Petition to recover increased costs

Northern Indiana Public Service Company recently petitioned the Public Service Commission of Indiana to allow the utility to pass on $365,626 in higher costs for gas purchased from one of its five suppliers, Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Company.

The purchased gas adjustment, if approved as filed, would increase costs for an average NIPSCO residential customer using 147,600 cubic feet of gas a year for homeheating and other purposes 29 cents a year or about 2-1/2 cents a month beginning in November.

An average NIPSCO residential customer using 39,800 cubic feet of natural gas for purposes other than homeheating would realize an increase of 9 cents a year or less than 1 cent a month.

The purchased gas adjustment is the thirteenth filed by NIPSCO this year. Eight have been increases and five have been decreases or reductions of previously announced increases. An incremental pricing reallocation which reduced costs to residential and other customers was also filed in April and was put into effect in June.

The total effect of all purchased gas adjustments so far this year on the average NIPSCO customer using 147,600 cubic feet of gas for homeheating and other purposes is an increase of $40.22—from $524.21 on January 1, 1981, to $564.43 as of November 1, 1981, upon approval of this petition.

An average NIPSCO customer using 39,800 cubic feet of natural gas for purposes other than homeheating will experience an increase of $10.85—from $169.29 on January 1, 1981, to $180.14 as of November 1, 1981, upon approval of this application.

Adjustments in gas rates to NIPSCO customers, usually upward but sometimes downward, have occurred and will continue to occur as rates from NIPSCO's pipeline suppliers change, as they have and will, under the provisions of the Natural Gas Policy Act and after approval of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

NIPSCO explained that it does not realize one cent of profit from purchased gas adjustments. The money, the company said, goes directly to suppliers to pay for the increased cost of natural gas delivered to the utility.

The company also said that in spite of these rising costs, natural gas continues to be the least expensive fuel for homeheating in northern Indiana.

Residential gas light restrictions lifted

The cut-off of gas service to existing outdoor residential gas lights, scheduled for January 1, 1982, has been lifted as a result of recent amendments to the Power Plant and Industrial Fuel Use Act.

The amendments will permit the continued use of natural gas for outdoor lighting by those residential customers whose gas lights were in service on Nov. 9, 1978. The prohibition on the installation of any new residential gas lights, as well as the use of natural gas for commercial, industrial and municipal outdoor gas lighting will remain in effect.

"We have been informed by the Public Service Commission of Indiana that it expects to change its Rules accordingly and wish to bring this change to the attention of our customers so they can avoid the unnecessary removal of existing residential gas lights or the need to file an application for exemption from the rules," a spokesman for Northern Indiana Public Service Company said.

The original ban on the use of natural gas for residential outdoor lighting resulted from federal legislation enacted in 1978. The amendment represents recognition by the federal government of a greatly improved natural gas supply outlook.

NIPSCO Energy #2 Report

Indiana Homeowners are Doing a Pretty Good Job of Saving Energy, but...

We Can Do More!

So said a recent report issued by the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, a group of energy-minded congressmen who sponsored a study to determine this area's energy costs and consumption relative to the rest of the country. "Even though Indiana energy prices are below the national average according to the study," Hoosiers are spending more for gas and electric energy than other parts of the country.

The typical Hoosier spent substantially more on heating, air conditioning and lighting last year than did residents in most other states, with the exception of the New England area and residents living in Wisconsin.

The study indicated that these higher household costs "were due more to higher consumption levels than to prices, since the average cost per unit of heat in Indiana was 3 percent below the national average."

This means we can do better here in Indiana to conserve energy and hold down rising utility costs.

Here are the Four Basic Ways to Conserve:
1 Weatherproof your home; 2 Maintain your heat-

NIPSCO's Energy Savings Program

Home Energy Audits are available through the Indiana Residential Conservation Service (IRCS) Program. State-certified and specially-trained auditors make a thorough check of your home and recommend proven ways to weatherproof your home.

Refer to the Residential Conservation Service Program booklet mailed to your home earlier this year or contact your local NIPSCO customer service office.

Free Energy Savings Booklet—We also have available at your request a popular booklet of important energy savings suggestions—"99 Ways To Conserve Energy." Just ask for it at your local NIPSCO customer service office or write, 99 Ways, NIPSCO Marketing Communications Department, 5265 Hohman Avenue, Hammond, Indiana 46320.

We can do better! Let's all use energy wisely!

Tough Choices

Opponents of President Reagan's budget and spending cuts, often losing their jobs or benefits, are currently forecasting dire consequences, social chaos, higher crime rates and various other pitfalls. They may be wrong.

The Reagan economic program must be given a chance to work—if it will. Nothing in recent years has stopped the slide of the U.S. dollar and economy and something new must be tried. Obviously, no one is totally happy about cutting aid funds, welfare, social security increases or many other federal programs.

But the truth is plain—Congress has in recent years voted to give away too much to too many and the treasury is going bankrupt if overspending is not brought under control. That would produce awful consequences for every American.

The Reagan Administration program is one depending on an expansion of private business and industry and the creation of more real jobs by this expansion. That would create a higher income in taxes collected for the treasury, and reduce the drain caused by charity and welfare programs.

If it works, that would be the best tonic for the nation, and it would enable the country to achieve a better defense, with a greater gross national product and lower individual taxes. This is a fine goal. But it won't be reached in a few months. Before judgment can be passed on the program, at least two years of effort and trial will be necessary.

The nation is already embarked on the Reagan economic program. Congress rightly should improve it and alter it, in the national interest. But partisan politics must not be the order of the day in attacking the effort. The issue and outcome are too serious, the consequences of failure too disturbing, to justify political plays to selfish interest and those losing benefits or make-work jobs. Some sacrifices are necessary in the short run.

REV. ERNEST LAWRENCE

A great, good man has left our area. He almost made it to his 100th year. I had a chance to meet him four times; each was a delight. Twice I preached at Westminster; each time he greeted me with delight. One time I gave Holy Communion, and he gave the prayer in a beautiful voice, with words from the heart. The last time I saw him I was invited to a checker tournament. While his eyes could not see the color of the checkers, his mind was alert, and he won. He had such a good time. In his 99 years he witnessed many changes, and brought about many changes. Churches were better, not only for his good preaching, but for the beautiful life he lived. Now he is joined with his lovely wife in the land of the tomorrows. Thank you for giving us 99 years; our world is better. We look forward to the good country inhabited by people like Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence. Take your earned rest. We will see you in the morning.

FALL

We have just gone through the best summer, and now fall. Crops a bit late, but Jack Frost hasn't come yet. Children in school. I see them every day, as I am a crossman guard. Two lovely Farm Bureau meetings, lots of homecomings at the churches, and revivals. Lots of tomatoes and squash, zucchini bread that is good. People home from vacations, and we have good weather to sleep. Life is better. One would have a hard time finding anything to complain about. I have four part-time jobs, three churches, and much guest preaching. Some jobs open up, and people are doing better. We are looking for a new one, that is a grandchild. My last planting is up, turnips. I still hope to sow lettuce and put out onions. I may go to New York City this winter. I have lots of friends there. The library brings me thirty good books each month. A small group of people has started a small church at 1316 East Adams. It is going good. I hope to spend three hours a day writing this winter. Life is so good. Life, victory, peace. I love every minute.

Dear Editor:

We're mighty proud of our eight-year-old Mary Cornell, daughter of co-worker and Mrs. William Cornell, Rt. 1, Akron, displaying the huge banana melon which you describe as having been raised on "Utter's truck patch in Akron."

As a matter of information, there is no Utter's truck patch in Akron, but for many years Pike Lumber Company has conducted a co-worker garden project that has been most rewarding.

The company provides the garden area the co-worker

Taken from the Northern Indiana Co-op News, October 8, 1941. 40 years ago:

Twenty-six selectees, which will make a total of 186 from Kosciusko County to date, are scheduled to depart from Warsaw October 26th. Three men from Mentone, Harold D. Linn, Merle Eugene Harold and Wilvin Teel, were included in the list. Linn, however, went to Fort Wayne Monday where he enlisted in the Air Corp. He was accepted for enlistment and is expected to be stationed at Ellington Field, Texas. Teel is also reported to have chosen a life in the Marines.

Gail Shock, of Knox, who makes two daily trips through Mentone carrying mail between South Whitley and Knox, wrecked the truck Tuesday afternoon when he collided with another motorist three miles east of Claypool on the Packerton road.

When the word reached Mentone of the accident, Ray Rush, Mahlon Mentzer and Conda Walburn drove to the scene and brought the mail on into Mentone. Indications were that Mr. Schock escaped serious injury and no report was secured of how the other driver came out.

Mrs. Eva (Rynearson) Irvine, of Leesburg, entertained the class members of the 1895 class of Mentone school at the home of Mrs. Lydia Rynearson, of Mentone, on Thursday at a cooperative dinner. There were eight members and three guests present as follows:

May (Jefferies) Snyder of Fort Wayne; Chloe (Hubler) Dinnius of Warsaw; Oata (Whetstone) Rupert of Elkhart; Myrtle (Wilson) Goodman of Niles, Michigan; Ora (Sarber) Heckaman of Etna Green; Chloe (Wilson) Arch of Nappanee; Eva (Rynearson) Irvine of Leesburg; Otis (Nelson) Swick of Mentone; Ola (Clark) Blodgett of Mentone; and Hattie (Kessler) Buss of Etna Green.

The 25th anniversary of the Sodales Club was appropriately celebrated last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Robert Reed, with all 20 members present. Of the group, only two are charter members. They are Mrs. Goldie Mollenhour and Mrs. Ruby Smith.

Taken from the Northern Indiana Co-op News, August 8, 1951. 30 YEARS AGO:

Miss Elmer Norris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leory Norris and a member of the Franklin 49ers

4-H Club, was named senior champion in the County 4-H dress revue held at Leesburg this evening.

Monday morning Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller, of Plymouth, took over as proprietors of the former Henker I.G.A. store in Mentone. Mr. Miller has been manager of the paint department of the National Mill Supply Co., in South bend and is thoroughly familiar with merchandising.

The following are a few items listed in Lemler Market grocery ad: Cube steaks, 89¢ lb.; ground beef, 65¢ lb.; corn flakes, 18 oz. 25¢; salmon, 49¢; oleo, 24¢ lb.; potatoes, 15 lbs. 69¢.

Janet Rose Reed won second place in the 5 galloped class with her horse, Jean's Fancy. The show was held at Wabash Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. David Cooper are enjoying a week's trip to Niagara Falls and points in Canada.

Wayne Nellans reported that they dressed 24,000 pounds of poultry at his poultry dressing plant Tuesday. That's a lot of chicken, and indications are that Wayne has some employees that really know how to work.

The Mentone High School class of 1951 held its first reunion Sunday, August 5, at the Flowing Well. A potluck dinner was enjoyed. Members present were: Bonnie Emmons, Martha Sullivan, Madeline Holt, Mary Jane Tucker, Jody Cullum, Margaret Hodges, Phyllis Bowser, Bonita Miner, Max Friesner, Phillip Shilling, Ted Shull, Dale Molebash, Karen Clark and Mrs. Keith Wagner.

AM Taken from the Mentone News, October 5, 1966. 15 YEARS AGO:

Larry Secrist, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Secrist, and Steve Cole, son of Mrs. Annabell Cole, graduated from Marine basic training Tuesday at San Diego, California. They have been sent to Camp Pendleton where they will receive more training before coming home on furlough.

Mrs. Lloyd Smith, Mrs. Glen Secrist and Mrs. Art Wise attended the president's and secretary's conference of the American Legion Auxiliary, Saturday in Indianapolis. The conference was held in the auditorium of the World War Memorial Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bibler, who live in a mobile home at the Lee Norris Grain Company, are the parents of a daughter born Sunday at the Logansport Memorial Hospital. The little girl weighed eight pounds and eight ounces and has been named Amy Gay. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bibler, Rt. 5, Warsaw, and Mrs. Hiram Bundy, Rt. 1, Pennfield, Pa.

At a recent meeting of the Mentone American Legion, Gerald Romine was elected Commander. Other officers installed included Bob Hill as first vice commander and Miles Igo as second Vice Commander. Byron Nellans was named adjutant.

An otherwise unfortunate event made it possible for S. A. Jerry Zolman and S. M. John Zolman, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Zolman to spend some time together while in leave from the U. S. Navy. Jerry was scheduled to leave for San Diego, California, September 15, less than a day before John was due home to begin a 30 day leave. However, Jerry underwent an emergency appendectomy, and has been confined to his home since. He is making a satisfactory recovery, but the date of his departure is still indefinite.

COUNTY JAIL BOOKINGS

The number of bookings at the Kosciusko County Jail was down during the month of August from the previous month, according to figures released recently by Sheriff C. Alan Rovenstine. They are also down from August, 1980.

During August, 132 individuals were booked at the jail, including 110 adult men, 18 adult women, three juvenile boys and one juvenile girl. Twelve juveniles were taken into custody, but not booked.

In July, 150 people were booked at the jail. In August, 1980, there were 209 bookings, 77 less than last month.

The county police were responsible for booking 79 of the individuals, while members of other departments booked 53 people.

Others booking individuals included Warsaw Police Department, 38; Winona Lake Police Department, four; Mentone Police Department, three; Indiana State Police, two; Milford Police Department, four; Syracuse Police Department, one; and North Webster Police Department one.

In the first eight months of 1981, there have been 992 inmates at the county lock-up. Compared with 1,268 during the first eight months of 1980, the numbers are down.

The average age of the inmates is 27 years old, according to the sheriff. Thirty eight percent are also unemployed.

Officers also spent 69 hours transporting inmates, traveling 3,704 miles, according to figures.

During August, officials of the sheriff's department drove 29,281 miles in answering 394 complaints and serving 483 papers. In addition, 26 off-duty complaints were handled and 20 traffic arrests were made.

Officers investigated 40 traffic accidents involving 59 cars and injuring 23 individuals. There were no traffic fatalities during the month.

The accidents resulted in $86,950 worth of property damage and resulted in three arrests.

Ten of the accidents occurred at night, 26 at daylight, and four at dusk or dawn.

So far in 1981, officials at the department have investigated 359 accidents, compared with 305 in 1980.

Members of the department recovered $2,540 worth of stolen merchandise, while an estimated $23,532 worth of items were reported missing. Officers investigated six cases of vandalism and mischief, 12 burglaries, 32 thefts six auto thefts, two assaults and two cases of arson. They also assisted in one death investigation and one case of child molesting.

Personal Injury Accidents

Gordon Clemens, 23, of 939 Country Club Ln., Warsaw, sustained minor head bleeding in a one vehicle accident at 1:35 p.m. last Friday on West Market Street at the ConRail viaduct. He told police he was not thinking about the high truck he was driving and struck the viaduct head-on as he attempted to drive north under it. Damage to the truck, owned by Tri-State Manufacturing, Winona Lake, was estimated between $2,500 and $5,000.

Mary I. Peterson, Rt. 1, Mentone, sustained contusions and bruises in a two-vehicle accident last Saturday and was also cited for failure to yield. She drove into the path of a car driven by Janice A. May, 36, Rt. 3, Warsaw at the intersection of East Cent and Lincoln Streets. Damage to both vehicles was estimated between $1,001 and $2,500.

Teresa L. Ault, Rt. 5, Warsaw, sustained leg abrasions after the motorcycle she was riding collided with a car driven by Donna E. Keough, of 320 North Lake St., Warsaw, last Monday evening. The accident occurred on West Fort Wayne Street, west of North Buffalo Street, according to city police. Damage to both vehicles was estimated between $200 and $1,000.

Londa L. Harris, Rt. 1, North Webster, was treated and released at Kosciusko Community Hospital following a one-vehicle accident at the intersection of the Armstrong Road and Baseline Road. She told county police she attempted to round the curve but her brakes faded. Losing control of her vehicle, the car hit a NIPSCO pole. She did not sustain any visible injuries. Damage to the vehicle was estimated between $1,001 and $2,500.

Property Damage Accidents

A car driven by Darrell K. Yates, Mentone, struck a deer at 7 a.m. last Thursday on St. Rd. 25, one tenth of a mile west of County Rd. 1000 West, according to county police. Damage to his vehicle was estimated between $200 and $1,000.

No injuries were reported, but damage was estimated at $20,000 when a semi-trailer jackknifed and struck a dump truck at 1:41 p.m. last Monday on St. Rd. 15, south of Section St., Milford. Austin Worley, of Indianapolis, was driving the semi-rig north on St. Rd. 15 when a vehicle ahead reportedly stopped to make a left turn without signaling. Worley put on the brakes and the semi-trailer jackknifed into the other lane and hit a 1974 Mack dump truck driven by Stanley Cripe, of New Paris.

Damage was set at $6,000 to the dump truck, owned by Bair and Slaybaugh of Nappanee; $12,000 to the semi and $2,000 to the tanker trailer. The semi was owned by John K. Wood, Inc., Indianapolis.

A total of 10 volunteers from the Milford Fire Department were called to wash down gas, oil and anti-freeze as a result of a tank being torn off the dump truck. Waleed M. Sharbini, of 107 North Tucker St., Mentone, told county police he lost control of his car on County Rd. 700 South, east of County Rd. 450 North Tuesday morning in the heavy rain. The car skidded across the roadway and rolled over, causing $150 damage to a fence belonging to Robert Mattix. Damage to Sharbini's car was estimated between $200 and $1,000.

THE COUPON CLIPPER

Swap forms with friends and relatives

By June Fuller

What do you do with that Sanka refund form if you drink Maxwell House?

You trade it, of course!

Most refunders find more forms by trading with friends, relatives and refunders in other cities than they do by searching the supermarkets. Trading forms has become an indispensable part of refunding.

Where can you trade refund forms?

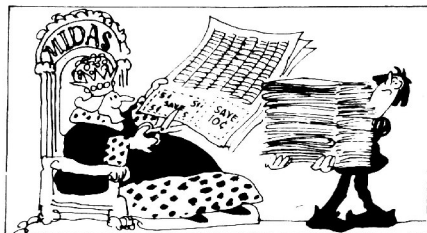

I never walk out of the house without an envelope full of forms in my pocket-book.

At least a dozen of us in town take out our refund forms and do some trading whenever we meet, whether at the supermarket, the gas station or the public library. It does wonders to pass the time when we are standing around waiting for our children to get out of band practice.

Chances are that many of your neighbors have started refunding. Don't hesitate to let them know that you have some extra refund forms for products they may be using. Then ask whether they have any forms to trade.

One smart trader takes her extra refund forms to the store. When she sees a item for which she has a form in another shopper's cart, she walks over and offers the form as a gift. I have lost count of the new friends and trading partners this practice has made her.

Once you have started to do a little trading with your neighbors, it is only natural to invite them all over for coffee and a swap session. At these sessions you can swap coupons and proofs of purchase as well as refund forms. As word of your gatherings gets around, you can expect more of your friends and neighbors to join in the fun.

Speaking of fun, form trading can add some new life to family gatherings. Just ask all the aunts and uncles, cousins and nieces to round up all the refund forms they can find and bring them to the gathering.

In my next column I will tell you about the rules for trading refund forms in person and by mail.

This week's smart shopper is Kathleen Bonker of Fayetteville, N.C. She tells me that her supermarket had Duncan Hines cake mix on sale for 65 cents a box.

She had a coupon for $1 off on the purchase of three boxes. She then sent the proofs of purchase to the company for a $1.60 refund.

"They paid me 65 cents to eat their delicious cakes. Now that's saving money!" says Mrs. Bonker.

She and other readers who receive my smart shopper award will receive a copy of the refunding magazine, The National Supermarket Shopper. Send your experience to me in care of this newspaper.

Here is a refund form to write for: Wisk Free

Meanwhile, start collecting the needed proofs of purchase as detailed below. Remember, some offers are not available in all areas of the country.

Nominations for CAP awards are based on in-plant evaluations by government quality assurance personnel of contractor quality efforts. The awards are based on excellence in the quality of products and services provided to the military services and defense agencies over a 12-month period.

Major military contracts held by the Company are for medical field military items and orthopedic internal fixation devices and accessories for all the military services. The company, which employs 297 personnel at its three plants, has been in business 37 years.

Hear lesson on Elijah

The Fulton Co. 4-H program

Pursuing their "Pathways to the Future," Fulton County's 4-H youth will join more than 148,000 Indiana members (in organized clubs) and five million 4-H'ers nationwide in observing National 4-H Week, October 4-10.

Deb Whister, Fulton County Extension Agent-Youth, noted that the 4-H Learn-by-doing philosophy encompasses an informal education program for boys and girls nine through 19 years of age.

The 4-H program in Fulton County is a growing one. The enrollment in 1981 was 462 4-H members. The 4-H'ers were members in 1 or possible 2 clubs in the county. Each club has their own activities and officers. Those 4-H'ers ages 14-19 are also invited to join a county wide club called Junior Leaders.

There are 19 township clubs. They are: Aubbeenaubee Ramblers and Go Getters, Henry Willing workers and Hardy Farmers, Horse and Pony Liberty Boosters and Leaders, Newcastle Nifties, Richland Never Give Up and Clodhoppers, Burton Busy Bees and Hot Shots, Reiter, Woodrow Peppers and Sodbusters Union Wohelo and Happy Hoosiers and Wayne Wide Awake and Trophy Finders. These clubs meet beginning in February or March through the summer and possibly August. A 4-H'er must attend at least 4 meetings to exhibit and complete the year.

This year close to 150 adults assisted in the 4-H program. This includes leaders, council members, Fairboard members, sponsoring committee members, workshop leaders and resource people.

4-H is an educational program where children choose the area that interests them. In Fulton County there are over 60 project areas to choose from. They have booklets that guide them through activities and needed information. All projects will have a display that will be judged at the 4-H Fair. Then some 4-H'ers projects will go on to the State Fair to be judged at the State level.

