
