The fall is Achievement and Recognition Time for 4-H'ers. A record of activities, projects and placings is kept on each 4-H'er. The outstanding 4-H'er in a given project is then recognized with an Achievement Trophy. Also premiums are paid to the 4-H'er by the 4-H Council on the placings received at the County Fair.

4-H is a Learning by doing activity for children ages 9-19. For further information, contact the Cooperative Extension Office at 223-3397. Call or come by, we're in the Courthouse.

Four-H is a part of the Cooperative Extension Service, a division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, at state land-grant universities and supported by state and local governments.

By Zeta Parker

Alice Golding, Lulu Eaton and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Parker were Sunday callers at Oma Sarbers.

Mr. and Mrs. George Parker, Violet Overholt and Zeta Parker spent the weekend in Aurora, Illinois with a sister-in-law, Mary Lasina Tillis and family.

The Jolly Good Neighbors Homemakers Extension Club held its September meeting at the home of Mrs. Clarence Tinkey. Mrs. John Rose was the co-hostess.

The Prayer and Share group, Tuesday morning, enjoyed a visit with Rev. and Mrs. Frank Mauton. They have been missionaries in Burma and Taiwan, and recently visited mainland China where Mrs. Mauton was born. They showed slides from several places in China and told how God is blessing the churches and all Christians in China today. They had a display of Chinese crafts and utensils. It was a very informative time and good fellowship for all present. Their daughter teaches at one of the universities there.

On Tuesday evening the U.M.W. sponsored a carry-in supper at 6:30 and at 7:30, two missionaries from Henderson Settlement in Kentucky showed slides of their work there and had a display of their crafts.

Home upkeep

Questions on spending for the improvement and upkeep of homes will be asked of a sample of households in this area by U.S. Bureau of the Census interviewers between October 1-15, 1981. Stanley D. Moore, Director of Bureau's Regional Office in Chicago, announced recently.

The home improvement survey, conducted four times a year, provides information of value to the public and private sectors of the economy. The households in this area are among approximately 4,300 throughout the United States included in the survey.

Expenditures for residential upkeep and improvement in the United States for the first quarter of 1981 totaled $8.7 billion, or $45.7 billion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate. During 1980, the seasonally adjusted annual rate ranged from $43.9 to $49.2 billion.

The law requires that personal information reported to the Bureau of the Census must be held in strictest confidence. Published reports show statistical totals only, and no information identifying individuals or households is released.

Why do they volunteer to help in the county's 4-H program? It's a worthwhile program that encourages learning skills that will be useful everyday such as relating with people. "It's a chance to know young people in another avenue of their life. It's exciting to observe young people mature into young adults. To me, it's worth a million to see a face light up when given a prize they have been working toward or to see the faces glow when they have been praised for their work. And, personally, I'm growing as I learn more about myself and the leadership role," says one leader.

"You don't have to be a subject matter expert to be a 4-H leader," the youth agent Deb Whistler advised. "And you're never too old to become involved. Some adults serve as organizational leaders, keeping necessary records and helping with regular club meetings. Others share their hobbies such as photography, mechanics or cooking, by teaching youngsters involved in that particular project or activity." Contact Deb Whistler, Cooperative Extension Service, 223-3397, for additional information in how you can become a volunteer leader for today's enthusiastic 4-H'ers.

More on unemployment

There were 59,412 claims filed for unemployment insurance last week, 1,245 more than were filed during the previous week, the Indiana Employment Security Division reported today.

Holton Hayes, director, said initial claims registered a small increase despite decreases at more than half of the agency's local office. The largest increases were due to layoffs in automotive and related industries in the Anderson, Connersville, Fort Wayne, Kokomo, Muncie and South Bend areas, he noted.

Hayes said previous layoffs in primary and fabricated metals, non-electrical and electrical machinery, and transportation industries caused continued claims to rise by 848.

The number of claims filed during the comparable week last year was 115,981, he noted.

Gov. Orr proclaims "White Cane Safety Day"

Governor Robert D. Orr has proclaimed Thursday, October 15, 1981, as White Cane Safety Day in Indiana, according to Wendell J. Walls, State Director, Indiana Rehabilitation Services, Indianapolis.

For the sighted, the white cane should serve as a reminder of the special needs of the visually handicapped person and of the importance of exercising simple courtesies.

The use of white canes and walking sticks tipped with red is restricted to blind or partially blind persons, according to Indiana law through an act of the 1941 Indiana General Assembly. In order to protect the rights and guarantee the safety of blind citizens, the Act cites penalties for sighted people who fraudulently utilize the white cane and for motorists who fail to heed the caution prescribed by its use.

The Indiana Driver's License Manual contains a copy of the White Cane Law and its stipulations.

THANK YOU

I want to thank Dr. Aluning, Dr. Ramos, the nurses and staff of Woodlawn Hospital for the excellent care I received during my recent stay; also those friends and neighbors for their visits, prayers, cards and gifts.

ANNA MIZGALSKI

The sad, quiet, big-eyed little lady sat in the psychiatrist's office. The good doctor questioned her gently as to why her family wanted her locked up.

"Now, tell me," he said, "just what is your trouble?"
"It's just that . . . just that I'm so fond of pancakes, doctor."
"Is that all? Why, I'm fond of pancakes myself."
"Oh, doctor, really?" she thrilled, clasping her hands together with joy. "You must come over to our house. I've got trunks and trunks full of them!"

"Excuse me sir, did you happen to have seen a policeman anywhere about here?"

"I'm sorry, but I haven't seen a sign of one."

"All right, hurry up and give me your watch and pocketbook then."

Caller: "Madam, I'm the piano-tuner."
Pianist: "I didn't send for a tuner."
Caller: "I know it, lady; your neighbors did."

Smith: "Shall we have a friendly game of cards?"
Brown: "No, let's play bridge."

Local witnesses convene in Indianapolis

On September 26-27, 1981 area members of Jehovah's Witnesses attended a convention in Indianapolis. The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society arranges two programs a year in order to provide what is needed to face current problems and situations. The latest program developed the theme "Subjecting Ourselves to God."

The program encouraged all to appreciate their place in the Christian arrangement of things and to avoid the course of independence, noted by such discourses as "Subjection in the Christian Congregation" and "How Do You View Jehovah's Discipline?"

O. D. Welden, a traveling representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society discussed how subjection to the Christian arrangements brings prosperity in a world of trouble.

Always remember that, with rare exceptions, you do not have to talk.

Curse of Death Valley strikes again

The curse of Death Valley has struck again. As the Vikings dashed the playoff wishes of Eastern with a decisive victory over the eleventh-ranked Comets, by a final score of 30-16, that doesn't tell the whole story.

Valley extended this season's record to 6-0 with four of those victories placing the Vikings in the lead for the Three Rivers Conference title. Dropping two games in two weeks, Eastern's hopes for a playoff seat are assuredly unreachable with a 4-2 overall record.

Eastern went straight to the sky in the first quarter and found the greatest weakness in the Valley defense. The passing skills of Eastern quarterback Rex Kingseed gave the Comets the lead 6-0 as Troy Reed caught the toss from one-yard out late in the first quarter. Adding two more points, the Comet quarterback then ran in for the conversion.

The Vikings quickly marched up the field and with 4:19 ticked off the second quarter a three-yard pitch-out to Doug Dickerson gave Valley their first touchdown of the night. A "keeper" by quarterback Jeff Webb tied everything at eight a piece.

The Comets threatened to score again but an interception at the goal line by Vikings' safety Ray Davis ended their penetration for the time being.

The whole tone of the conflict began to turn toward the Vikings as they scored the next three touchdowns.

Starting at the Viking 17-yard line, Valley plowed up the middle of the field using four different backs to the Comet 13. With 1:11 left in the half a 13-yard pass became the sole possession of Andy Alsbaugh. Valley end, Brent Hoffman slammed through for the extra two points which put Valley on top for the first time.

Valley's Scott Bibler picked-off an Eastern pass and along with an interference penalty gave the Vikings the football on the Comet 26-yard line with just one second left to tick away the half.

A hurried pass by the Vikings was, first, smacked by a pair of Eastern defenders and then seeming caught by Alsbaugh in the end zone. Although, it was ruled an incomplete pass and both teams marched toward the locker rooms to hear their respective half-time pep talks.

Just 56 seconds into the third quarter the Vikings scored on a 14-yard run, spurred by 45-yard punt return by Bibler. An attempted two point conversion pass failed and the Vikings were on top, 22-8.

The last touchdown for the Vikings came from a four-yard run by Hoffman. He also ran the two-point conversion which gave Valley a 22 point lead.

Eastern came back with a touchdown pass to Reed but it just made the loss a little more respectable. With the Comet conversion, the final score read 30-16 and the Vikings had another Three Rivers Conference victory.

During the game before Eastern, against Southwood, Bill Hawkins was severely injured and probably will not play football again. Every Viking player had Hawkins number 72, taped to their helmets to dedicate this game in his name.

Three other players are on the injured list but as the result of the Eastern game, not Southwood. Ray Davis, Shaun Miller and Craig Fisher were taken to War-saw for several injuries. Coach Smith expects each one, though, to be ready for this Friday's big challenge against twelfth (UPI) ranked Oak Hill.

Oak Hill possesses our Conference's leading passer, Champ Detamore, and leading receiver, Greg Anderson. They will be coming off an enthusiastic 52-0 trounce over Northfield which will do wonders for their overall team spirit.

In last week's exchange with Eastern, Valley showed its major weakness on defense - the pass. Much improvement will be needed in this area, if the Vikings are to have as wide a margin of victory as they are used to having.

The Three Rivers Conference title will probably go to the victor of this Friday's exchange. With all that at stake, this will be one of the best games of the season.

Rusty Zimpleman ran in from the one yard line to score the third quarter touchdown. The pat was good by Rusty Zimpleman on a run. During the fourth quarter, Phil King passed to Danny Cave for a 12 yard touchdown and quarterback Randy Paris ran in the

T.V.H.S. to observe "National High School Activities Week"

The week of October 19-25 has been designated as "National High School Activities Week". The division of Student Activities of Indiana Secondary School Administrators and the Indiana High School Athletic Association are promoting the week in Indiana high schools to promote public awareness and support of high school activities programs. In all sections of the country, demands for the educational dollar are becoming greater and the resultant strain on funding for activity program increases.

Tippecanoe Valley High School approximately 75% of the student body is involved with at least one activity. The values of a good activity program are documented as follows:

(1) Students who participate in high school activities are more likely to have higher academic averages and better attendance records.

(2) Of students who "drop out" of school, 94% have not been involved in activities.

(3) The best predictor of success in later life is previous participation in high school activities.

(4) Participation in activities teaches values that make students happier and better citizens, builds strong minds and bodies, instills poise and confidence.

(5) Nationally, over one-half of the high school enrollment participates in programs for approximately one percent of the total school budget.

Principal Robert Meyers urges every citizen in the Tippecanoe Valley school district to attend at least one of the many activities scheduled for the week.

GOOD HOME COOKIN' FOR DOGS AND CATS

You may be surprised to know that homemade cat and dog meals can cost less than half as much as the store-bought variety. And, of course, when you cook up the pet vittles yourself, you'll know they're all good nutritious food... without fillers, emulsifiers, or artificial coloring.

One of our readers recently sent us a few recipes that her cat has pronounced "excellent." Marian Rogers gets fish heads and tails, free, from a nearby grocery store. (They're left over after cutting such large species as salmon into steaks.) She also purchases inexpensive pork livers and kidneys, along with chicken gizzards and hearts.

Ms. Rogers puts the fish heads, tails, and bones with their attached meat in a pot, covers them with water, and lets the mixture cook to a jelly-like consistency. Marian removes the largest sections of skeleton from the cooked food with tongs, but leaves in the little soft bones. The "soup" is then put through the food grinder while it's still hot and easy to pour. She adds a handful of wheat germ, divides the stew into serving sizes, and freezes whatever her hungry felines don't eat at the moment.

The chicken gizzards, hearts, and livers are boiled until tender and served whole, with a little warm broth. Occasionally, Marian whips up a pork-liver-with-raw-egg pet-food meal when the oven is already being used for something else. She just puts the meat in a foil-covered pan with a little water and bakes the liver until it's pink in the center. Once the meat is done, she slices or grinds it, and serves it with a raw egg mixed in.

Dogs, too, can benefit from home-cooked flavor and nutrition. Miki Collins, who lives with her sister and their pack of sled dogs in central Alaska, uses fish as the basic ingredient of her low-cost canine dinners.

"We usually cook the pike and such that we net whole—heads, insides, scales, and all—to provide our dogs with hearty, wholesome meals," she informs us. "We also add game birds and other small trapped or hunted animals (these should be cooked thoroughly) to the kettle, as well as whatever inexpensive meat trimmings are available from the grocery store. Old potatoes, stale bread, cold zucchini, moldy cheese, and carrot tops help round out the diet. A cereal supplement of rice or oatmeal can be tossed in to add additional nutrients, especially when the dogs have been working extra hard."

Tepple featured speaker

Rod Tepple, Warsaw, will be the featured speaker at the October 13th, 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Lakeland Art Association to be held at Cardinal Center, Warsaw.

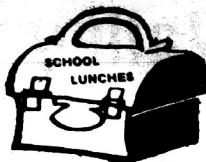

An elementary teacher at Leesburg School, he will be demonstrating with camera and showing slides of the different techniques used in photography in relation to art. How the camera can be used in different lighting, the different shutter speeds for special effects, action, etc., and the camera on vacation and its reference to future paintings.

Tepple, a native of Leesburg, and graduate of Wheaton College, holds a Masters Degree from Indiana University. Besides teaching at Leesburg, he has taught at Warsaw schools 12 years.

The September meeting was enjoyed by a large group of the Association's members and guests with a demonstration of alkyls, by noted Akron artist, Marilyn Kruger. She showed their relationship to oils and the many advantages mixed or used alone, how they can add to the richness and variety of one's expression and design by giving greater textures, more brilliance of color and faster drying. Other ideas the professional artist showed were the use of household items such as toothbrushes, for spattering textures, sponges for fine textured sky scenes, the many uses of palette knife or regular knives, crumpled fabrics, etc., for faster and more realistic effects.

The August meeting was in the form of an art show during the North Webster "King Arthur Daze" at the County House Bank in conjunction with the North Webster-Tippicanoe Twp. Library Board. An auction was held by auctioneer Steven Richcreek, Friday, August 14. Twelve paintings were donated by area artists with proceeds going to the library fund.

Groninger appointed to council of the Sagamores of the Wabash

Harold Groninger, Akron, Chairman of the Board of the Akron Exchange State Bank, was honored recently by the state when he was appointed Cheiftain on the Council of the Sagamores of the Wabash by Governor Robert D. Orr, Governor of the State of Indiana. The Council of the Sagamores is the highest honor the governor can bestow on a citizen.

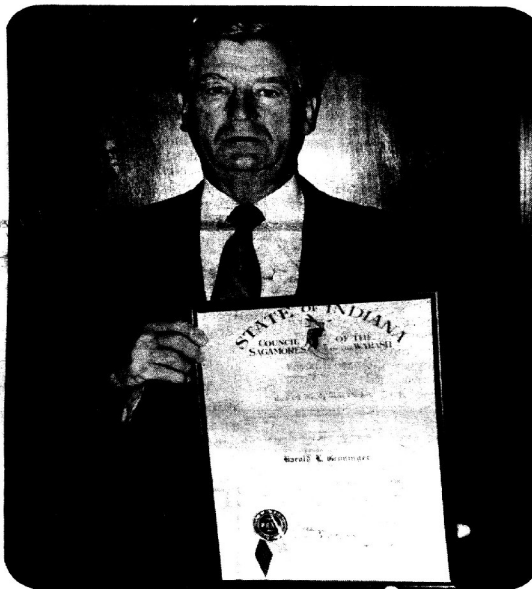

Mr. Groninger was appointed by the then Governor, Otis Bowen, in July of 1974 to serve as a member of the Department of Financial Institutions for the state. The department is one of the few self-supporting branches of state government which obtains none of its operating expenses from general fund taxes. Income is derived from fees assessed financial institutions under its supervision. The department establishes the policies for enforcing the many legislative acts concerning financial institutions and endeavors to assure the public of adequate and proper services from such institutions. It is responsible for protecting the interest of depositors, shareholders, borrowers and consumers.

Beginning his career in banking, Harold was hired by Mr. Hub Stoner, President of the Akron Exchange State Bank as a bookkeeper in February 1937. He worked in this position until approached in 1941 by the State Bank of Akron about working for them. Since he couldn't betray his present employer, he decided to accept a position at the First National Bank of Warsaw, starting in January 1942.

Working days at the bank and nights at the Arnold Defense Plant until December 1944, he helped promote a deal combining the Exchange Bank and the State Bank of Akron and came back as cashier of the combined institution.

In January 1955, Mr. Stoner retired and Harold was elected president, serving until November 1977 when J. Randall Leininger became president.

A "pumpkin decorating and carving" contest will be held during the evening. Bring your own pumpkin, knife, paints, hats and decorations. Children in third grade and under will decorate their entries. Fourth grade students and above will carve faces in their pumpkins.

Mentone town board sets curfew for October

Harrison Township Trustee Chester Clampitt appeared before the board to discuss the new dog and cat ordinance recently adopted by the board for the Town of Mentone. The new ordinance became effective Sept. 23rd, 1981. Collection of the tax for dogs and cats by the township and the town of Mentone, which will begin next spring, was discussed. Clampitt offered to investigate the procedure used by the towns of Warsaw and Piercetown which have adopted similar ordinances. There may have to be amendments made to the ordinance with respect to the time the tax will be collected.

The Town of Mentone is accepting bids for street paving materials for street repair and widening until 7 p.m., Monday, October 19th at town hall. The street work is to be completed yet this fall.

Steve Shand, head of the Mentone water department was given a $500 pay increase effective October 1st, which was the end of his three month probationary period on the department.

Work Is Available

From time to time it's good to remind idealists, dreamers and deadbeats alike that work is usually available in this country for those who really want to work.

What isn't available, often, is the right job, at the same old plant, the same kind of work, easy work or one's preference. But if one will take what he can get, temporarily, in the old American tradition, there's plenty of work available in most areas of the country.

Unemployment figures are mostly meaningless for this reason, because they're calculated to include young people, many third or fourth employees in a family, those who won't work except in jobs they like (such as actors), the lazy, etc.

So, next time it's said that unless we provide make-work jobs for everyone--especially those chronically out of work we're inviting riots and social trouble, suggest that those complaining read the classified ads in any major newspaper. They're full of job opportunities--and that's only the tip of the opportunity iceberg, for those who really want to work.

Our America

The future of the United States, the happiness of its citizens, relates directly to how well younger generations understand this country, its past--and what it took to make this country what it is.

America has been the land of opportunity for two centuries. It has been easier to make one's way up from the bottom, here, than anywhere else in the world. We have been blessed with good land, natural resources and an Anglo-Saxon heritage of democracy and free enterprise.

But all that could have meant little if America's early settlers had not worked hard, and sacrificed, to make this country strong and affluent. That often meant a lifetime of hard work by German, Irish, Scandinavian, Italian immigrants, and many black Americans--not just a few years of effort.

Millions of well-placed Americans today owe their security to hard-working parents who toiled long and hard with very little, often on virgin land, to make a new start--in the new world. These Americans were the American dream. They made it come true. Others, slaves and indentured servants, endured long years of toil to finally get their start. Hard work, pride, the will to better one's position, the American way--this eventually made us the strong America.

Work, of course, is not everything, but it is usually necessary for advancement and happiness. The danger today--and older Americans point this out to younger fellow citizens--is that in the more urbanized life we live, with so many depending more and more on the government (other citizens) for all kinds of support, with so many in lucrative government jobs, with so many conveniences and so much easy living and stress on pleasure, the old spirit will be lost.

America in the future will only be as strong as its people. That means if the Japanese or Russians work harder, appreciate the necessities of national strength and security better, and Americans grow even softer from easy living, the American dream and spirit of two centuries will have been lost. And more energetic peoples will perhaps own the future. Will we allow this to happen?

Rich ladies of ancient Greece seldom traveled without a she-donkey to provide the milk they used as a skin tonic.

 B.J. Corwley's HOROSCOPE

Week of October 18, 1981

LIBRA -- The self-reliant Libran has a better than average sense of humor. He is a peaceful person, who often dislikes hard work and is sometimes careless in money matters. Best day is Monday, best color is blue and lucky number is six.

LIBRA -- Sept. 23 to Oct. 22--Make sure your financial affairs are in good working order. You can then rest and enjoy yourself.

SCORPIO -- Oct. 23 to Nov. 22--Your fine organizational ability pays off. A new friendship may be expected with someone in whom you can confide.

SAGITTARIUS -- Nov. 23 to Dec. 21--Spend this week getting some of your pet projects in order. Ignore persons who seem to thrive on pettiness.

CAPRICORN -- Dec. 22 to Jan. 19--Be good to others and others will be good to you. Set a fine example for those around you. Peace of mind will then come to you.

AQUARIUS -- Jan. 20 to Feb. 18--The easiest path for you now would be to follow rather than to lead. This must not be the route you take. Go forward as a leader.

PISCES -- Feb. 19 to March 20--Make sure your books are in order. When income tax season rolls around you should be prepared.

ARIES -- March 21 to April 20--When you finally decide you really don't need to be in the limelight, you find yourself receiving a great deal of attention. Be modest and accept the situation in an appreciative manner.

TAURUS -- April 21 to May 20--Spend this week getting all your projects in order. Make a priority list. Take care of the most pressing situations first.

GEMINI -- May 21 to June 20--Expect a so-so week. Stay home and read a book or watch television. Outside activities could prove duller than usual for the Gemini fun-lover.

CANCER -- June 21 to July 22--Refuse to listen to the "someone said" syndrome. Demand to know who said what. Vicious gossip usually begins with, "someone said."

LEO -- July 23 to Aug. 22--Your winning personality makes many friends for you. No one can impress others as you can by just being yourself. Your naturalness is extremely appealing.

VIRGO -- Aug. 23 to Sept. 22--Control your temper even when it hurts. A cool head is needed to weather a short storm. Forgive and forget!

Letter to the Editor

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the "Love Trio" on their latest album "Jesus Did It For Me." Each song has a way of reaching the heart, and making our faith stronger and stronger.

This day and age bringing up a family isn't easy but when your three year old puts you on the leg and says, "Mommy, can we hear Donna and Caffy (Cathy) sing? Our three older ones come in and turn cartoons off and play the album instead. Well, somehow you know you're on the right track and you just do the best you can.

So "Thanks" Donna, Cathy and Mike, for all your patience, time and "Love" in recording this album and making our lives seem a little bit brighter.

Wishing you much love and success.

Those Super Six Kids

EDITOR'S NOTE: This office received the preceding letter this week and after reading the material, have decided to publish it in its entirety. After all, the town of Akron may be sitting on another "Alaska" oil field. In any event, we wish to thank Mr. Steinmetz for sending in this very interesting story.

Re: Hydro-carbons

Gentlemen:

Approximately six years ago I sent you a location where hydro-carbons could be found. This site was forwarded for the specific purpose of giving some of your local adventurous talent the opportunity to speculate. This would have kept any profits at home. Nobody was interested.

An Oil well is now being drilled on this selected location. For the best results it is necessary to field check the site before drilling. I did not field check this location. I doubt if this is the best spot to drill on this farm.

I predict that Oil will be discovered at this well but only in the 10 to 15 barrel per day. There are many other much better locations to drill for Oil in Northern Indiana.

If hydro-carbons are discovered on this property, how many other farms in Northern Indiana does undiscovered oil now exist?

Very truly yours,
Harry J. Steinmetz

Gentlemen:

In my opinion oil exists in Indiana on the Miami-Wabash County line as shown on the enclose map.

There is a small hydro-carbon deposit centering in the north half of Section 35 and running into the South half of said Section.

The projected depth is 1200 feet and the estimated production is approximately 30,000 barrels per well.

You can find many reasons why this letter should be ignored, and I will not engage in any metaphysical pedantry concerning why I believe oil exists in this location or my methods employed for this belief.

Voice of the People

To:
Woodlawn Hospital Board
Woodlawn Hospital Association
Fulton County Commissioners
Fulton County Council

I am against selling the Woodlawn Hospital because it is not supposed to be in financial trouble and there would be problems with private ownership of the hospital.

I know of no reason to sell the hospital. The county should continue to own it as it does now.

Joseph D. Richardson, M.D.

I have no financial interest in this property whatsoever. If you wish to check this out, be my guest, I expect nothing in return.

Very truly yours,
Harry J. Steinmetz

Re: Hydro-Carbon Locations

Gentlemen:

A couple years ago an article appeared in "The American Dowder" concerning the possible location of oil by the use of Tele-radiesthesia (copy enclosed).

Enclosed is a list of Counties where I believe undiscovered oil exists in a minimum amount of a least (50) barrel per day. It has taken over 25 years to compile this list. To meet my qualifications I require identical readings to be obtained for a minimum of ten (10) years. All the locations on this list have met this test of time. The approximate depth, acreage, and yield are also given.

If any of your members are interested, have them contact me at the above address and I will send them the exact legal location in the various counties. I am employed as an attorney with the State of Indiana and can be reached at the Attorney General's office at the following phone number. (317-232-6341).

You have my permission to use this information in any way you so desire, which includes making copies of this list and forwarding to anyone you believe may be interested.

Very truly yours,
Harry J. Steinmetz

Plain talk about IRA's

Are you missing out on a tax break? You might be if you are one of the tens of millions of employed people who are not a part of an organized retirement or profit-sharing plan. If you fall in that group, you could be putting money away in a tax-deferred Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

And starting next year, your savings could increase. The new tax package just signed into law not only increases the amount you can invest by $500, it also will allow almost everyone who is employed to take advantage of IRA's. (See the chart at the end for the changes.) But you don't have to wait. If you are not part of a retirement plan and are eligible for an IRA in 1981, you should take advantage of this chance to invest for your future—and you have until April 15, 1982, to do so.

When you start your own Individual Retirement Account, this year you can invest 15 percent of your salary or $1,500, whichever is less. Taxes are deferred on the money invested until you start to draw it from the account after you reach age 59½. Usually by then, your taxes will be lower because your income will be lower.

If you are a non-working spouse, you can also participate in an IRA, providing your working spouse puts half of the annual IRA contribution into your separate account. In this case, the total amount contributed to both accounts cannot be more than 15 percent of the working spouse's salary or $1,750, whichever is less.

There are a number of different ways you can invest your IRA funds: flexible annuity contracts sold by insurance companies; savings accounts, certificates of deposit, and time deposit open accounts through banks, savings and loans, and credit unions; mutual fund shares; stocks; and special government retirement bonds. There are advantages and disadvantages to each type.

Flexible annuity contracts in most cases cannot be converted in the early years to another type of account without losing much of your investment. Certificates of deposit and time deposit open accounts have high interest, but there is generally a penalty for early withdrawal. Savings accounts and U.S. Individual Retirement Bonds are flexible, but the interest is low. Stocks and mutual funds are flexible, but you have to pay trustee and/or brokerage fees, and the value of your investment is tied to what is happening on Wall Street.

So shop around before you sign on the dotted line. Read the disclosure statements. Find out what fees you have to pay. Ask about any penalties for early withdrawal of investments in case you want to switch investment plans. And if you decide to switch, make sure you either have the money transferred directly (for instance, the bank puts the money directly into a mutual fund), or hold the money no more than 60 days before reinvesting it, otherwise you could end up paying a whopping tax penalty.

To learn more about IRA's, call your local office of the Internal Revenue Service. They are listed in the White Pages under "Tax Information."

And for a listing of more than 200 free and low-cost consumer booklets on topics from money saving to food, send for a copy of the Consumer Information Catalog, published by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. The Catalog is free from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Co. 81009.

MAJOR CHANGES:

As of January 1, 1982, almost everyone will be allowed to invest in an IRA (roughly doubling the number of people eligible).

IRA investments will jump to $2,000 or 100 percent of salary, whichever is less ($2,250 jointly with non-working spouse). A divorced, non-working spouse may count alimony as earned income for investing in an IRA.

Don't just get a furnace, get a year-round comforter

You could be comfortable all winter by installing a furnace. Or, you could be comfortable year-round, plus save money on your energy bills, by installing an Add-On Heat Pump.

The electric Add-On Heat Pump is a new development. It works like any heat pump by taking the solar heat out of the outside air and pumping it inside. And, because it supplements your existing gas or oil furnace with the energy-saving benefits of a regular heat pump, it's the most efficient heating system around.

And, that means you add-on savings with the Add-On Heat Pump.

That's probably all you care about this time of year, but next summer you'll be glad to know that the Add-On Heat Pump is also a very efficient central air conditioner.

So, if you're thinking of installing a heating system this winter, consider the Add-On Heat Pump. It's a decision you'll be comfortable with year-round, for years to come. Contact:

It Happened in Mentone

Taken from the Northern Indiana Co-Op News, October 15, 1941.

40 YEARS AGO:

C. O. Mollenhour, local Conservation Club enthusiast and worker, was in Warsaw last Friday evening where he spoke before the Chamber of Commerce meeting on conservation work in Kosciusko County and the camp at McClure Lake.

The free outdoor movies will continue this week if the weather is agreeable, according to an announcement received by this office.

Several members of the Mentone Conservation Club, assisted by Les Ball, Conservation Supervisor, took over 42,000 bluegill minnows from the rearing ponds and placed them in Yellow Creek Lake one day last week. Those who did the work were Phillip Blue, C. O. Mollenhour, F. R. Burns, Ralph Warren, Henry Konneck, Gus Mollenhour, Chauncey Tucker and hired hands, Kenneth Riner, Darrel Tucker, Elmore Fenstermaker and Ralph Arnsberger. Wayne Tombaugh's truck was also donated for use that day.

Donald J. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Smith, is home on a short furlough.

Lieut. Ridgway, spent a few hours in Mentone Saturday with Mrs. Ridgway and the Ray Rush family. Lieut. Ridgway and another pilot had flown to Indianapolis from Camp Selma, Alabama in two and a half hours non-stop.

Some of the Mentone High School students were seen bowling Sunday night. They were Betty Miner, Nadine Shirey, Betty Shirey, Emery Mosier and Bob Miner.

Taken from the Northern Indiana Co-Op News, October 17, 1951.

30 YEARS AGO:

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Whetstone were honored by their children at a surprise dinner Sunday on their 30th wedding anniversary. The celebration was held at the home of their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Manly (Pat) Walsh.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hall were guests of honor on Sunday at dinner given in observance of their 42nd wedding anniversary. The dinner was given at the home of their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McHatten, in Warsaw.

Tickets for the big Mentone Egg Show banquet went on sale this week. Tickets are in the hands of hatchervmen, feed dealers, egg car managers and Mentone business firms.

Future Homemakers of America, Mentone Chapter, elected Jackie Blue as president at the Monday evening meeting at the school house.

Other new officers are: Pat Starr, vice president; Martha Creighton, secretary-treasurer; Cloanne Nelson, news reporter; Mary Esther Creamer, Parliamentarian; Darlene Boyer, historian; Elaine Goodman, song leader; Martha Tucker, pianist; Mary Ellen Bryan, Assistant pianist; Mrs. Dana Starr, chapter mother and Mrs. Ralph Hoffman, chapter leader.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Manwaring and Miles Manwaring were in Lafayette last week attending the State Poultry Association meeting at Purdue.

The gifts to be presented to the queen candidates at the Mentone Egg Show, to be held next Thursday and Friday are to be placed on display at the Baker Jewelry store.

The mechanical pencils that are always given to each entrant in the egg contests, are rather novel this year. A transparent top displays a miniature baby chick that has supposedly just emerged from the egg.

A news release in the Warsaw Daily Times gives the information that "Cal" Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wagner, of Mentone, has been promoted to the rank of mess sergeant of his company in Korea.

Taken from the Mentone News, October 12, 1966.

15 YEARS AGO:

The Mentone Boys League has purchased a plot of ground from Mrs. Lester Rogers and plans to begin construction immediately on a ball park. The ground is located across the street from Dickerhoff Trucking Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ward, owners and operators of Ward's Paint and Wallpaper Store, this week announced that the retail section of their store will be closed. They will continue to do decorating work on a contract basis.

Army Private First Class Robert W. Murphy, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Murphy, Rt. 1, Mentone, arrived in Nha Trang October 4 with the 1st Brigade of the 4th Infantry Division from Ft. Lewis, Wash.

The brigade landed on South Vietnam's central coast and joined the main body of the division. The arrival brings approximate American military strength in Vietnam to 321,000.

Roland Lukens, Rt. 2, Rochester, was among students honored for academic excellence at the recent Honors Day convocation held at the northwest campus of Indiana University in Gary.

Fifty five Lions from District G and the Mentone Lions Club met last night to honor the past district governor, Gaylord Toll. President Lion George Welch read two letters from Lion Walter H. Campbell, president of Lions International, which commended Lion Toll for being "the 100 percent" district governor and with the letters came a citation in Lionism. This reward came because of the new club of 157 members which was initiated under Governor Toll's inspiration and leadership.

MEMORIAL TO MIRIAM CUMBERLAND WHO PASSED AWAY OCTOBER 14, 1980

(This tribute was written for and read to the Akron Women's Club by her friend Thelma Kuhn)

Each Autumn the trees are beautiful beyond description. As the leaves change colors, shades of red, yellow and orange glow everywhere. Yet these colorful leaves are dying. They have completed their task and will soon fall to the ground. Just a short time ago Miriam faced death. Just as the leaves blazed into glorious color before their departing, so did Miriam.

She went about taking care of her home and husband making no complaint. Her days were a reflection of the beauty of her mind and heart. Nature gives us a glimpse of exquisite beauty as the leaves die. We get a glimpse of God's glory when a Christian let's go of this life with inspiring triumph.

As we journey through life we are all pilgrims together, wending our ways through this life to our Father's home. At last, night has fallen for Miriam, the things that seemed so important were all left behind and the master's voice was heard, saying: "The day is done; the work is finished; lay down the tools; it will soon be time to go to sleep."

If as we travel home we would remember that in our life's journey we have tried to do our part, that we have tried to speak a word of hope and lend a hand that would help and never hinder; if in our work we have known how to sing and taught others to sing and be happy; if in our hearts we have cherished hatred towards no human being but have instead tried to forgive as we would wish to be forgiven; if we have accepted the charge as did Peter, that we are called on to love one another and have judged charitably the failures of others as we would want them to judge ours, then, whatever mistakes we may have made, we can lie down as peacefully as a little child at evening, who, with his mother's hand on his, passes into slumber knowing that all is well, sure that there is One watching beside us "who neither slumbers nor sleeps." That when we shall awaken it will be to find our selves in the old home, surrounded by those whom we have loved, and that it will be morning.

Morning has come to Miriam.

We want to share with the readers a poem called "Autumn's Lesson" by Opal Foust of Kokomo. Sitting at my window dreaming. Watching the golden leaves fall. A feeling of sadness comes over me. Autumns that I can recall.

Each year I seem to remember. Such beauty one cannot compare. Yet each beautiful leaf must fall and willingly die for us there.

But we must not weep, when leaves fall. Those beauties of red, gold and brown. For in each place a new life unfolds to redecorate Autumn's new gown.

Social services block grant

Governor Orr announced on Thursday, October 1, 1981, Indiana began implementation of the Social Services Block Grant program. The Social Services Block Grant replaces the federal Title XX program. Indiana's allocation under the Block Grant for October 1, 1981 through Sept. 30, 1982 is $57,848,719. Under the Title XX program Indiana had proposed to spend $65,159,850 in federal funds. The Block Grant is a 9.6% reduction in federal funds. The Governor's office emphasized that the State of Indiana will provide for, under the block Grant, the delivery of services as described in the fiscal year 1982 Title XX Comprehensive Annual Services Plan for the October 1, 1981 to June 30, 1982 portion of federal fiscal year 1982. The services must be delivered to the client groups as prescribed in that document. Because of the reduced funding the estimated expenditures for each service are less than the amounts published in the Comprehensive Annual Services Plan.

Copies of the 1982 Title XX Comprehensive Annual Services Plan are available for review during regular business hours at any County Welfare Department.

and at most public libraries throughout the state. A free copy of the Plan may be obtained by telephoning the Indiana Office of Social Services (317) 232-1801. All questions should be addressed to: Indiana Office of Social Services, 964 North Pennsylvania Street, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204.

Eisenhower scholarship program

Indiana High School seniors and graduates, who have not yet entered college, are eligible to compete for scholarships being awarded state-wide by the Eisenhower Memorial Scholarship Foundation, Inc.

All Indiana High Schools, (public parochial and private) have been sent information and materials concerning the scholarship program. Application deadline is November 29, 1981.

Thirty-two Indiana college students entered school this fall on scholarships provided by its Foundation. The stipends are $1,250 per semester for each scholar. Grants beyond the initial $1,250 may continue to be awarded at the discretion of the Foundation Board for exceptional scholars in the amount of $2,500 maximum per year and $10,000 over four years of study.

The scholarships are not granted on the basis of financial need but upon merit. They go to winners chosen by a distinguished panel of judges as best exemplifying the ideals of Americanism and religious freedom of our Founding Fathers as personified by the late President Eisenhower.

Students who have graduated from high school in the upper half of their class but have not as yet entered college and current high school senior may secure entry forms from their local high school guidance office or by writing directly to the Eisenhower Scholarship Foundation, Inc., 539 South Walnut Street, Bloomington, IN 47401.

Under procedures of the Eisenhower Scholarship Foundation competition, interested candidates will submit essays not to exceed 2,000 words on the topic, "What Role Should The Government Play In Our Economy?"

Following the selection of the best manuscripts by a panel of judges, the semi-finalists will attend an oral competition before an advisory panel at Indiana Central University on Sunday, March 7, 1982.

From the presentations and from interviews with the entrants selections will be made based upon merit and the winners announced in late March or early April, 1982.

The scholarship winners may choose from one of thirteen colleges and universities which they prefer to attend. The following Indiana Colleges and Universities are participating in the program: Anderson College, Bethel College, Butler University, Grace College, Indiana Central University, Hanover College, Huntington College, Marion College, Northwood Institute, Tri-State College, Rose Hulman Institute of Technology and Taylor University.

In addition to the Undergraduate Program provision has been made for granting scholarship to graduate students who plan to enter graduate school next fall for the first time or will be continuing full-time in an accredited graduate or professional program. The basic requirement is that the applicants be U. S. Citizens, have graduated with a Baccalaureate Degree from an accredited undergraduate program and that they enroll full-time in an accredited graduate program. These scholarships are not restricted to scholars from Indiana and the selected scholars may attend any accredited program they may choose.

A lot of worry can be wasted on other people.

There is also a $10.00 fee to be paid to get the water turned back on. The board indicated that some attempt to pay delinquent bills would not result in a shut-off, but this only pertains to bills presently past due. The town clerk said there are presently 13 delinquent water bills. Bills are due the 15th of the month, and must be paid before the 25th or the shut-off will be immediate.

The next regular meeting of the board will be Monday, November 2.

Today, as in Colonial times, the apple is one of America's favorite fruits. The versatile apple can lend appeal to a variety of main dishes, side dishes, salads, breads, desserts and beverages. The apple makes a great low-calorie snack or dessert when eaten out of hand.

Apples contain small amounts of some important vitamins and minerals but they also provide dietary fiber. Dietary fiber is necessary for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Select apples which are firm, bright colored and free from defects such as bruises, skin breaks and decayed spots. Store them properly for best quality. If apples are hard or firm, store them in a cool place, 60 to 70 degrees, to ripen. Refrigerate ripe apples in the humidifier compartment or in a moisture resistant container such as a plastic bag. Cut a few scattered small holes in the bag to permit ventilation. For best quality it is recommended that apples stored in the refrigerator be used within a few weeks.

The large assortment of apples available provides a variety for every need. Some varieties are especially suited for a particular method of preparation. In general, apples that desiccate when cooked are usually best for applesauce; those that keep their shape are best for baking whole. Tart apples are good for cooking; sweeter apples are good for eating raw, either out-of-hand or in salads.

For use, wash apples thoroughly whether they are to be used for cooking or eaten raw. Trim away bruised or injured portions of the fruit. When possible, use apples unpeeled to maintain their nutrient content. Apples with brightly colored skins will enhance the appearance of salads and make an attractive pink applesauce when cooked unpeeled.

Raw apples may darken when their cut surface is exposed to air. Apples can be protected from darkening by mixing them with lemon, orange, grapefruit or pineapple juice before adding other ingredients.

Wheat flour contains high quality proteins. When mixed with liquid these proteins form gluten. Gluten is essential for the structure and elasticity of batters and doughs. For yeast breads, the more gluten proteins in the flour the greater the volume of the loaf, developing the gluten by kneading is important for good volume and fine texture. For baked products like pastry the dough is handled lightly and as little as possible to avoid developing the gluten, this gives a flaky, tender product.

Flours milled from grains other than wheat form little or no gluten; therefore, these flours are usually combined with white wheat flour in baked products to insure good volume and appearance. These flours may be used alone, however, in special diets.

For more information on flours, contact the Extension Office and ask for the publication "Using Flours".

Be thankful for Fall! Not only does it bring the harvest season and a beauty to our landscape, but it also provides us time to prepare for winter.

Unless you've done your homework earlier, fall is definitely the time to winterize the house. Make a list of those things needing to be checked. Then in your spare time, examine these and see that they are trouble-free for the months ahead.

Include these in your inspection tour: Gutters and Drains: Cluttered gutters or drains will prevent proper water runoff, causing an overflow and possible seepage under the eaves. So be sure these are clear of leaves and other debris.

Roof: Loose or damaged shingles require your immediate attention. Sometimes a single replacement or two will take care of the problem. On the other hand, if leaks have already developed, it may be the entire roof needs replacing.

Furnace: Have your furnace checked by a reputable firm. Should repairs be necessary, you can have these made before winter sets in. Check the base for rust.

Openings: A check of windows and doors is a must. Studies show insulating glass in weather-stripped wood windows is very effective against heat loss. With insulating glass the task of hanging, maintaining and storing storm windows becomes a thing of the past. Also be sure to check glazing on storm windows and doors.

These are just some of the areas you should check in winterizing your home. Getting to them before winter's cold blast will assure you greater comfort in body and in mind. The Extension Office has many publications available to help you prepare for winter. Ask for "Energy Facts."

The Hunter's Memory

By: Joe Scheldler
Dist. Wildlife Biologist

For thousands of Hoosiers the advent of autumn nourishes an enthusiasm for upcoming hunting seasons. It's an enthusiasm which is often based on experiences that are enjoyed time and time again in silent memories or exchanged by hunting companions gathered around a campfire.

All sportsmen hold vivid recollections of special days afield. Often, the clearest picture emerges when the memory settles on the first successful hunt. I think I could paint a fair picture of a clear winter day, a golden stand of switchgrass, a puff of feathers and an elated young man admiring first quail. Certainly, I could take you to the very spot today.

I recall an old Professor of Wildlife at Purdue commenting on his ability to remember specific trees and individual squirrels he had bagged as young man. He thought, perhaps in a different time and place, an aged Indian Chief reflected in the same way on particular bison hunts.

Days in the field do not have to be successful to be memorable, however. In my mind there are a number of hunting excursions which are easily recollected, but in the recollections lie not a clue to whether or not game was taken. In his book, A Sand County Almanac, Aldo Leopold reflected on ruffed grouse hunting among golden tamaracks in Wisconsin. He referred to the "luckless" hunters, "who have never stood, gun empty and mouth agape, to watch the golden needles come sifting down, while the feathery rocket that knocked them off sails uncaught into the jackpines." Such "unsuccessful" memories are sometimes the best.

It is with the anticipation of new experiences that sportsmen now eagerly inventory outdoor equipment and check off the days leading to the season's opening. With few exceptions, we recognize our sport as a privilege yielding priceless memories, and as an added bonus, a sound method of managing our wild game resource. Historically, we have been the first and foremost to speak out for the wise use and perpetuation of wildlife, and we can be rightly proud of our accomplishments. As a group we will continue to respect the hunting privilege and support proven management principles; as individuals we will continue to collect and treasure memorable days afield.

zucchini pineapple. Food Scientist Jerry Cash of Michigan State, tested the recipe for Michigan "Mock Pineapple" and found it to be safe using the water bath processing. However, at the end of the third month, the pH of the Michigan product had risen drastically, indicating that the product is potentially dangerous when stored.

Testing performed at Purdue University in September, based on a variation of the "Mock Pineapple" was found to be safe when processed in a water bath for 30 minutes. The produce was found sufficient in acid (pH of 3.4).

Since there is deviation between the Indiana "Fake" pineapple and the Michigan "Mock Pineapple" Purdue University will be conducting additional tests to determine the safety of these products.

Those who have made the "Fake Pineapple" are asked not to consume these zucchini products until further information from Purdue becomes available. Anyone wishing to include their zucchini product in the test are asked to send a sample of the produce with the consumer's name and address, recipe used, processing procedure, and the date on which it was processed to Dr. Jean Howe, Extension Specialist, Stone Hall, Purdue University, W. Lafayette, IN 47907.

NIPSCO Energy Report 2

Indiana Homeowners are Doing a Pretty Good Job of Saving Energy, but...

We Can Do More!

So said a recent report issued by the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, a group of energy-minded congressmen who sponsored a study to determine this area's energy costs and consumption relative to the rest of the country. "Even though Indiana energy prices are below the national average according to the study," Hoosiers are spending more for gas and electric energy than other parts of the country.

The typical Hoosier spent substantially more on heating, air conditioning and lighting last year than did residents in most other states, with the exception of the New England area and residents living in Wisconsin.

The study indicated that these higher household costs "were due more to higher consumption levels than to prices, since the average cost per unit of heat in Indiana was 3 percent below the national average." This means we can do better here in Indiana to conserve energy and hold down rising utility costs.

Here are the Four Basic Ways to Conserve:
1 Weatherproof your home; 2 Maintain your heat-

NIPSCO's Energy Savings Program

Home Energy Audits are available through the Indiana Residential Conservation Service (IRCS) Program. State-certified and specially-trained auditors make a thorough check of your home and recommend proven ways to weatherproof your home.

Refer to the Residential Conservation Service program booklet mailed to your home earlier this year or contact your local NIPSCO customer service office.

Just ask for it at your local NIPSCO customer service office or write, 99 Ways, NIPSCO Marketing Communications Department, 5265 Hohman Avenue, Hammond, Indiana 46320.

A 13-year-old Warsaw girl was riding her bicycle home from the drug store Thursday evening when she was approached by a man in a car on the north side of the Catholic Church. As he asked directions to "town," she noticed he was not wearing any clothing. She told city police she rode to the east side of the parking lot to Harrison Street, where the suspect drove his vehicle to the corner and asked if she wanted to go for a ride. She said no, and rode her bicycle back to the drug store where she called her parents, who reported it to the police.

Randy Miller, Rt. 6, Warsaw, told county police a battery was removed from his vehicle sometime within the last week. The vehicle was parked at his home when the theft allegedly occurred. The battery was valued at $50.

Dorothy Phillips, 511 West Jefferson St., Warsaw, told city police vandals damaged a screen, pulled the rotor wire to the television tower and threw garbage on the back door Tuesday evening.

A trailer belonging to Ethel Logan, Marion, located on Co. Rd. 350 South, west of St. Rd. 13, was broken into recently, according to county police. Taken in the incident were two television sets, a trolling motor, a 12-volt battery, a blender, a coffee pot, a stereo and two speakers, a gas grill, a cooler, an electric blanket, a battery charger, blankets, bath towels and matching wash cloths, 50-foot extension cords, 8-track tapes, two coolers, fishing rods and reels, a tool box containing wrenches and hammers, and a large whiskey bottle with $150 in change. Entry was apparently gained by prying open a door.

Bill Duckwall, of North Star Marina, Rt. 2, Syracuse, told county police his business was broken into recently. Entry was apparently made by opening a locked garage door. Vandals removed two sets of hubcaps valued at $220 and scratched a 1981 automobile at 606 East Winona Ave., Warsaw, recently, according to city police. Damage to the car was estimated at $250.

Property Damage

Damage to a city police car was estimated at $600, $75 damages to a dumpster belonging to Lakeland Sanitation Company, and damages of $150 to a car owned by Jeff Shelton, 1314 Cardinal Dr., Warsaw, occurred when an attendant at Warsaw Service Center Car Wash, 320 North Detroit St., inadvertently placed the police car in gear, and it toured the wash on its own power, hitting the dumpster and Shelton's vehicle.

A jeep driven by Rickey A. Hollar, 19, Rt. 2, Milford, struck the rear of a car driven by Roger L. Vore, 39, of 31 Isleview Dr., Winona Lake, last Saturday on East Center Street, east of Buffalo Street, according to City Police. Damage to the Vore vehicle was estimated between $1,001 and $2,500, while the Hollar vehicle sustained less than $200 damage.

Pearl B. Phillips, 83, Rt. 2, Warsaw, told city police she was attempting to get rid of a bee from inside her automobile when the car drifted across Winona Avenue last Saturday morning and struck a parked vehicle owned by Loys Auto Sales, 741 East Winona Ave., Warsaw. Damage to both vehicles in the accident was estimated between $200 to $1,000.

Bradley D. Bibler, 21, of 1205 St. Rd. 15 South, Warsaw, was cited for following closer than 300 feet after a two-vehicle accident last Friday on East Winona Avenue, west of South Maple Street. His vehicle bumped the rear of a truck driven by Donna J. Scutcheon, 26, Rt. 9, Warsaw. Damage to both vehicles was estimated between $200 and $1,000.

Dick Ripley, a buildings supervisor for General Telephone Company of Indiana, collects building heat loss data with a Prob-eye infrared viewer. The company is involved in a total energy management program designed to cut costs and conserve energy.

ELKHART, Ind. -- In response to a decade of oil embargoes and U. S. dependence on foreign oil, General Telephone Company of Indiana has been a leader in the statewide effort to conserve energy.

With one of the largest vehicle fleets (1,680 vehicles) in the state and more than 240 buildings throughout Indiana, the company's conservation program has resulted in substantial energy savings.

Locally, General Telephone's North Central Division, headquartered in Elkhart, achieved a $43,258 reduction in energy consumption last year through the implementation of a variety of conservation programs.

Specifically, General Telephone is effecting energy savings in three major areas: First, by utilizing thermographic survey techniques on company buildings; second, by training and encouraging the company's employees to use more fuel-efficient driving practices; and third, by redesigning the company's fleet of installation and maintenance vehicles to improve fuel efficiency.

Thermographic Survey Techniques "In formulating objectives in our program, we recognized a need for performing detailed energy analyses of all General Telephone Buildings," Ditslear Said. "The company purchased a Prob-eye infrared viewer for use statewide as well as in our 30 buildings here in the North Central Division. By showing temperature differences between closely adjacent objects, and between objects and backgrounds, this instrument quickly and accurately locates sources of heat loss in buildings."

He noted that scanning of a building's exterior walls with the device provides a graphic illustration of heat flow. Glass surfaces, for example, will appear dark in the winter months indicating heat loss. Poor insulation or voids in the walls will also appear darker through the viewer indicating the absence of a heat barrier.

Employee Awareness

Employee awareness of various conservation practices is another energy management technique emphasized by General Telephone. As an example, the company has presented a video tape program, "The Driving Difference," to all employees. The program promotes conservation by enlightening drivers of bad habits that waste gasoline such as rapid acceleration and braking, long idling periods, improperly inflated tires, high speed driving, and excessive use of air conditioners. Ditslear noted that North Central Division gasoline consumption during the past year was some 12,020 gallons lower than the previous year (a 5.5 percent reduction).

Vehicle Fleet Changes Adopted

General Telephone has taken additional steps here in the North Central Division to reduce fuel consumption levels needed to operate its 207-vehicle fleet. The company viewed the introduction of new one-quarter-ton trucks during the 1970's as an excellent opportunity to conserve energy.

Eventually the majority of General Telephone's large size vans used for various functions will be replaced with the smaller vehicles. Currently 1,095 energy efficient pickups and cars (almost 66 percent of its fleet) are being used by General Telephone statewide. "Business and industry must be concerned about energy use at every level," concluded Ditslear. "Because energy conserved by business adds to the total amount available in each community, as well as nationwide. At General Telephone, we are committed to conserving energy wherever possible."

Sports in Brief

By: Jerry Kindig II

TENNIS

The young Tippecanoe Valley Tennis Team has ended its 2-7 season. Although, the season record doesn't reflect the true situation.

Towards the end of the season, definite improvement could be seen in their actual scores. In the Valley Invitational, we posted an impressive second place. Also, at least half of the seven losses were by a 2-3 match score.

Next season, the Valley Tennis Team will have the experience to change those 2-3 losses to 3-2 victories and end up with a winning season.

CROSS COUNTRY

The Cross Country Team traveled to Manchester for the Three Rivers Conference title meet last Thursday. Valley placed third out of eight by a score of 82 points. The closest team to Valley was Oak Hill with 89 points who we also co-incidentally won against the next evening in football.

Placing for Valley was Jeff Peters - 6, David Chaney - 10, Mitch Good - 12, Rex Laughlin - 26, Rodney Smythe - 28, Chad Grossman - 32, and Randy Laughlin - 35.

In the Junior Varsity contest, Cy

Ross - 8 and Chuck Cullison - 13.

October 17th is the last meet of the season and is the Sectional Championship at Manchester. We wish you good luck this Saturday!

VOLLEYBALL

The Tippecanoe Valley Volleyball Team posted its second victory of the season against Whites last Thursday.

Losing the first game (13-15), the Vikings came back and dominated the last two games (15-0) and (15-7).

After the match had concluded, two Whites' 16 yr. old girls attempted to run away from the school ground. County and local police were called in and both girls were found in a cornfield about 10:20 p.m. that evening. Both were lodged in the Fulton County Jail for the night.

The Junior Varsity contest ended with the same results, just a different score, (15-1) and (15-13). Both teams have three more games in the regular season. They are: CGA on the 15th; Wawasee on the 20th; and Eastern on the 22nd. The first is an away game and the last two are at home.

17-7 Valley wins again

BY JERRY KINDIG II

Add one more name to the long list of teams brought to ruin at Death Valley. The Oak Hill Golden Eagles undoubtedly had their wings clipped as the Vikings shot down their chances for a playoff seat by a 17-7 final score.

Probably the roughest opponent the Vikings will face in the regular season, the Green and Gold held the Eagles to less than half of its regular passing yardage. A look at the rushing game places another outstanding statistic into the spotlight.

On the ground the Vikings stacked up a total of 242 yards compared to just 89 yards for Oak Hill. That's a difference of 153 total rushing yards.

Emotions were high as the 6-0 Vikings came onto the field. Everyone knew that the one on top at the end of this conflict would probably end up with the Three Rivers Conference Title. Thereby, placing quite a lot of importance on a short four quarters.

In the first quarter, it seemed like no one wanted control of the football.

First, the Eagles intercepted a pass on their own 24 yard line. Then, as if they didn't want it, two plays later Oak Hill tossed the "hot potato" into the waiting arms of halfback Brent Hoffman which he took to within 17 yards of a touchdown. But the Vikings had to settle with a 27-yard field goal by Tod Utter.

The second quarter was a little more on the normal side. Putting the Oak Hill defensive unit to the test, the Vikings went 67 yards on 13 plays and plowed through the last nine yards for the first touchdown of the conflict with just 45 seconds left in the half. The scoreboard read 10-0 after the PAT kick by Utter.

During the half-time activities, Principal Robert Meyers, was presented with two awards received by the Tippecanoe Valley High School Band in recent competition. Mark Kline presented the first award that the band achieved from the Elkhart Memorial contest. First year band director, Kim Metcalf, presented the second award that they had earned, a trophy from the ISSMA contest at Lewis Cass High School. In the ISSMA contest held on October 2nd, the Valley Band received the highest score in the second division which should be congratulated.

A defensive battle shaped up in the third quarter. The Eagles seemed in control and pushed all the way to within 4 yards of the goal line by pass after pass. Everything paused as the players changed ends for the fourth quarter.

Just four seconds into the last quarter it was again anyone's game as the Eagles scored, making it an exciting 10-7. The Vikings began to fall apart and they were forced to punt to the Eagles.

Oak Hill was heading straight for its second touchdown but Paul Prater had a different idea. The defensive tackle reached high above his opponents and picked off a screen pass intended for Oak Hill's Tom Moneyhan. This last interception sealed the fate Oak Hill as two plays later Hoffman broke for a 65-yard touchdown. With 6:11 left to play, the PAT was good and the scoreboard illuminated a 17-7 figure that the Eagles never did recover.

Manchester will host the 7-0 Vikings next Friday evening. A surprising victory over Southwood by 7-0 giving the Squires their second victory of the season will add a little to the confidence of Manchester but this game shouldn't even be close.

"Senior-Parents Night" scheduled at Valley

At the final home football game with LaVelle on Friday, October 23, Tippecanoe Valley High School will honor the senior athletes, cheerleaders, band members and their parents. To be honored are seniors on fall athletic teams: football, cross country, girls swimming, volleyball, boys tennis, cheerleaders, band, flag corp, and Vikettes. Seniors and their parents will be introduced before the game.

Principal Robert Meyers stated that the school is grateful to parents who make sacrifices of time, money and energy in allowing their sons or daughters to participate in these activities. The prime objective of the activities program is to supplement classroom learning with meaningful experiences that will be valuable in later life.

Doing MORE...With LESS! THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

A HEAP OF HELP FOR THE GARDENER

Once you get the knack of it, you'll realize there's actually no mystery at all to composting. Almost any plant—and much animal—matter is just "made" for your natural fertilizer heap, although the decomposition process does work faster if you avoid using whole bones, grease, animal fat, and chunks of meat. Then, too, coarse or bulky plant matter—such as large leaves, cornstalks, branches, and sawdust—should be shredded or added to your stack of future fertilizer somewhat sparingly.

Grass clippings, kitchen trimmings, coffee grounds, spoiled hay, bone meal, blood meal, spent hops, water plants, weeds, and animal manure of all kinds will—when stacked in five-inch-thick layers and watered well—turn into rich black dirt for the next planting season. The more variety you add to your pile, the better. Sprinkle in some ground limestone, rock phosphate, or potash rock (which is available at gardening shops) from time to time, too.

Pile yourself up a big stack of the above odds and ends right now, water it, and cover it with black plastic. Turn the top and sides of the pile in toward the center after two to three weeks, and add more water whenever the digesting matter seems dry. Then cover the compost again and let it "work" right through the winter. Come next spring, you'll have some rich (and entirely natural) top dressing for your garden.

Or, if you want to run a really basic composting operation, just dump all your kitchen scraps into a two-cubic-foot hole in the back yard after every meal, sprinkle it with about one cup of slaked lime, and cover the deposit with enough loose dirt to contain any odors.

When the first excavation will hold no more, start filling a second. And by the time this pit is full (two or three months), the material in number one will have completely decomposed into loamy potting soil.

Then, again, if you like the simplicity of the pit composting technique, but want (or need) to be a tad more prim and proper about it, make an underground composter with a lid. Simply bury two bottomless galvanized-steel trash cans upright in the ground, with only the tops left visible.

As soon as you've filled up one can, start putting your waste organic matter into the second. Then, by the time that container's full, the material in the first will be ready to use.

New books at Akron library

"Any Two Can Play" by Elizabeth Cadell. With a cast of unforgettable characters and a keen sense of the comic side of human nature, the author creates in this, her newest novel, a delightful heartwarming story of love.

"The Eisenhower Diaries," edited by Robert H. Ferrell. Nowhere is the transformation of Eisenhower from soldier to politician clearer than in his personal diaries which he began in 1935. Hundreds of entries, many of them extremely frank, provide constant commentaries on the General-President as he moves through World War II and on to Washington. The diaries show him to be an intensely moral man, not the hypocrite his enemies made him out to be and they elucidate his procedures with people.

"Banners of Silk" by Rosalind Laker. This is a rich absorbing novel, a passionate journey from the hovels of the back streets to the mirrored drawing rooms of the Second Empire, through the teeming, colorful world of French Society in full flower.

"Requiem For Idols" and "You're Best Alone" by Norah Lofts. These two modern novels were originally published in England under the pseudonym of Peter Curtis. But the legion of Norah Lofts' fans will immediately recognize the hallmarks that make her historical novels so popular: elegant writing, compelling stories and vividly drawn backgrounds.

"Daisy, Daisy" by Christian Miller. This is a fascinating story of a grandmother's journey across America on a bicycle.

"How To Trace Your Family Tree" by David Potec. Tracing your family is a great deal of fun and a very popular hobby. This book will help you in finding out how to do it.

"The Zoo That Never Was" by R. D. Lawrence. R. D. Lawrence and his wife Joan, did not set out to become keepers of a wild menagerie on their 350 acre farm in Ontario, Canada, but that is precisely what happened. This is an account of the author's own experiences living with wild creatures that is filled with scientific lore as it is with humor, warmth and adventures.

Unemployment claims continue to climb

There were 61,603 unemployment insurance claims filed last week, 2,191 more than during the previous week, the Indiana Employment Security Division reported today.

Holton Hayes, director, said initial claims were up at more than two-thirds of the agency's offices. The largest increases occurred in the Bloomington and Gary areas. Also, he noted, continued claims rose because of previous layoffs in automotive and supplier plants.

Hayes said the comparable year-ago claims total was 110,757.

History

A proper understanding of history is necessary if citizens in a self-governing country are to pass intelligent judgment upon the issues which present themselves daily in the modern world.

An understanding of history is not to be obtained through a passing grade on a compulsory course or a TV show. It takes personal interest and a desire to understand past conduct of human beings to make careful study productive.

Nor can one understand a past epoch in history by reading the work of a single writer or by watching television. Just as no one would expect to get a balanced picture of a political campaign from the writing of one candidate, or fervid speeches of his supporters, it's impossible to correctly appraise past events by a single work.

It's necessary to read and understand the theories expounded by a number of intelligent and fair-minded authors.

The experience of former generations can only be valuable if accurately reported in print and intelligently studied.

Exercise!

One of the often unrecognized killers of our time is lack of exercise.

American males more often die of heart attacks than those of any other country. Many don't get regular exercise.

Experts advise males and females to devote some time every day to exercise. One should not, of course, begin strenuous exercise at middle or advanced age without working up to it.

It's best to exercise regularly throughout life.

The world stands on three pillars: law, worship, and charity.

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa,

My children have bad table manners but everytime I try to correct them my husband disagrees with me. He says I should let the children enjoy their meals instead of criticizing the way they eat. As a matter of fact he is not a very good example to them himself. He has a habit of leaning over and shoveling in his food which doesn't look very good and he makes a lot of noise when he drinks his coffee.

My husband reads your column so I wish you would write what you think about this situation.

G.M.--III.

Answer:

Good table manners are important and should be taught to children just as cleanliness and courtesy are taught. Now by good manners I do not necessarily mean by that the ability to tell what spoon should be used for what but rather I speak of things that should be done at the table. A person who talks with his mouth filled with food or, as you say, shovels in his food; one who leaves the table without asking to be excused and who does other things of like nature gives the impression that he comes from an uncultured home and if he is among strangers it can affect his business and social life.

Children should be corrected who have bad table manners and they will probably thank you for doing so when they grow older. Good manners come naturally to people who have practiced them since childhood and those people never have the insecure feeling when dining that some of those who have acquired them late in life.

Homemakers lesson on "Home Repairs"

The Mentone Extension Homemakers met October 8th with Gertrude Hill. Co-hostess Blanche Whitmyre read "My Body" for the meditations. Vice-president, Genevieve Warren opened the meeting with the pledges to the flags, the creed and singing of "America The Beautiful" and "You Are My Sunshine."

Roll call was answered by ten members and one guest. Lois Lemier, to "a Halloween prank I was in on."

Health and safety leader, Esther Sarber, told how to treat frost bite, eye and ear injuries and nose bleeding.

Eula Smith talked about a recent naturalization ceremony she attended for the Steele children of Mentone, for citizenship.

Arma Eckert read for Cultural Arts an article about Warsaw's beloved artist, Allee Gerard. Secretary and treasurer's reports were read and approved.

Esther Sarber presented the lesson, "Simple Home Repairs." The important thing to know is where the main fuse box and circuit breakers are located. Always shut off the power if there is a problem. Every woman should have a well equipped tool box to do simple repairs. Let an electrician do a big job. Never pull a cord from the socket by the cord and buy a new cord carefully. Always be careful with electricity around water.

In absence of President Pearl Horn, Vice-president Genevieve Warren reported on the recent president's council meeting.

The meeting closed with the collect and club prayer song.

Arma Eckert won the door prize.

Delicious fall refreshments were served and an auction was held.

The November 12th meeting will be with Mary Norris.

Cholesterol study volunteers sought

The University of Minnesota is seeking volunteers to participate in a national study. The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute study is being conducted at four large medical centers: The University of Minnesota, the University of Arkansas, the University of Southern California and Lankenau Hospital in Philadelphia. The research team is conducting this trial in hopes of determining the relationship of cholesterol lowering to heart disease. The study is seeking participants who have had their first and only heart attack during the past 5 years, are 29 through 64 years of age and free of diabetes, stroke and heart surgery. Volunteers are being sought at all four of the Hyperlipidemia Study Clinical Centers. For information, persons may call the University of Minnesota Hyperlipidemia Study collect at 612-376-4494.

NIPSCO petitions to amend rate increase order

Northern Indiana Public Service Company filed a petition before the Public Service Commission of Indiana, pointing to the adverse impact of restructuring rates between classes as imposed by the Commission and the inadequacy of the rate relief granted in its September 16 order.

On June 2, 1981, through the testimony of expert witnesses, NIPSCO proposed an across-the-board increase for all classes of customers of approximately 13.3 percent. This approach would have preserved the traditional relationship between classes of customers which had been litigated before the Commission in 1975 and upheld on appeal by the Indiana Court of Appeals in 1979. The rate design was again approved by the Commission in September 1977, September 1979 and August 1980.

"As recently as July 22, 1981," Edmund A. Schroer, NIPSCO chairman, president and chief executive officer, said, "the Commission, in connection with hearings mandated under the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978 (PURPA), concluded that this long established ratemaking structure was sound and no modifications were required. In its July ruling, the Commission said 'The evidence . . . indicates that . . . NIPSCO's rates are in substantial compliance with the cost-of-service standard adopted by this Commission . . . and that no revisions in rate design are currently required to implement this standard. . . ."

"If the Commission's imposed restructuring of the rates is allowed to stand, it will result in a disproportionate burden being placed on our residential customers," Schroer said. "Residential rates will increase an average of 13.5 percent, while commercial customers' rates will rise an average of 5.4 percent and industrial customers' rates 4.2 percent, with some large industrial users' rates increasing 0.64 percent.

"Although our originally requested rate increase is fully justified by the record," the utility chairman said, "if the increase is to be limited to 6.5 percent as provided in the Commission's order, in the opinion of the Company, the rate increase should be spread across-the-board so that all classes of customers will be impacted equally.

"Our petition to amend the September 16 order not only encompasses the rate restructuring issue," Schroer continued, "but extends to the level of increase granted. The Commission ruling provided for an increase in electric revenues of $43.8 million on an annual basis. In our original request last February, we had sought an upward adjustment of $89.3 million on an annual basis.

"In our opinion the Commission order contains a fundamental error in the computation of the revenue increase necessary to allow the Company a fair return on the fair value of its property used and useful in serving the public. In our opinion, the methodology employed by the Commission runs counter to the statutes and case law governing rate making in the State of Indiana.

"Indiana Code 8-1-2-6 provides in part: '(a) The Commission shall value all property of every public utility actually used and useful for the convenience of the public at its fair value, giving such consideration as it deems appropriate in each case to all bases of valuation which may be presented or which the Commission is authorized to consider by the following provisions of this section.'

"Fair value is not a new concept. It has been thoroughly litigated and while its determination is a matter of judgement, fair value is not equivalent to original cost," Schroer said. "The methodology used, in our opinion, places exclusive emphasis on original cost rather than fair value as required by the statute thereby undervaluing the Company's property.

"In the final analysis, a financially sound electric utility is the only way that customers can be assured of dependable service," the utility chairman concluded. "Lack of adequate rate relief over a sustained period would induce an energy shortfall. This is unthinkable in our highly job-sensitive, industrialized service.

Rules for trading forms by mail

By June Fuller

Trading refund forms by mail has become one of the important keys to successful refunding.

Once smart shoppers learn of the thousands of refunds that are being made on national-brand products, they realize that they must look beyond their local supermarket for the forms required by most of these valuable offers.

Today, more than 250,000 refunders are actively trading refund forms by mail with refunders in other parts of the country.

Finding trading partners isn't difficult if you give it some thought.

Remember that neighbor who moved to Kansas City? How about that nice aunt in Boston?

Relatives, friends and even friends of friends qualify as potential trading partners. Drop them a note and ask if they are interested in trading refund forms that they find in their stores for some of those that you have found in yours.

So many shoppers have recently started to take advantage of refunds that the chances are good that they will gladly accept your offer. Including a good refund form with your letter may stimulate their interest.

How does trading by mail work?

It is very simple. We trade refund forms one-for-one. You send 15 refund forms to your trading partner; the following week you can expect to receive 15 forms back from him or her.

Here are the basic rules for trading forms by mail:

— Trades are usually made one-for-one regardless of value. It doesn't make any difference whether an offer is worth $1 or $5.

— Do not send duplicate forms.

— The forms that you send should not expire for at least 30 days after your trading partner receives them.

— We trade forms of similar quality. For example, if you send deodorant and dog food forms, you can expect similar forms in exchange. But if you send high-quality food forms, your partner should do the same.

— We don't trade cash-off coupons or forms for sweepstakes, contests and money-plus offers.

— When you receive a trade in the mail, do your best to send it back within two days. Be sure to put enough postage on the envelope.

This week's smart shopper is Louise Bennett from Union, Ky. She purchased a 4½-pound box of Aunt Jemima Pancake Mix on sale for $1.39. The usual price at her store is $2.55.

She used a 15-cent coupon to bring the cost down to $1.24. Then she sent for a $1 refund. The pancake mix ended up costing her only 24 cents.

Ms. Bennett and other smart shoppers whose experiences appear in my column receive a free copy of the refund magazine, The National Supermarket Shopper. Send your letters to me in care of this newspaper.

Here is a refund form to write for: Country Time Refund Offer, General Foods Corp. P.O. Box 5057, East Court Street, Kankakee, Ill. 60901. This offer expires Dec. 31, 1981.

Here is this week's list of refund offers. Start looking for the required refund forms, which you can obtain at the supermarket, in newspaper and magazine advertisements and from trading with friends. Meanwhile, start collecting the needed proofs of purchase as detailed below. Remember, some offers are not available in all areas of the country.

Today's refund offers are worth $7.28.

front label from one jar of mayonnaise-salad dressing. Expires Dec. 19, 1981.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Swick were their daughter, Nancy Kuhn and children, of Rochester.

The Sands reunion was held Sunday at the social room of the church with 68 attending. Those from a distance were Mrs. Pearl Hoskins of Glennie, Ill., her son Russell, and her two daughters, Esther Whitford and Helen Hutchens and Mrs. Hazel Moore of Wooster, Ohio, her son, Cyril and son, Harold and wife. The oldest one present was Pearl Hoskins, 89 years old, and the youngest was Brooke Eileen Smalley, 11 days old.

Those attending the Huntington District Annual U.M.W. meeting at Warsaw, Tuesday evening, were Fern Swick, Linda Thompson, Agnes Huff, Zeta Parker, Jane Eaton and Linda Burch.

Our community lost its oldest citizen Tuesday morning. Oma Sarber quietly passed away in her sleep. In her 103 years, 3 months and 9 days, many lives have been touched and inspired.

On Saturday, October 3rd, Melissa Fisher, Merdena Bechtol, Eva Eherenman and Ruth Igney, attended a seminar for Brethren genealogists at the Timmercrest Home in North Manchester.

Monday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smalley were Pearl Hoskins, her one son and two daughters and Zeta Parker.

The Burket firemen had their first fish fry of the season, Saturday evening, October 3rd.

Jack Thomas, Huntington District Superintendent, was guest speaker at the church Sunday morning. He helped during World Communion Service.

Everything is more beautiful when shared in love -- was the theme for the open house held Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 in the social room of the Burket U.M. Church for Zeta Parker by her nieces and nephews honoring her 37 years of teaching and 82½ years of living!! A special thanks to all who came, for all the gifts and cards and good wishes. It was

THE MENTONE GAZETTE, MAY 7, 1887 GAS

But little was done at the meeting of the Gas Company last Wednesday except to issue certificates as the amount subscribed was paid in. It is expected that by the next meeting the certificates will all be taken up and the executive committee ready to report a satisfactory proposition for putting down the well.

Warsaw is boring.
Milford's gas company has a capital of $3,000 subscribed.
They say North Manchester is sinking her drill at the rate of 12 feet per hour.
The drill is still fast in the bottom of our well (Rochester Sentinel).

Eight hundred barrels of salt water is pouring daily from the mouth of the Wabash gas well into the Wabash River. The waters have become so impregnated that whales in great schools have come up from the ocean and are being caught by the hundred at Peru (Rochester Sentinel: Sure they were!!!!)

Posterity vs. Ancestry

It is no longer questioned, it is admitted, that the blood of man is improving. The children of today are better formed, having better muscle and richer minds than our ancestors. The cause of this fact is due most to the use of Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic than any other source.

THE MENTONE GAZETTE, OCTOBER 1, 1887 THE BELLED BUZZARD

About two years ago the "Gazette" had a notice of the buzzard which wears a bell. It had been frequently seen at different points in Franklin Township. Later on, it was seen by people in the vicinity of Silver Lake. His buzzardship is now sojourning in Central Indiana as is shown by the following:

"Almost everyone has read and heard of the belled buzzard. It is a big buzzard with a tiny bell fastened around its neck. As it flies, the bell can be heard tinkling. The bell has been seen in Illinois, Kentucky, and Ohio at intervals the past four years. Newspapers frequently made mention of its appearance at different places. Saturday it was seen in Richland Township in this County. Some dogs had killed six sheep on Jim Lawler's farm. A. E. Garder and Charlie Knox were working near where the dead sheep lay. A number of buzzards were hovering over the spot. They frequently heard the tinkling of a little bell and upon closer observation saw that it was suspended from the neck of one of the birds. They could see the bell reflecting the rays of the sun and at one time the bird lit on the end of a tree and allowed them to approach within thirty feet, when the bell could be plainly seen." -- Anderson Bulletin.

Someone close drinks too much

The old myth that people with drinking problems hurt only themselves is just that—a myth. People who drink too much also hurt their families, friends, fellow workers, employers and others.

Fortunately, as more people learn that alcoholism is an illness that can be treated, they become more willing to try to help someone with a drinking problem. To help you know how to go about this, and what resources are available to help you, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has a booklet. For your copy of Someone Close Drinks Too Much, send $1.50 to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 210J, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

As a friend or a relative, you're in an especially good position to help the problem drinker. After all, you have the trust and love that's important when you take action to help someone. For you, just doing something may ease the frustration of doing nothing.

The first step is to learn about the illness and source of treatment. While reading books on alcoholism can be helpful, it's important to look for resources within your own community. Clergymen, social workers, friends, and people who have had first-hand experience with alcoholism can all be good sources of information. Ask them questions about the specific problems of the person you know. Find out where the problem drinker can turn for help.

Don't be afraid to talk about the drinking problem honestly and openly. Some people think it's not polite to bring up the issue—they say it's the other person's private affair. But, there's nothing considerate about letting someone destroy a family or way of life. And most people with drinking problems really want to talk it out. Just try to remember to remain calm, unemotional, and factually honest when you discuss the behavior and its consequences.

Finally, when the problem drinker begins treatment, be prepared to provide some support. Include the alcoholic member in family and leisure activities. Try to be patient, and live one day at a time. Alcoholism generally takes a long time to develop, and recovery does not occur overnight. Try to accept relapses with calm and understanding. But, refuse to ride with the alcoholic person if he or she insists on driving while drinking.

For more information and referral to a local community service, write to Alcoholics Anonymous, P.O. Box 459, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10017 or Al-Anon Family Groups, 115 East 23rd St., New York, NY 10010.

When you order a copy of Someone Close Drinks Too Much ($1.50), you'll also receive a free copy of the Consumer Information Catalog. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the free Catalog lists over 200 selected free and low-cost government consumer booklets.

NIPSCO requests Oct. 19 date for newly ordered rate schedules

HAMMOND, Ind. -- In response to the Public Service Commission of Indiana's October 7 amended order, Northern Indiana Public Service Company today filed new electric rate schedules. "Although the change adopted by the Commission is a move in the right direction," said Edmund A. Schroer, NIPSCO chairman, president and chief executive officer, "it does not go far enough, in our opinion, to spread the increase in an equitable fashion among all customer classes.

"If the Company's cross-the-board rate design proposal had been followed, residential, commercial and industrial rates would have been increased by an equal percentage--approximately 6.5 percent--in accordance with the amount of the increase allowed by the Commission."

The new rates filed today pursuant to the Commission order provide for an approximate 9.87 percent increase in residential rates, a 6.17 percent increase in commercial rates, a 2.2 percent increase for large industrials, and a 10.0 percent increase for other industrials. Other rate classifications were not changed.

In its petition to the Commission, NIPSCO requested that the effectiveness of the new rates be delayed to October 19, 1981 to allow for adjustments to billing programs.

Farm Bureau announces State Convention plans

Secretary of the Interior, James Watt and Bob Evans, of sausage and egg restaurant fame, are two of the speakers invited to the 63rd annual convention of the Indiana Farm Bureau, Inc., to be held December 6-8 at the Indianapolis Convention Center.

About 3,000 farmers and their families are expected to attend. They will hear their president, Marion Stackhouse, a hog farmer of Westfield, present his annual report on the state of affairs for Indiana's largest farm organization. Other speakers include Dr. A. Blair Helman, President of Manchester College, and Governor Robert D. Orr. Entertainment will include music by the Greater Indianapolis Choral Company.

Awards will be presented and special interest sessions will be held on a variety of subjects. These include energy, livestock, waste disposal, financial planning, crops, animal care, schools, human nutrition, communications, and the environment.

Resolutions submitted by the 92 county Farm Bureaus in Indiana have been acted upon by a state resolutions committee and their report will be passed on. Those national issues gaining support of Indiana delegates will be sent to the American Farm Bureau, the nation's largest farm group, for action.

An election will be held for Indiana president for a 2-year term. Also to be chosen are delegates and alternates to the American Farm Bureau convention to be held January 10-14, 1982, at San Diego, California. Indiana usually has the largest delegation of any state at this convention.

The Indiana Rural Youth, a statewide group of rural and urban singles, ages 18-28, will meet at the Hyatt Regency Hotel and the Indianapolis Convention Center concurrently with the Indiana Farm Bureau Convention.

The following is a description of the art of "Teleradiesthesia" or "Dowsing," which Mr. Steinmetz included in his letter. It is taken from the American Dowsing Quarterly Digest of Danville, Vermont, Vol. 18, No. 3, August, 1978 Page 103.

TELERADIESTHESIA FACT OR FICTION?

Has anyone taken the time to analyze just how a dowsing searching for water can take a tree branch and find water. This violates every principle of known Science, but this phenomena does work and has been demonstrated. Could the Petroleum Industry learn something from this impossible feat?

There are several theories on why dowsing works. The most plausible, at least to me, is that the dowsing believes that his instrument will react in a certain manner when water is encountered. He physically crossed the underground object and his instrument moves in a given manner.

There appears to be a subtle force between the object desired and the mind. The instrument that actually moves is a tool whereby the objective mind is notified as to the subjective activity received through the nervous system of the body. This is similar to radar, the mind acts as a transmitter and the nervous system acts as a receiver after an impulse is bounced off the desired object.

Basic physics teaches us that there are so many atoms in each molecule and that each atom is composed of electrons, protons, positrons, etc. It is generally accepted as possible that each molecule of any substance emits certain radiations or vibrations which is characteristic only of that substance.

One gentleman by the name of Mr. Lakhovsky, stated that thought is also a vibration, which is propagated to infinity at the rate of 300,000 kilometers per second. Whenever thought is concentrated on a certain object, the radiation of that thought travels around the earth in approximately one seventh of a second. This is almost instantaneous.

Now if it is possible for the thought-vibration to be in resonance with certain molecules of a substance, as with the dowsing, a person could condition his nervous system to react in a certain manner from a distance.

His mind could be mentally projected over a certain area of a map and the results would be identical as if physically being over this site. This has been referred to as Teleradiesthesia.

It is recognized that hydrocarbon exploration is attempted only after a great expenditure of time, money and thought, utilizing all known objective and scientific methods of discovery techniques.

It is possible that teleradiesthesia just might be overlooked as a subjective tool to be used as a prelude to the above by the Petroleum Industry?

Harry J. Steinmetz
2441 Wesley Drive
Indianapolis, IN 46208

[The following story sent by Mr. Steinmetz is dated Sept. 28, 1981 and appeared in the Lafayette Journal and Courier Lafayette, IN and was written

NOBODY LAUGHS AT LAWYER'S OIL IDEA NOW

Say what you want, Harry J. Steinmetz has heard it all.

When you sit in your study searching for oil deposits by feeling vibrations from a map, you learn to ignore the things people say about you.

Most people ignored Steinmetz in February 1980 when he wrote to the Tippacano County Commissioners to tell them about oil deep under the county.

Commissioner Bruce Osborn laughed when he read the letter.

Last week, Trans Continent Oil Co. of Denver announced it was leasing land in Tippacano County to explore for oil and gas.

Commissioner Bruce Osborn laughed when he read the letter.

Maybe all great ideas have to be the butt of jokes before they're accepted. Maybe Steinmetz doesn't have a great idea -- it still must be proved that oil lies here.

But one thing is certain. If people didn't take Steinmetz seriously 17 months ago, they're sure to listen more closely today. A man who is about to be proved right has more long-time believers than he ever knew existed.

Steinmetz, 55, isn't in the oil business. He isn't even a geologist. He's an Indianapolis lawyer who works in the Indiana attorney general's office.

The system he uses to search for oil can be compared to using a divining rod to search for water. Technically, the system is called "teleradiesthesia." The explanation involves terms such as "electrons," "protons," "molecules," "resonance," "300,000 kilometers per second." It's complicated.

But in a nutshell, what Steinmetz does is study maps and feel for vibrations. The vibrations tell him where oil deposits lie. He claims he's been proved right 80 percent of the times he's checked out his claims.

We're going to find out if he's right about Tippacano County.

Trans Continent is offering to lease land here on a 10-year agreement for $2 an acre the first year and $1 an acre for following years.

The company will pay for searching for oil. If it found oil, the landowner (if he owned mineral rights) would receive one-eighth of the take, off the top.

With that offer, the company will get some takers.

Steinmetz got no takers 17 months ago.

His letter was read at a commissioners' meeting and his story was told in the newspaper. But nobody contacted him. So the heck with them, Steinmetz says. "If they're not interested, I could care less," he says, right to the point.

"I sent this letter to the county commissioners and I did that for one reason," he says. "I did it so this local talent could go ahead and get together and drill oil wells in Tippacano County and keep the money in the county instead of an outsider taking the goodies out of the state."

What does he care if people don't listen to him? Not one iota. He knows he's right. His only interest is being proved right.

He also wouldn't mind one-eighth of the take. But that isn't his motivation.

Steinmetz has been finding oil this way for 25 years, and he claims to have checked in every county in the United States.

He started a young man working as an attorney for the Toll Road Commission.

"I watched people take coat hangers and find underground pipes," he says. "That didn't make sense to me. So I went to the library to find out about these things."

From reading about divining rods, Steinmetz moved into Teleradiesthesia and he's read everything on that subject there is to read.

"I've read several books on this," he says. "What I'm doing has already been done before. But I'm getting about as smart as the other people. After you've done this so many times and you're right, you get the idea you're onto something."

Still, it took five long years of work before Steinmetz could move through vibrations -- a pendulum he uses in his work. He says other parts of Indiana have oil, too. "In my personal opinion, I think Cass County is about the best place in the state for oil."

But to tell the truth, he couldn't care less whether anyone believes him. He knows. And that's what matters.

Dale Osborn is the representative here from Trans Continent Oil. He says the company is here because geologists have determined chances are good of finding oil.

But Steinmetz could have told them that some time ago. So why isn't he working for an oil company? Well, he has a good reason.

"Because they haven't asked me," he says with conviction.

"What I do is -- shall we say is not scientific," Steinmetz says. "Most oil companies hire geologists."

But if a company is interested in Steinmetz, he's down there in Indianapolis, feeling vibrations from maps, quite confident where oil is and isn't in the United States.

He's not worried that most don't believe his system. He knows people have laughed at all great ideas.

And when it comes to Tippacano County oil, nobody's laughing now except Harry Steinmetz. He's got some good vibrations.

A DIVINE WAY TO SPOT OIL HAS STATE LAWYER HOLDING 'RABBIT EARS'

To err is human, to find oil . . . divine. At least, that's what one down-to-earth Hoosier is saying.

Harry J. Steinmetz has hiked hills and prowled pastures in Indiana, Michigan, South Carolina, Arkansas, Ohio, Illinois and Florida looking for oil with a set of rabbit-ear antennas gripped in both hands.

Steinmetz is a modern-day dowsing, following the footsteps of his forked sticked forebearers who found water through divination.

"For some people the instrument (divining rod) goes down," says Steinmetz, a deputy attorney general for Indiana. "But I get a warm feeling in my hand."

However, before hitting the high-road, this 54-year-old father of three scouts for oil on the map with the help of a string and marble pendulum.

"By holding the pendulum and picturing myself mentally there over that exact spot, I get different reading," says Steinmetz, pointing to a map bearing grid-lines dividing geographical sections into smaller parts.

Steinmetz, dubbed "the crazy kraut" by a Hamilton County farmer 20 years ago, calls this pendulum prospecting.

"teleradiesthesia."

This system allows him to work at some, utilizing "a subtle force between the object desired and the mind," before any far flung footwork.

The rabbit-ears, purchased years ago in a Gary second-hand shop, are used like a divining rod to confirm the pendulum's predictions.

The lawyer claims his pendulum has pinpointed undiscovered crude in 133 counties scattered across 24 states. Twenty seven of these counties are in Indiana, including nine where Steinmetz believes more than 500 barrels per day await exploitation.

Steinmetz says he visited "very few" of the locations for antenna testing during the 25 years he has been compiling the list. He believes "spot checking" is sufficient.

"I've gone to some of the places just to prove it to myself," says Steinmetz. "Then I know I don't have to go back."

Steinmetz began dowsing in the early 1950's, when he was a lawyer for the Indiana Toll Road Commission in Lake and Porter counties during several construction projects.

"I watched people find underground pipes with sticks, coat hangers and any other thing," recalls Steinmetz. "That violated everything according to physics I knew of."

After observing the dowsers at work and reading up on the subject, Steinmetz decided to try his hand at the fork-stick. It took him five years to get his first "reading" and it has been his hobby ever since.

But pumping out the good news to an energy-starved nation has not brought a gushing response.

"I notified the federal government's Department of Energy," says Steinmetz. "And they turned around and told me how to insulate my house."

Steinmetz found similar disinterest among fellow Hoosiers. Through the years he has written to Indiana's state and U. S. senators, utility companies, colleges and universities, county commissioners and well-drilling companies with Indiana interests.

"Ninety-nine percent of the people don't believe in it," laments Steinmetz. "And a lot of people won't even talk to you because they think you're crazy."

But Walter L. Erwin, spokesman for Sun Co., Inc. at Houston, doesn't call oil dowsing crazy. He calls it "doddlebugging."

"It's the same thing as dowsing water," says Erwin, recalling several doddebuggers he met during his early career as a geologist.

"There's absolutely no scientific basis to it."

"It made you dizzy just to watch," says Erwin. The man held a door-spring with a capsule of oil fastened to the end, and then made petroleum predictions from the bounces of the spring after he stopped turning.

Erwin is unaware of any doddebugger finding oil or gas through door springs or any other crude-gauging gadgets.

He obviously hasn't met Steinmetz who claims he can predict the outcome of a drilling operation with 80 percent accuracy.

"But the people, especially the geologist, think you're nuts," says Steinmetz. "Even my wife won't talk about it."

So until someone heeds Steinmetz's call for collaboration, the secrets of rabbit-ear and pendulum prospecting will stay buried with the oil.

[In conclusion, we wish to add that . . . Mr. Steinmetz's articles are very interesting and hope the readers of the "News" agree. If anyone has any comments on the above article, we invite you to send us your letters.

File lawsuit challenging license branch system

INDIANAPOLIS -- A lawsuit asking the court to declare certain operations and provisions of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles in Indiana unconstitutional was filed by State Representatives Dennis Avery (D-Evansville) and Darrell Felling (D-Terre Haute) in the Vanderburgh Circuit Court on October 12, 1981.

The lawsuit names Michael Packard, the Commissioner of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, as the Defendant. Plaintiffs Avery and Felling asked the court to "declare certain provisions of Title 9 (Motor Vehicles) of the Indiana code as unconstitutional:

to declare unconstitutional certain procedures by the Defendant pursuant to Title 9; to establish a Receivorship over each license branch, and to collect nominal damages.

In regard to the constitutional questions, Representatives Avery and Felling stated in their lawsuit that the license branch system in Indiana is unconstitutional because it violates certain state and federal constitutional provisions. Avery and Felling charged that Indiana's license branch system forces political contributions from every person who wants to drive on Indiana's roads and highways; infringes upon one's right to free speech, freedom of association, and freedom of travel; compels citizens to support dominant political parties in Indiana with mandatory fees and taxes that are collected at the license branches; interferes with interstate commerce and travel; deprives citizens of Indiana of the use of state tax revenues; denies due process and equal protection under the law; and takes property from those who want to drive without just compensation.

The lawsuit further asks that a Receivorship be established over the license branches in order to ensure that state monies are properly collected and deposited in the State Treasury. Also, by establishing the Receivorship, Avery and Felling contend, "that only legitimate and verifiable costs and expenses are paid until the outcome of the litigation."

Reps. Avery and Felling filed the lawsuit on behalf of themselves and all the citizens of Indiana. Both Reps. Avery and Felling have authored and co-sponsored legislation in previous legislative sessions to remove the license branches from political control. None of these pieces of legislation, however, received a hearing in committee.

Diabetic meetings

There have been four meetings, at the Woodlawn Hospital on four different evenings in September sponsored by the hospital and Fulton County Diabetes Association, on diabetes survival.

Dr. Hoff spoke Sept. 2, explaining why we should follow the doctors specific direction on routine; diet, exercise and medication as prescribed. A film produced by the American Diabetes Association concerning the reactions when a person is informed they have diabetes an on-going disease for life.

The second meeting Sept. 9, was under the direction of the pharmacist at the hospital and the lab technician, explaining the different types of medication and how it is handled at the hospital. The group toured the lab which has the most sophisticated computers and testing equipment for the blood, etc.

The third meeting Sept. 23, was conducted by Bonnie Raffle, the hospital dietician. She explained the necessary reasons for following your diets and also had a film about survival and how it relates to the consumption of the proper foods and quantities.

The fourth and last meeting Sept. 30, was conducted by Marilyn Adams, a registered nurse on the hospital staff who is in charge of the diabetes education. She explained how and where to take insulin shots and different types of medication for control. She gave a little background on how we use the different food stuffs in our bodies.

They have decided to try to have another series of classes along this line in the future and anyone is welcome to attend.

"Stress"

STRESS!...an unwanted companion to everyone. Depending on how you treat this intruder often affects your health and well being.

Many of the health problems presented to the Family Physicians' offices evolve due to the patient's inability to handle the daily stresses of life.

The Indiana Academy of Family Physicians recommends the following tips for handling stress in a healthful way:

- 1) Relax creatively...learn the art of loafing.
- 2) Treat yourself to sufficient sleep.
- 3) Work off tensions...walking, running, biking, etc.
- 4) Volunteer...share your time with others for concerns of importance to you.
- 5) Avoid stress when possible. Know your limits.
- 6) Talk it over. Got a problem... bend an ear with a friend, minister or family doctor.
- 7) Learn not to dwell on problems that dwelling upon will not change. Learn to throw in the towel on certain problems and move on to a new experience.

Don't just get a furnace, get a year-round comforter

You could be comfortable all winter by installing a furnace. Or, you could be comfortable year-round, plus save money on your energy bills, by installing an Add-On Heat Pump.

The electric Add-On Heat Pump is a new development. It works like any heat pump by taking the solar heat out of the outside air and pumping it inside. And, because it supplements your existing gas or oil furnace with the energy-saving benefits of a regular heat pump, it's the most efficient heating system around.

And, that means you add-on savings with the Add-On Heat Pump.

That's probably all you care about this time of year, but next summer you'll be glad to know that the Add-On Heat Pump is also a very efficient central air conditioner.

So, if you're thinking of installing a heating system this winter, consider the Add-On Heat Pump. It's a decision you'll be comfortable with year-round, for years to come. Contact:

THE MOBILIZATION BASE BONANZA

by James J. Treires

They may have called him "Cap the Knife" when he cut federal spending in Richard Nixon's Department of Health, Education and Welfare, but in his new job as President Reagan's Secretary of Defense, Caspar Weinberger sounds more like "Cap the Pussyat." Many observers hailed his appointment prematurely, thinking he was just the man to cut the waste and mismanagement out of the bloated Pentagon and make the generals and admirals understand that the taxpayers' pockets are not bottomless.

But, alas, events have proven otherwise. Not only has Mr. Weinberger fervently supported everything in the Pentagon's wonder weapon wish list, but he has also found nothing to cut.

Pentagon reporters and other military spending buffs know that the military brass always has a big backlog of spending projects. Regardless of which party is in control, there is a strong continuity in the arms lobby's efforts to get more money out of Congress.

Like other profit-making enterprises, defense contractors prefer steady work for a long period. But needs for particular weapons change rapidly as each technological advance by one side generates a response from the other, so there is a built-in conflict between having the most modern weapons and having a long production run. This boom-and-bust aspect of the business is something the arms merchants have been trying to correct for a number of years.

There is a limit to how much money the industry can make selling weapons and supplies that the Armed Forces actually need. That's why the defense lobby came up with the clever idea of making more money by producing things the military does not need — at least not right now. They call this "building up the mobilization base." The idea goes back to our World War II experience, when the country had to convert its industries to war production while actually at war, and the "Arsenal of Democracy" provided vital support to the Allied forces.

What is unique about the defense business is that the Pentagon is so responsive to the sellers' problems that it is willing to subvert the buyers' — the taxpayers' — best interests. Who but Uncle Sam would pay somebody to produce goods that aren't needed?

Defense contractors couch their argument in different terms. They warn the Congress that when we do need additional ammunition and weapons, we won't be able to get them because there won't be any factory or workforce to produce them. Therefore, we should buy some of these things now if we want to be sure we have the facilities — the "mobilization base" — to produce them when the chips are down.

Critics ask what good is a mobilization base in a nuclear war, when a day or two of missile exchanges will destroy everything? The Pentagon responds by claiming that we must be ready for a long conventional war. The Washington Post reports that "Weinberger wants a red-hot industrial base turning out tons of ammunition and thousands of weapons within two or three years after the declaration of an emergency." Imagine that — the United States in a major war without going nuclear! Even if this scenario were believable, it would not justify a "mobilization base." Given a year or so, the amazingly flexible U.S. economy could easily convert to war production needs as they will actually exist, not as they are now foreseen by the Pentagon's myopic mobilization planners.

It looks like Secretary Weinberger has swallowed the Pentagon's story hook, line and sinker. The magic potion given to new Secretaries of Defense to convert them to the Pentagon religion has apparently worked wonders. Who but a True Believer could make the bald assertion that the Reagan plan to spend $1.5 trillion on the military over the next five years "will not have anything in the way of an inflationary impact"? With this kind of leadership, the Pentagon motto is "Anything Goes," even the mobilization base so dear to the hearts of the arms makers.

Mr. Treires is Chief Economist for the Fund for Peace.

Shaken Up!

Each year at about this time, all in good fun, we enjoy the nicely-nicely language of football commentators. One great deception is use of the term "shaken up."

At least ten thousand times this fall a player will be knocked senseless by a violent collision with, perhaps, a 300 pound brute charging into him at full force.

While the victim is, perhaps again, unconscious, or trying to stop bells ringing in his ears, the voice of the announcer will say, soothingly, that a player seems to have been shaken up. And, we hope he's all right. Yes, he's walking off the field under his own power (only a broken rib or arm)! No need for a stretcher. Fine.

Meanwhile everyone, announcers and fans, praise the teams for hard-nosed football, for hitting hard, for racking up their foes, and some fans even cheer that they want their team to hit 'em again harder.

Fashion

With clothing prices what they are, individuality is a mark of all fashions. Rather than discard last year's wardrobe, add ruffled blouses, collarless jackets or ruffled sweaters to skirts and pants.

Jewelry fashion demands larger and bolder pieces. Large pins and earrings will be seen as well as ropes of pearls.

Why is it that ladies are usually so impressed with other people, other clothes, and other husbands?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

We have been asked for help in several very interesting projects. If you have any information, please contact the Fulton County County Historical Society, 7th and Pontiac, Rochester, phone 223-4436.

The Indiana Committee for the Humanities is cataloguing projects completed by the WPA and its predecessors in Indiana. In Fulton County this would be the fish hatchery, airport, roads, anything else? Anyone who worked on WPA or any of these projects or who knows anything about them, please contact us.

The Indiana Historical Society is compiling a Speaker's Bureau List. Anyone interested in being listed as a speaker should let us know what subjects and what fees he/she desires.

The Indiana General Assembly is gathering material for a Centennial History Book, a Biographical Directory, containing personal sketches of all members. They are seeking information on the following legislators from Fulton County: Ananias Baker - House 1905; Hugh B. Holman, House 1921; Charles W. Kirk, Jr., House 1959; Rome Charles Stephenson, S 1905-07.

Questionnaires about the above legislators are available at the Civic Center Museum. If you know these people, please come in or call and we will send you the questionnaire.

TO THE EDITOR:

With the recent flooding of the Tippecanoe River in June, several families were forced out of their homes in the Talma and Leiters Ford areas. In some cases where rebuilding or extensive repair was needed, the American Red Cross was on hand to set up temporary shelter and hot meals were provided. There was also clothing and medicine available for those who needed it.

The Fulton County REACT Team No. 2631 was on hand and volunteered help with these fine people.

On Saturday, October 24th, the REACT team will hold a Chicken and Noodle or Meatloaf Supper with salad bar at the 4-H Fairgrounds in Rochester, starting at 5 p.m., with the proceeds going to set up a Disaster Fund for Fulton County. As monies were not immediately available in the county, we feel this is a worthwhile cause for us to help residents in the time of a disaster. When help is needed in such a case, a person will have help financially and no money will have to be repaid. Door prizes, grand prizes, will be given and bingo will be played.

We are extending an invitation to all to attend and help us help others, by attending this fund raising event. If anyone or any organization would care to donate any amount it can be sent and will be put into this fund. They can send it to Fulton County REACT, Box 821, Rochester, Indiana 46975.

Thank you,
Gary W. Brinson, Sr.
Vice-Pres. Fulton County REACT

Drug abuse prevention

Being a parent has its joys—but it can have its rough times, too. One of the greatest fears that parents have today is the possibility that their child may use drugs.

To give you some help on how to prevent drugs from entering your family, or what to do if they already have, the Department of Health and Human Services has a booklet called Drug Abuse Prevention for Your Family. For your copy send $1.75 to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 206J, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The truth is that drugs are available. Some, like alcohol, tobacco and aspirin are socially acceptable and are even looked upon as useful substances. Many people use these drugs everyday with little thought about how this might affect their children.

Legal drugs are available for nearly every kind of human ailment, real or imagined. Unfortunately, many people misuse these drugs by taking them for the wrong reasons, taking them too frequently, or taking several drugs in combination, sometimes creating highly dangerous interactions.

Other drugs are marginally acceptable socially, but still illegal and by no means harmless, like marijuana and hashish. Then there are the dangerous and illegal drugs—like heroin, LSD and PCP.

The easy availability of these drugs is the biggest problem. But, you can help prevent drugs from invading your home and involving your children. Remember that you are still the single most powerful role model your children have. Giving your children love and affection and consistent, fair discipline can go a long way in helping them avoid drug involvement. Also, try to stay open to your kids' problems and concerns. How can you tell if your child is on drugs? You might try asking. If you get a "yes", remember that panic or anger won't help either of you. Your child needs your support and understanding more than ever before. Be open and calm. Then try to find out what the problem is. Together you and your child can solve the problem—step-by-step.

If you feel you need some help, or if you're in a family crisis, a nearly every community has a drug hot line, or counselors and organizations that can help. Also, each state has a specific agency for drug abuse prevention, usually in the health or mental health department. These State agencies can refer you to help in your community. Or, you can write to Families Anonymous, P.O. Box 344, Torrance, CA 90501.

The final thing to know about drug intervention is that it works best when it's practiced early. Continued drug abuse not only increases the likelihood of permanent harm, but also the effects of the drugs can quickly overshadow the original problem that triggered the abuse. If you think one of your children has a drug problem, act right away, but act calmly. You can make the difference.

When you order your copy of Drug Abuse Prevention ($1.75), you will also receive a free copy of the Consumer Information Catalog. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the Catalog lists over 200 free and low-cost federal consumer booklets.

REMINDER: There is a charge to you of $1.75 for Drug Abuse Prevention.

This Winter

The most famous of the farmers' almanacs predicts this will be a heavy-snow winter in the Northeast, Midwest and Rockies. A severe cold-wave is supposed to engulf the East and South during the Christmas holidays.

For most of the country, however, the prediction is for a mild winter. And that's good news for those watching their heating bills closely.

How accurate are the farmers' almanacs in weather predictions? But then how accurate are the official forecasts? Regardless, one likes the idea of secret formulas, long-distance predictions, etc., etc. The mystery in it is just fine.

Almost anyone can tell you how to live your life.

Deer destroyed

There were no injuries except to the deer which was hit by a 1976 Chevrolet driven by Bonnie Overlander, Akron, on Tuesday, October 13 at 11:50 p.m. at State Road 114 and County Road 1400 E.

The deer was destroyed by Akron police who investigated the accident. No estimate of damage to the car was given.

RELATIVE HEATING VALUES

100	HICKORY
65	WHITE BEECH
30	WHITE PINE

TIPS ON WOOD HEATING

If you'll be living with a woodburning stove or fireplace this winter, you might find it helpful to know the relative heating values of the various woods you're apt to buy or cut for fuel. Shellbark hickory is about the best firewood of all, and other varieties compare to it as follows:

Shellbark Hickory	100	Yellow Oak	60
Pignut Hickory	95	White Elm	58
White Oak	84	Hard Maple	56
White Ash	77	Red Cedar	56
Dogwood	75	Wild Cherry	55
Scrub Oak	73	Yellow Pine	54
Apple	70	Yellow Poplar	51
Red Oak	69	Butternut	43
White Beech	65	White Birch	43
Black Walnut	65	White Pine	30
Black Birch	62

To keep insects (which sometimes hide under the bark) out of the house, all firewood should be stored outside, at least 20 feet from your home, and brought in only as needed.

If you'll be buying your wood, you should know that a cord is supposed to be a fixed measure of 128 cubic feet (a stack 8' long by 4' wide by 4' high). But, because of the open spaces left in a load consisting of large round logs, the buyer of a cord of wood made up of such timbers will receive somewhat less for his or her money than will the purchaser of a cord composed of carefully selected and closely stacked random-sized logs. It stands to reason, then, that you'll get more for your money if you always specify that some small kindling sticks be mixed with the larger-diameter timbers in any cord of wood you buy. Also, keep in mind that a cord of softwood usually weighs out to slightly more than a ton, while the same measure of hardwood tips the scales in the neighborhood of 1-3/4 tons.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued some tips on how you can obtain firewood at little or no cost. They suggest—for instance—that you visit your town dump or landfill. Trees, branches, and such that are left after storms are often discarded in such places. Also, firewood is frequently available for cutting and hauling from national forests. Check with your nearest Forest Service District Ranger for details.

Lugar returns unspent office funds for 5th straight year

WASHINGTON--The total of taxpayer dollars refunded unspent to the federal treasury by Senator Dick Lugar (R-Ind.) during his 5 years in office is $886,133, according to figures released by the Senate disbursing office.

For 1981, Lugar refrained from spending a total of approximately $159,000 from the two accounts entrusted to him. This accomplishment brings Lugar's 5-year total savings to more than $886,000, about 22 percent of Lugar's allotted funds since coming to the Senate.

Each Senator is allowed an account for staff salaries, and a separate, much smaller account for office supplies and expenses. The amounts are calculated through formulae based on the population of the state, distance from Washington, etc. Each Senator is given complete discretion over how much of the money will be spent.

"The authority to spend taxpayers' money is the most serious public trust an elected official undertakes. Our savings of more than $886,000 is only a small contribution to the total national struggle against government overspending and inflation. But I hope it will represent a keeping of faith with the people of Indiana and will demonstrate that the common sense conviction of the public is correct—substantial economy can occur in government without reductions of service," Lugar said.

Lugar pointed out that his office has answered more than 700,000 constituent letters, solved more than 10,000 individual citizen casework problems, and visited all 92 Hoosier counties each year. In addition, Lugar has combined his Indiana offices with Senator Dan Quayle (R-Ind.) to achieve even more savings for the taxpayers, while providing greater service through four offices now in the state. The joint Lugar-Quayle offices are located in Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, Hammond and Jeffersonville.

"This achievement is possible only because of the commitment of every member of my staff to a maximum of care with tax dollars," Lugar said. "Only their willingness to work with special diligence enables our office to practice as well as preach and vote fiscal integrity."

During Lugar's tenure as Mayor of Indianapolis (1968-75), Lugar presented budgets which cut the city property tax rate five consecutive years, then held the rate constant the remaining three years. When Lugar left office, Indianapolis had a balanced budget, a municipal bond rating of Aaa (the highest possible), and a 4.6 million surplus.

Energy conservation tips for Hoosiers

Energy is consumed in many different ways and Hoosiers, together with millions of other Americans, have a responsibility for conserving it. Conservation is the cornerstone of the National Energy Plan. Because energy is consumed in so many different ways, there is a wide variety of ways to conserve it and in the process save ourselves money.

To obtain the greatest conservation of energy for the least cost, one should prioritize his energy conservation activities towards this goal. A publication that will help prioritize one's activities towards these goals is "First Things First." Typical energy savings that can be attained through conservation actions are:

1. 10 percent savings - caulk and weatherstrip doors and windows.
2. 15 percent savings - insulate hot water heaters.
3. 15 percent savings - install storm windows.

4. 20 percent savings - insulate uninsulated attic (6").

This month the Indiana Energy Information Center (IEIC) is providing free-of-charge brochures and pamphlets which feature tips on a wide variety of ways to conserve energy in the home.

While the IEIC has over 240 energy related publications available for distribution, those publications that are being featured this month are the following:

- "First Things First" -- #10403.
- "Apartment Guide to Saving Energy and Saving Money" -- #10402.
- "Residential Energy Tips for Hoosiers" -- #10404.
- "Home Energy Savers that Really Cut Bills" -- #10465.
- "FACTSHEET: Energy Conservation Homes and Buildings" -- #10009.
- "Tips for Energy Savers" --

#10037.

• "Insulate Your Water Heater and Save Fuel" -- #16021.

• "Energy Savers: Low Cost/No Cost" -- #10330.

Single copies of these publications may be requested from the IEIC office by calling the toll-free ENERGY HOTLINE number 1-800-382-4631, Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. CST. These materials are provided at no cost to the caller. Written requests may be sent to: Indiana Energy Information Center, 440 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204.

Each person who contacts the Center will also receive a copy of the IEIC Publications List. The list categorizes by energy-related topic (Solar, Wind, Energy Conservation, etc.) over 200 available publications.

NIPSCO files petition on completion of distribution

HAMMOND, Ind.-- Distribution of a $15,751,616 refund, via lower gas rates, by Northern Indiana Public Service Company to residential, commercial and industrial customers will be completed about November 18, 1981, according to a petition filed by the Company today with the Public Service Commission of Indiana.

The refund began on December 1, 1980, following approval by the Public Service Commission of Indiana of a request by the utility to return to its customers an amount equal to the total number of dollars it received from four pipeline suppliers as a result of settlement agreements approved by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

As a result of the completion of the refund, the average NIPSCO residential customer using natural gas for homeheating and other purposes (147,600 cubic feet a year) will be paying about 76 cents a month or $9.15 a year more for this service, beginning November 18, 1981.

The average residential customer using gas for household purposes other than homeheating (89,800 cubic feet a year) will pay about 20 cents per month or $2.44 a year more, if the new rate schedules filed today are approved by the Public Service Commission.

This action of the utility is in accordance with an order of the Public Service Commission of Indiana to request an increase or decrease in the cost of gas to customers whenever gas supply costs to the utility have gone up or down as a result of action taken by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

NIPSCO Energy #3 Report

Large-Use Customers Have a Beneficial Effect on Residential Energy Costs

That's right! Residential gas rates are less — substantially less — than they would be if it were not for our large industrial customers.

These large customers, with their high load and utilization factors, help spread NIPSCO's fixed or overhead costs over a broader base, thereby reducing the share of these costs residential customers would otherwise have to pay.

These industrial customers do this by taking large volumes of service and using it for more sustained periods than residential customers.

Residential and commercial consumption fluctuates at different times of the day and the year which would otherwise require the investment in facilities to meet those few periods of maximum demand—facilities that would not be fully utilized. Large industrial customers, especially in northwest Indiana, utilize this service on a sustained basis throughout the year and help absorb the fixed costs other customers would have to pay. This way we all benefit—you, the industrial customer and NIPSCO.

Therefore, industrial customers here in northern Indiana not only provide jobs and taxes, but their large consumption of utility service, at a constant pace, and for an extended period of time help make all of our gas supplies more reliable and our rates lower than they would be otherwise.

Maintaining this high load factor.

We are providing as much natural gas service to industrial customers as we can. Also, we are continuing to encourage industrial and commercial expansion in northern Indiana through our own Area Development Program by supporting and cooperating with industrial development activities in the cities, towns and rural communities we serve.

By industrial growth and expansion, we can help increase job opportunities, maintain a higher utilization of our facilities, and continue to provide reliable service to you and other residential customers. At the same time we can continue trying to hold your energy costs as low as possible. Costs will go up, but the increases will be moderated and supply maintained by these programs.

Excitement buzzed through the air last Sunday at the Akron Church of God. Sunday was "Rally Day" and everyone wondered which classes would win out of the four departments.

The contest was heightened in the Adult Department by appealing to the stomach. The Home Builders Class predicted, early in the contest, that they would win and to celebrate they would have a fish fry at Orville Ellis' home. Pastor Malbone jokingly said, two weeks ago, "If they lose, they will have bologna instead of fish." They lost by a close eight percent to the Wedding Ring Class which managed to attain an amazing 156 percent, but they still had the fish fry.

The closest race of all was in the Youth Department where the difference was just one percent. The Jr. High class fought hard and brought in 24 out of 19 on the enrollment which adds up to 126 percent. But the Sixth Grade Class wasn't going to stand for that, their enrollment is 11 and they persuaded 3 over that to come to Sunday School which gave them the winning number with 127 percent.

In the Beginner's Department, the Third Grade Class made it look easy. Twenty-seven ambitious youngsters filled their little room. If there was a prize for enthusiasm, this class would win it hands down.

The young bundles of joy from the Cradle Roll Class showed everybody which class was the best. Without even a whimper, they took the grand prize of all the departments with a tremendous 200 percent. Even though, they didn't realize what they were doing, the honor is more than justified.

One other area competing was the Bus Ministry. Richard and Beth Slaybaugh's bus ran away with this award. Their bus achieved figures that no one would dare challenge. Fifty-seven occupants jammed into a purple bus -- a sight that would justify a second look. This figure of 238 percent adds dimension to an outstanding job well done.

All together, the Sunday School averaged a remarkable 126 per cent from just last week. In real numbers, attendance leaped by 101 over last year's average amount and by 80 people from just last week.

Pastor Malbone's sermon entitled, "Jehovah - jireh - The Lord Will Provide," touched the hearts and minds of many who attended the Morning Worship. Several visitors were present for this special day in the life of the church and were encouraged to continue attending.

Next Sunday is "Reformation Sunday" for all of the Church of God denomination, headquartered in Anderson. Pastor Malbone will be speaking to the congregation on the subject, "Remembering the Protestant Reformation." Also, coming up Nov. 1, a concert will be given by the group, "One In The Spirit."

The church, including all denominations, has always been a major and influential organization in the United States. Each denomination believes something just a little bit different than the others. Sometimes this difference isn't even worth the conflict it produces, but that is one of the great trues of our country, "Freedom of Religion." People can choose the congregation that best fits their personality and the way they believe. So, use the rights given by the Constitution and attend church this Sunday.

Farmers asked to nominate ASC committee

Farmers are asked to nominate candidates of their choice to be on the ASC community committee ballot, says Robert Herrold, chairperson of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

The ASC community committee election will be conducted from Nov. 27 to Dec. 7 by mail ballot. The eight ASC communities in Fulton County are: Aubbeenaubee, Henry, Liberty, New-castle, Richland, Rochester, Union and Wayne.

ASC committees are responsible for managing government farm programs on the local level. To meet the needs of individual producers, ASC committee members must be concerned and responsible individuals, Herrold said. Fulton County farmers have the opportunity to nominate persons they feel would best serve the farm community. Farmers have received petition forms by mail and are not submitting them to the county ASCS office.

A few basic considerations should be kept in mind when circulating petitions, Herrold said. In order to be valid, petitions must be limited to one nominee each, must include written certification that the nominee is willing to serve if elected, must be signed by at least three eligible farm voters in the ASC community, and must be received in the county ASCS office no later than Nov. 2nd.

Farmers may circulate or sign nominating petitions for as many candidates as they choose.

Anyone wishing to nominate a farmer for the ASC committee election may contact the county ASCS office for full details, including eligibility requirements for office holders.

"Farmers should petition for and elect those individuals they feel would do a good job as a member of the ASC committee. The election of concerned farmers to positions on ASC committees is essential in the administration of farm programs," Herrold said.

Herrold further explained that the county ASCS office welcomes all valid petitions. The opportunity to nominate, vote, and be elected to office is guaranteed to all farmers regardless of race, religion, sex, color, or national origin.

Recipe from long ago

TAFFY APPLES

Cook one cup white sugar, one cup brown sugar, one-half cup water, and one-half cup vinegar together until a small amount dropped in cold water will give a crackling sound when pressed together. Stick wooden skewers in crisp, medium sized tart apples and dip each in the hot syrup. Drain on heavy waxed paper.

Three chickens in every pot

We are what we eat and what we eat may be as much the product of the test tube as the field and farm.

Take the chicken! Back in 1930, the typical chicken was a tough, overaged bird. She didn't go to the pot until she stopped laying eggs. People ate an average of only 16 pounds of chicken apiece per year then.

Over the next 50 years, scientists bred a new kind of bird specifically for the dinner table--plump and tender. Agronomists developed higher yielding hybrid corn, resulting in a more plentiful supply of feed for poultry flocks. Nutritionists plotted perfectly balanced feeds complete with essential vitamins.

By 1980, scientists and good farm management had made it possible for one farmer to produce as many as 250,000 broilers a year. What's more, the modern poultry producer can raise this tenderer bird to eating size in six to seven weeks compared with the three to four months it took 50 years ago.

The repercussions of the scientists' handiwork have been even greater on the farm than on the dinner table. Though we are eating four times as much chicken as our grandparents were, farmers are actually producing ten times as much chicken. Most of the increase feeds the 100 million more Americans who make up the population today, and the rest--800 million pounds per year is exported.

When arranging your pots, pans, dishes, gadgets etc., try to put them on shelves, in drawers or on hooks close where you use them. This will save you many steps.

First aid film pays off

Scott Reed, a 5th grader at Akron School, used the instruction he received in a film he saw last year in Mr. Bogg's class, about choking.

His mother began choking on some food last weekend and could not dislodge it. She began turning blue, so Scott, realizing his mother wasn't kidding and really was choking, took charge. Remembering what he learned in class, he hit her on the back to remove the food from her windpipe and dislodged the food so she could get her breathe again.

This proves the need to keep using the first aid films in school - it does pay off.

Feed grain eligible

WASHINGTON - Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block recently announced that farmers can immediately enter their 1981 corn, sorghum and barley crops into the farmer-owned grain reserve.

"It is apparent this year's harvest will reach record levels," Block said. "This makes it essential that we take action to relieve the pressure on the already depressed market prices. By opening this reserve, I believe we are offering farmers another option as they begin to make their marketing decisions."

Block said farmers with 1980-crop corn, sorghum and barley currently under a regular Commodity Credit Corporation price support loan also may immediately enter their grain into the reserve.

However 1980 corn and sorghum previously entered in a reserve are not eligible for reentry, and neither year's crop of oats may be entered at this time.

Producers placing grain into the reserve will receive annual storage payments of 26-1/2 cents per bushel, payable in advance. While interest on the loan will be charged during the first year the grain is in the reserve, interest will be waived during the second and subsequent years. The current interest rate for CCC loans is 14-1/2 percent.

Under the program, farmers agree to keep their grain in reserve until the national five-day moving average market price for their commodity is at or above the reserve trigger release level of $2.55 per bushel for barley, $3.15 per bushel for corn and $5.36 per hundred pounds for sorghum, or until the three-year reserve loan matures. When the release level is triggered, farmers may take their grain out of the reserve without penalty. If the market price continues above the trigger release level after the initial release period (the remainder of the month in which release is triggered plus one additional month), farmers will stop earning storage payments. Interest charges, if previously stopped, will resume.

Earlier crop barley now in other farmer-held reserves may be transferred into the new reserve, Block said. Barley in these other

Indian(a) Day at Mentone School

Mentone's fourth graders were entertained last week by Eula Smith, local historian and teacher, as reward for their work on their unit on Indians in Indiana History. The students were treated to a taste of some Indian foods during the day - squash and popcorn. Mrs. Smith gave some local Indian history and some history of the area following the Indian trails and the Tippecanoe River. The fourth grade teachers, Pam Smith, Marge Sanders, and Lee Ann Rock, during their instruction on the unit about Indians helped the students make some Indian pottery and tomahawks. Some of the students designed the costumes they wore that day. Mrs. Smith displayed dolls dressed in Indian clothing, Indian corn, and some miniature examples of utensils and weapons used by the Indians. She answered questions and talked about Frances Slocum, religion, foods, furs, clothing, items used for bartering, and many things of interest to the students.

State Play-off info

By Jerry Kindig II

During the regular season, the Valley fans have a fairly good idea about the strengths and weaknesses of their next opponent through the mass media. But what happens at play-off time, they're left in the dark not knowing what to expect. Except for maybe one brief article that they happen to get hold of.

This season will be different, though, because the scores from all the top teams of the State will be available for the last games of the season. Thereby, giving loyal fans one extra step ahead in what to expect.

There are four Class A Districts, starting with District 9 and going to District 12. Points are accumulated for each victory according to the strength of the beaten opponent. Thus, if a team kills an outstanding team they receive a better than average than if they ran over a team that hasn't won a game all season.

Usually the top three teams in each district are the ones most likely to make the play-offs. Therefore, look down the list and notice the numbers out in front of the name as they symbolize each team's accumulated average. Also, take a glance at the margin of victory. It gives clues to the actual ability of the team.

One thing that is interesting is that Tippecanoe Valley and West Noble both have an accumulated average of 3.00. If that happens at the end of the season then the team that goes to the play-offs is decided by the toss of a coin. No, just kidding, in reality the teams play an extra game to decide the question.

Make sure to save this week's copy so that they can be compared with next weeks.

Conference for foster parents Oct. 24 - 25

Dedicated Hoosier families who offer physical care, emotional support and selfless love to foster children will be recognized at the Fourth Annual Indiana Conference for Foster Parents to be held in Indianapolis on October 24 and 25, according to Mrs. Norma Goldberg, director, Child Welfare-Social Services Division, State Department of Public Welfare.

Mrs. Goldberg indicated the two (2) day meeting will inaugurate Foster Parent Appreciation Week, October 25 through 31, as officially proclaimed by Indiana Governor Robert D. Orr.

Governor Orr's proclamation of Foster Parent Appreciation Week states that "children constitute our state's most valuable and treasured resource". He recognized "with humility and deep gratitude" the foster families who help furnish children living away from their birth parents a "home environment which is warm, nurturing and protective".

Unemployment claims continue to rise

Unemployment insurance claims rose 2,281 to 63,884 last week, according to the Indiana Employment Security Division. The comparable year-ago total was 108,014.

Holton Hayes, director, said initial claims were up at three-fourths of the agency's local offices. The availability of a new quarter's wage credits used in determining benefit eligibility and scattered industrial layoffs, were the main causes for the increase, he noted.

Hayes said continued claims were up by 1,512, because of previous layoffs in primary and non-electrical machinery, and transportation equipment industries.

Nineteen years ago today F. R. Burns baked his first "batch" of bread in Mentone.

Mr. Burns, when approached by your reported, informed us that he baked 55 loaves that day and his production has increased to over 4500 loaves a day in addition to the many dozens of other baked goods items. Then he and Mrs. Burns were the only "employees" while today the organization has 52 people on its payroll.

The bakery, which opened in a room at the rear of the Mentone Cafe Building, is now located at North Manchester but Mr. and Mrs. Burns remain citizens of Mentone and held in the same high respect and esteem as when the business was entirely in Mentone.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Pickett, of Fort Wayne, spent Monday and Tuesday visiting at the Artley Cullum home. Mr. Pickett is employed in the mailing department of the Journal-Gazette.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Long of Wabash, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Long and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Long and Sylvan of Mentone, visited at the Long home, near Tiosa, Sunday afternoon.

The Mentone Conservation Club will hold its annual fish fry on Tuesday evening, October 28th, at the Mentone School Cafeteria at 6:30 p.m. Mr. Harold Mosbaugh, superintendent of the State Hatcheries, will be the speaker and the Jonah Club, of Akron, will do the frying.

Hugo F. Arnold, Inc., of Chicago, who maintains a chicken dressng plant five miles east of Mentone, recently opened a new retail store for cut chicken at 226 North Michigan Avenue in South Bend.

The dressing plant near Palestine, where several hundred White Rock chickens are dressed daily, employs from five to ten ladies daily.

Frank D. Smith, of Mentone, accepted employment at the dressing plant this week.

Gochenour, the passenger, said she was not injured. Munson sustained facial cuts and bruises and had several teeth knocked out. She was treated at the scene by Multi-Township Emergency Medical Service and transported to Kosciusko Community Hospital. Her parents, Jim and Carol Munson, Rt. 3, Warsaw, later transported her to Fort Wayne for further treatment, according to police reports.

Connie J. Chastain, 31, Valley Forge Apt., Warsaw, complained of head pain following a two vehicle accident at East Center Street and Frontage Road Friday morning. She was also cited for failure to yield after her car collided with a vehicle driven by Arlene S. Manthey, 41, of 1518 East Market St., Warsaw. Damage to the Manthey vehicle was estimated between $1,001 and $2,500, while the Chastain vehicle was damaged between $200 and $1,000.

David W. Leiter, 34, of Rt. 1, Etna Green, received bruises on his right leg when his motorcycle was involved in a mishap with a car driven by Carl W. Burt, 29, Rt. 5, Warsaw.

The accident occurred at Crystal Lake Rd. and County Rd. 700 West, two miles south of Atwood. Leiter was charged for passing within 500 feet of an intersection, while Burt was cited for improper left turn.

County police reported Burt's vehicle turned north onto County Rd. 700 West, but the driver failed to give a signal. Leiter did not think the auto was going to turn, so he tried to pass the vehicle. Damage was listed at under $200 to Leiter's motorcycle and between $200 and $1,000 to Burt's car.

A two-car collision on State Rd. 15, just north of Milford, caused injuries to two women.

Martha Jones, 53, Rt. 6, Warsaw suffered a cut on the left knee and forehead, and Adah A. Holderman, 67, of New Paris, received a rib injury and cut lip. Jones was a passenger in a car driven by Maria E. Jones, 26, Rt. 6, Warsaw.

A collision on State Rd. 13, one and one-half miles south of Pierceton, caused injuries to Columbia City and Fort Wayne men.

Kenneth R. Sexton, 26, of Columbia City, was X-rayed and released from Kosciusko Community Hospital for complaint of chest and back pain. The other driver, John Mehalechko, 61, of Fort Wayne, a utilities engineer with the State Highway Department, suffered neck injuries and was transferred to a Fort Wayne Hospital.

County police reported the Sexton auto attempted to turn from State Rd. 13 into the driveway of a residence and failed to see the northbound State Highway Dept. vehicle. Damage was set between $1,000 and $2,500 to Sexton's car and more than $2,500 to the Mehalechko driven auto.

A Columbia City woman and her son were injured in a three car mishap on East Center Street near the Argonne Rd. intersection.

Robin D. Bauer, 20, suffered minor bleeding to the head and her son, Dennis Jr., six months, was admitted to Kosciusko Community Hospital for a contusion and bruise on the head.

The accident occurred when a van driven by David A. Wolfe, 36, of 102 Eleventh St., Winona Lake, was stopped to make a left turn onto Argonne Rd. and the vehicle was bumped from behind by an auto operated by Glenda J.

Morehead, 17, Rt. 2, Warsaw. The Morehead car was then struck from behind by the Bauer auto.

City police said the accident was caused by the light rain which caused a slippery surface on the road. Damage was placed at under $200 to Wolfe's van, and between $1,000 and $2,500 to both Morehead and Bauer's autos.

Jeffrey T. Rainwater, 16, of 509 North Grant St., Warsaw, complained of pain to the elbow, lower arm and hand, in a collision at East Market and South Maple Streets.

City police said Rainwater had stopped for a sign, proceeded to the intersection and was hit by a car driven by Ella B. Male, 51, Rt. 8, Warsaw. Rainwater was arrested by police. Damage was between $1,000 and $2,500 to Rainwater's car and more than $2,500 to the Male auto.

A passenger in Fortman's vehicle, Wayne D. Zollinger, 23, of Fort Wayne, complained of head pain. Both injured persons refused medical treatment.

City police said Burkett was making a left turn from Center St. onto Argonne, but her vehicle started sliding and eventually spun all the way around into the other lane and stalled. The auto was then hit by the Fortman vehicle, resulting in between $1,000 and $2,500 damage to each auto.

A single-car accident on Pickwick Rd., one-fourth mile east of Syracuse, injured Todd Wappes, 16, Rt. 1, Wyracuse.

Wappes suffered multiple bruises on the head and shoulders and was taken to Goshen General Hospital, where he was treated and released. State police reported Wappes was traveling north on Pickwick Rd. and for some unknown reason lost control of his car, which struck a tree. Damage to Wappes' 1979 auto was placed at $3,500.

Vikes win hands down against Squires 36-0

By Jerry Klindig II

Our own Tippecanoe Valley Vikings came off with another triumph that will, at least, assure a Three Rivers Conference tie with two games left in the regular season. If the Vikings continue down the same victory lane for these games, they will have clinched another lone TRC championship. The only fans worried about last Friday's game against North Manchester, seemed to be the coaches, as they recalled the upset over Southwood that the Squires had produced just a week earlier. These concerns were soon buried, along with the Squires, with an almost routine rout over their hosts, 36-0.

For the fifth time, this season, the Vikings' opponents have had to go home with an unsatisfying goose egg. Leading the defense, as with the other four games, was Brent Hoffman, Todd Peterson, and Brian Carnes. As each recovered a fumble and Luis Santamaria picked-off a ripe Squire pass, Valley seemed in control of the whole conflict.

The cold must have affected each team, as on their first possessions they fumbled the elusive football to the other team. The Vikings began to get warm and forced a punt by the Squires. After a ten play drive, Scott Bibler bounded in from the 4-yard line for his first of 3 touchdowns before the night ended. Valley went for the 2 pt. conversion, instead of the usual one pt. and proved they could do that also.

The second quarter was almost a carbon copy of the first. As Bibler blasted through from the four, spurred by a 10-yard run by Doug Dickerhoff. The only exception was that Valley went back to the 1 pt. conversion by Todd Utter which gave Valley a 15-0 lead at half-time.

Instead of being just warm the Vikings became "hot" in the third quarter as they scored twice. The first, a 21-yard bomb by quarterback Jeff Webb to junior Andy Alspaugh. For the second touchdown of the regular season, Valley went back to the running game. As Bibler scored his last touchdown of the evening with 3:32 left to tick away. Both of Utter's extra points were good and the Vikings had a comfortable 29-0 lead going into the last quarter.

The final touchdown of the conflict came from a 24-yard run by Hoffman and with the extra pt., the final score emerged as 36-0.

Valley accumulated some impressive statistics before the game came to a close.

In the first-down category, Valley tripled the efforts of the Squires. As always, the ground game was the major building block for the evening. Out-rushing Manchester by an almost unbelievable 194 yards. Although, the Squires did show the extent of our passing attack. As they had 86 yards to Vikings' 67 yards.

LaVillie comes to "Death Valley" this Friday for the last home game of the regular season. Troughing Triton last week, the Lancers have about the same gear rally as Valley. They rely on their ground game at least as much as Valley. While they passed for just 15-yards compared to the Trojans' 75 yards last week. This will probably be the only team we play in regular season, which as the same kind of attack as Valley.

As the playoffs come closer, Valley has tried desperately to gain the needed game experience in the passing area; but to no avail, this part of the Valley attack is still in its infancy. This major problem will have to be rectified, soon, if Valley is to look at another State Championship.

Sports in Brief

By Jerry Klindig II

GIRLS SWIMMING

The Girls' Swim Team dived past the half-way of their season last week. Two away meets, on Tuesday and Thursday, added a mark in both categories, a win and a loss.

The first night out, the swim team came home with a story to tell. They had beaten Bremen, on their home turf, by seven points, 89-82. An excellent example of pure determination to fight until the end. Also, that same night, a new school record was set by Paula Shireman.

At Goshen, on Thursday evening the joy of victory was not to be savored. Even though our girls did their best, they lost the rigid battle to a strong squad that is rated right at the top.

The last home meet of the season will be this Thursday evening, the 22nd, against Wawasee. After that, the girls will have a few days off, except there is always practice, before they hit the road again and travel to Rochester on the 27th.

BASKETBALL

Yes, that headline reads, "Basketball." Practices have already started for the off-season athletes and will shift into high gear as soon as the football season comes to a halt.

Last Monday was the first quote, "cut" of the year and left many young hopefuls with nothing else to do but wait until next season.

From all accounts, this season's team shows great potential and the willingness to learn which are the major building blocks of a successful team. As the path of these high school athletes twists and curves, look forward to the inside views and pre-season reports that will be coming your way through the Akron-Mentone News.

WRESTLING

Another winter sport that has begun practice is wrestling. Even though things are in full swing, anyone still interested in becoming a wrestler is encouraged to, at least, give it a chance.

Most people refer to wrestling as everything but a sport. Although, in reality, it is one of the oldest athletic arts.

On the high school level a style known as the catch-as-catch-can is the most popular and widely used. In this form of wrestling, the adversaries begin in the upright position, sometimes referred to as the "referee's stance." Each one then attempts to hurl the opponent to the ground, at the same time obtaining a hold which will lead to the pinning of his shoulders to the mat. Also, not many people realize that "all holds are barred that endanger life or limb."

Usually points are scored for such things as gaining the top position on the mat and for breaking an opponent's hold. If after a varied length of time, no one has been pinned. Then, the athlete with the most points wins the match.

Sometime this season, when it is convenient, go to a wrestling match and have some fun along with learning a little bit about an ancient sport.

Mentone defeats South Whitley

Mentone Jr. High Football team defeated South Whitley Wednesday night with a final score of 6-0. It was a defensive battle the whole night with a score late in the 3rd quarter with a one yard run by Rusty Zimpleman. The PAT failed.

Leading rushers were Chad Bibler with 90 yards, Rusty Zimpleman with 50 yards and Phil King had 14 yards.

The passing department was two for two.

Defensively, the team was led with Rusty Zimpleman getting 18 tackle points. Chad Bibler had 12 tackle points. John King, 10 tackle points, and a tie between Randy Paris and Phil King with 9 tackle points.

The defensive player was Rusty Zimpleman.

Offensive backs were Chad Bibler and Rusty Zimpleman and offensive linemen were Troy Kisler and Tim Lee.

Mentone's record now stands at 5-0. (Their last game was Tuesday October 20th at Caston).

School teachers are reaping the reward of the no-discipline theories about children.

ON DRIVING AGE

CHICAGO -- A report by an insurance research group suggests high school driver education programs be abolished and teen-agers allowed to drive only in the daytime as a means of saving lives. The report, compiled by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, says nearly 50 percent of all deaths of Americans aged 16 to 19 are caused by motor vehicle accidents.

Burket alley vacation

Burket Town Board members have given permission to the Tippecanoe Valley School Corporation to vacate an alley next to the Burket Elementary School, in order for school officials to begin building an addition to the school.

A summons were served Clerk-Treasurer Suzannah Kuhn by the Tippecanoe Valley School Corporation pertaining to the alley vacation. Burket trustees, however, were in agreement with the vacation and no legal action by the school system will apparently be needed.

In other matters at the town board meeting Monday, Burket was only $250 over its allowable budget, Mrs. Kuhn reported to board members. The matter can be corrected by transferring funds from the Cumulative Capital Improvement to the General Fund.

Board members approved payment of a $7,000 bill for street widening and patching in town.

The town will also be working on writing new ordinances, since Burket presently does not have enough ordinances. In previous years the town has relied on the state ordinances to cover items locally, but that has been changed now that 'Home Rule' has gone into effect.

Board members decided to set

Halloween Trick or Treat night on Saturday, October 31, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The next meeting is scheduled for Monday, November 9 at 7 p.m. in the Civic Center.

The Henry Willing Workers 4-H Club, led by Peg Arthur and Kathy Spangle, and the Henry Hardy Farmers 4-H Club, led by W. D. Cumberland, held their annual 4-H Achievement program, October 14 at the Akron Grade School.

The program began with a carry-in dinner with the meat being furnished by Farm Bureau-Henry Twp. and the milk by Paul Brucker and Dean's Foods.

The slide presentation of the 1981 4-H Fair was presented. The certificates for completion in Electricity were presented to Jeff Kerr and Brenda Wright.

The following 4-H County Achievement medals were presented: Bonita Arthur, Fashion Revue; Brenda Arthur, Home Environment; Cathy Carr, Photography; Angie Harsh, Veterinary Science; Greg Lowe, Agricultural; Sandy Pratt, Conservation of Natural Resources; Dale Miller, Entomology; Dwain Dunn, Gardening; Sandy Pratt, Photography; Teresa Brucker, Beef; Mark Kline, Beef.

The traveling trophy for the highest point level was presented to Sandy Pratt by W. D. Cumberland for the Henry Hardy Farmers Club.

The Henry Willing Workers leader, Kathy Spangle, then presented the following awards: Charms for the Club Officers, Pres. - Brenda Wright; Vice pres. - Angie Harsh and Sec.-Treas. JUNE FULLER

THE COUPON CLIPPER

Magic trick: Turning trash into cash

By June Fuller

"Do you really have a basement full of box tops and labels?"

People often ask me this question. Without hesitating I tell them that I do — but that I try to leave a little space for the oil burner and the hot-water heater.

My basement is reserved for the mining of refund gold, because that is where I keep my collection of proofs of purchase (we call them "POPs") and where I work on my refunding.

When I find a new refund form, I take it down to my desk and see if I have the POPs that are required by the offer. Since I save every national-brand POP I can find, the chances are that the four Sara Lee ingredient statements I need for that $2 refund are right there in my gold mine.

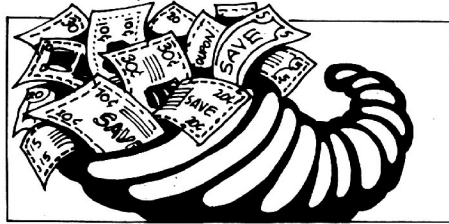

This is why refunding is often described as "turning trash into cash."

There are eight types of proofs of purchase that companies commonly ask for in their offers: box tops; box bottoms; net-weight statements; brand names, trademarks or logos; ingredient statements; Universal Product Code symbols (the black lines with the number below them); labels, and proof-of-purchase seals.

If you collect every possible POP, you can't go wrong. Rather than cut each of them out separately, I thoroughly clean the inside of the package, fold it flat and file it away.

Once a year I try to weed out my POPs, but it seems that my collection grows and grows. It now is housed in several dozen corrugated cardboard cartons.

Finding the POPs you need isn't hard if you follow a system of organization. I file mine according to the American Coupon Club's 12 product groups. These are the same groups in which my refund listings appear.

Many refunders I know file their POPs alphabetically.

Upstairs in my kitchen I keep a large carton in which I place all my empty boxes, bottles and cans. Every few days I take the labels off the cans, soak the labels off the bottles, and take everything downstairs for filing.

Is it really worth the effort? You bet it is! I rarely come out of my gold mine with less than $10 worth of new refund requests ready to put in the mail.

In next week's column I will tell you an important POP secret and explain some ways to minimize the volume of your POP collection if your space is limited.

Today's Super Shopper is Marilyn Reich of Forty Fort, Pa. Her supermarket offered San Giorgio pasta on sale at $1.09 for two 1-pound boxes; the regular price at her store is 77 cents a box.

She had two 20-cent coupons, which the store doubled. So, she paid only 29 cents for the pasta.

But she wasn't finished. When she got home, she took the proofs of purchase off the two boxes and sent for a $1 refund. It is easy to see why she is reporting savings of 50 percent and more on her grocery shopping.

Ms. Reich and other smart shoppers whose experiences appear in my column receive the refunding publication, The National Supermarket Shopper. Send your letters to me in care of this newspaper.

Here's a refund form to write for: Certo-Sure Jell Cash Refund Offer, General Foods Corp., P.O. Box 9127, East Court Street, Kankakee, Ill. 60901. This $1 refund offer expires Dec. 31, 1981.

Dear June,

I have just recently started collecting and using coupons faithfully.

Here is my newest experience:

Today I had a coupon for Betty Crocker Creamy Deluxe frosting. (Buy one - get one free). I spent $1.28 for one and got the second free. Then I sent those two UPC symbols into General Mills for another "Free" container.

So, I got three for the price of two and saved $2.56!

Now grocery shopping is a new challenge.

Non-smokers rights legislation asked

A bill restricting smoking in government buildings and on public transportation went up in smoke last March, but legislation is being struck to clear the air once again.

A survey conducted last year by Community and Institutional Research Services of Indiana University's School of Public and Environmental Affairs at South Bend, indicated a pronounced majority (70%) of Hoosiers favored the restriction of smoking in public places. It seems these 70% have good reasons for wanting the restrictions.

Besides complaints of irritated eyes and scratchy throats, non-smokers are subject to internal disturbances as well. Studies have shown second hand smoke increases heart rate, blood pressure, and decreases response time. Carcinogens, tar and nicotine are also inhaled at greater levels by non-smokers than smokers.

The American Lung Association of Indiana-West Central Region supports this legislation. Constituents of the 18th district are encouraged to contact legislators in support of this impending legislation.

The vote by the senate last year was 26-19.

ON GOLD STANDARD

NEW YORK -- A return to the gold standard would put U.S. dollars in the hands of the Soviet Union and South Africa because seventy-seven percent of the gold produced in the world comes from the Soviet Union and South Africa according to Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan.

Lease-rental agreement is denied T.V.S.C.

The State Board of Tax Commissioners have denied a lease-rental agreement for the Tippecanoe Valley School Corporation, throwing a wrench into the works of a proposed remodeling program.

The decision overturned at least part of a recommendation from two hearing officers, who conducted a remonstrance hearing last month in the Akron School gymnasium. The hearing officers recommended denial of the lease-rental agreement for the Mentone School project, but approval of the Akron-Burket School project.

The state commissioners took the recommendations under advisement and decided last week to deny the lease-rental agreement request for both projects. "They felt the total program was a little much," according to Bob Augsburg, administrative officer to the school property tax control board.

In August, petitions bearing the signatures of 322 Tippecanoe Valley patrons opposed to the lease-rental contracts executed on Aug. 4, 1981 by the Tippecanoe Valley School Board trustees were filed in the Kosciusko and Fulton County Auditor's offices.

The remonstrators objected to the execution of the lease-rental contracts with Tippecanoe Valley School Corporation, as lessee, and the Tippecanoe Valley Elementary School Building Corporation, as lessor, because they are "unnecessary and unwise" and that the taxpayers cannot bear the burden of a large debt.

After the petitions were forwarded to the state tax commissioners, a local public hearing was scheduled locally in Sept. Patrons, school administrators, school board members, and financial and architectural consultants testified at the public hearing. Just recently, the state tax commissioners decided to deny the school board's request.

It's the second time in one year remonstrators have dealt a blow to the school board's efforts to initiate a major remodeling project of the three schools. Last year, the remonstrators voiced opposition to a proposed $1 cumulative building fund tax rate. The state tax board cut the rate back to 50 cents.

Akron Town Board Meets

Several items came under consideration and discussion during the regular Town Board meeting in Akron last week.

It was reported that tires for the police car had been purchased from South End Motors who carries All Season Goodyear Tiempos.

Trustee Bud Waymire noted he had several complaints from citizens about the police car and officers being outside the town limits checking on speed limit violators between the town and the high school. Board President Ron Fenimore said he had talked with both Murphy and Kruger reminding them their first duty is to the residents of Akron.

Fenimore also noted that the street repairs contracted by Walt Gerald are finished now but the Street Department workers have a little patching to complete.

During the meeting, the absence of Trustee Charles Miller was discussed. Mill has been absent from the last two town board meetings due to illness and hospitalization. The board decided to wait until more information could be obtained as to Mr. Miller's intentions as to his position on the board, before making any statements or decisions.

Other business conducted during the meeting was:

*approval of the board to sell a lot located on Northwood Drive to Mike Tilden for the sum of $2,000. Motion was made by Fenimore; second by Waymire.

*new "no parking this side of street" signs are in the process of being ordered to replace the present ones which are beyond repair.

*although there is no burning ordinance in the town, the board asked that citizens not burn leaves after dark or on the blacktop streets because of danger of fire and costly damage to the street surfaces.

*discussed the need for placing stop signs at Rural St. and N. Maple Street due to increase in the traffic on Rural because of the extension to Schuler's Northside Apartments. Board decided to write a resolution so it may be done legally. Motion was made by Fenimore; second by Waymire.

*the receipt of a letter from the insurance carrier Blue Cross-Blue Shield, noting that the town

Pay raises approved

With one member absent, the Tippecanoe Valley School Board met in regular session Monday, Oct. 19 at their regular meeting place and approved all claims totaling $70,218.44. Payrolls were approved in the amounts of $56,734.21 and $67,727.15.

The board accepted the bid from Boggs Nelson Insurance on the outside facilities insurance. The bid was $243.00 annual premium on coverage of $260,000. This policy was to be an addition to the present insurance policy on the building.

Superintendent Paige recommended that Ed LaMar be re-appointed to the Area Library Services Authority Board of Directors for another term, noting that he has done a fine job for the corporation in this position. This board directs the service for films and film strips and any books that are not available in the school library, which are needed by students or faculty.

An increase in paychecks will be coming to the corporation administrators in the amount of 5 1/2 to 7 percent above their present salaries, retroactive to July 1, 1981. The board members approved separate salary scales for administrative and non-instructional personnel. Mr. Paige told the board he had hoped to wait until negotiations with the teachers on their contracts had been concluded for this school year (81-82) but the negotiations were dragging, and he felt it was not fair to delay the increases for non-teaching personnel any longer. He noted these pay scales would be reviewed again when teacher negotiations are finalized.

During other business, the board voted to increase mileage reimbursement from 17 cents to 20 cents per mile for personnel who use their own car on school business; appointed Paul Knoop of Burket Agri-Services and Dale Gordon of Newcastle Township to the Tippecanoe Valley High School Agricultural Advisory Committee; granted professional leave requests to Juna Graham and Ed LaMar to participate on the North Central Schools Evaluation teams. Mrs. Graham will participate in evaluations at Centerville High School, November 3 - 6, and LaMar at Kankakee Valley High School, Jan. 19-22; granted maternity leave to Vicki Smith from Dec. 7, 1981 thru Feb. 27, 1982, plus her accumulated sick leave days.

The board also granted out-of-state professional leave to Marsha Teel and Joanne Wortinger to attend a Classroom Management Seminar in Detroit, Michigan on November 13th. The corporation will pay registration fees of $75 each and granted one day professional business leaves. The women will pay their own travel expenses, meals and lodging expenses.

The board granted permission to board members and the superintendent to attend either the American Association of School Administrators annual meeting in February or the National School Boards' Association annual meeting in April. Members are to make arrangements for their choice with Mr. Paige.

The school board members heard reports from the principals present and Mr. Wortinger on school activities. Mr. Jack Fisher, was attending the Open House at Mentone School and did not attend. Dan Kramer, Akron School, noted their Open House would be Tuesday at 7 p.m.; there was to be a sock hop at the gym on Wednesday evening, sponsored by the Akron Volunteers and a Halloween Party on Monday, the 26th. The Fall Banquet honoring the Akron volleyball and football teams will be held Tuesday, Oct. 27 at 6 p.m. Parent-Teacher conferences will be held in Akron and Mentone Schools on Nov. 5 and 6. There will be no school during those two days. Kramer also noted the good work done by the new guidance counselor and the testing that is being done in 2nd, 4th, 6th and 8th grades. Oliver England, Burket School, noted the students at Burket are

Local author publishes second book

Ann Kindig Sheetz's second book, Someone Has to Pop the Corn, has been released by Christian Herald Books. It is available through the publisher's distribution network and two book clubs, Family Bookshelf which is distributed by Christian Herald, Farm Journal and Grit, and Christian Book Club for Today's Woman.

Mrs. Sheetz, former editor of the Akron-Mentone News and now assistant cashier and marketing director at Akron Exchange State Bank, says the book has nothing to do with popcorn. "It was written to show that the answer we pray for is not always the answer to our prayers," she explains. "And to demonstrate that in God's newsroom He has need for someone to add the fluff to life-to pop the corn."

Like her first book, Born Again, but still wet behind the ears, the primary characters are her husband, Loren, and their sons, Todd and Doug. Other people in the book are fictionalized composites of individuals the Sheetzes met and worked with during their fifteen years in the newspaper business.

Club has lesson on apples

The Perry Home Improvement Club met at Galahan's Restaurant on State Road 31.

Emma Burns and Helen Miller as hostesses made plans for the day. At noon 17 ladies enjoyed a lovely lunch. Emma Burns said the prayer for the group. Others present were Alice Teel, President, June Merley, Ora Glasford, Aurel Musselman, Gladys Personett, Faye Eaton, Majorie Miller, Marie Berger, Marie Coon, Marie Long, Marie Nestleroad, Pauline Miller, Helen Byrt, Arlene Gearhart, Ruth Bammerlin, and guest Rev. Nell Loughheed. Each present signed Get Well Cards for Pauline Shoemaker and Bonnie Walters.

At 1:30 the group joined ladies from other county clubs for a Lesson about apples, at Tates Orchard.

Mrs. Sherman Kantzer welcomed the ladies, and told them that apples are related to pears and quinces. They grow mainly in the temperate zone.

In 1692 the Governor of Massachusetts planted the first apple tree in this United States. Later John Chatman, known to all as Johnny Applesseed gathered seeds from Eastern Cider Mills and traveled throughout the Ohio Valley planting apples from seed.

These were the root stock trees for grafting our various kinds of eating apples. It took 7 to 11 years before the trees would bear a full crop.

Apples must be thinned to 6 inches a part in clusters of 3 if you plan for a crop each year.

When the apple seeds are brown, it is time to pick. They will ripen off of the tree if refrigerated at 32 degrees to 40 degrees. The fruit will keep for a year.

The ladies enjoyed the displays of apples, pumpkins, gourds, corn shucks, etc. Also, honey, apple butter, cider, candies and other goodies were on display. The showrooms were artistically decorated.

Each one present was given a sheet of apple recipes.

SAD ACCIDENT

A sad accident occurred about three and a half miles east of this place Monday evening. Elias Burkett, an aged man, while driving from his home with a team, his horses became frightened and started to run, throwing him from the wagon, in such a manner as to dislocate his neck. He lived but a few minutes. Mr. Burkett was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, December 9, 1812; died May 14, 1888, aged 75 years, 5 months and 5 days. He was an honest man; a good citizen, and leaves a wife, seven children, two sisters and four brothers to mourn his loss. The remains were interred in the Palestine Cemetery, witnessed by a large concourse of friends and relatives. The funeral services were conducted by the writer.

WHAT WE WISH OUR FRIENDS TO REMEMBER

When we began publishing the GAZETTE we had nothing to encourage us except our confidence in the town and our belief in the possibilities of establishing a business here by hard work.

We have worked hard, many a time all night, to get the paper out when we could not afford to hire the help needed.

We have never asked our business men or anybody else to advance us a penny to help us through; neither have we bored them by urging them to patronize the paper but have left them to exercise their own judgment in the matter and it was all right with us.

By careful economy we have kept the office free from debt, and have made continued additions to it until now we have a first-class valuable printing establishment. We are putting all our means into the business here, having begun making arrangements to build. The value of our newspaper outfit now consists largely in the fact that we have it located among friends who appreciate our work. We mention these facts because two citizens of our town are just now doing their utmost to injure the GAZETTE. Neither of them takes the paper, but both, on account of certain things which we have published have taken such an unpardonable offense at us that they will not deign to speak to us on street, these two within the last two weeks have been interviewing the business men of the town for the purpose of inducing them to withdraw their patronage from the GAZETTE, hoping thereby to frighten us into selling out to a stranger who has no money, not even to make a first payment. Of course we do not anticipate annihilation just yet, but we are willing that our readers should know of some of the difficulties to be met by a newspaper publisher at the hands of narrow minded persons who are willing to sacrifice the best interests of a whole community, if by so doing they can gratify their own personal spite.

A Big Factory to be Established at Mentone

Employment for 100 Men

Come to the Opera House Next Saturday and See About It.

The necessity of establishing of factories in Mentone, that will give employment to our citizens who depend upon their labor for a living, is unquestioned, and we have frequently called attention to this fact through these columns, but it takes something more than a "protective tariff" to erect buildings and buy machinery. It takes earnest effort and encouragement on the part of the people.

We are glad to note that the citizens of Mentone are working up to the emergencies of the case. A meeting has been called for next Saturday evening at Opera Hall, when all who are interested in the continued prosperity of Mentone are requested to meet for consultation on the scheme for the creation of a large two-story wood-working establishment.

The plan of operation as suggested is to raise by subscription about $1,000 to be placed in the hands of Lesh and Doddridge who will undertake to erect the building and the carrying on of the business.

Let us all turn out and let the merits of the case be thoroughly discussed.

THE MENTONE GAZETTE, OCTOBER 25, 1888

The business men's meeting at Opera Hall last Saturday evening was fairly attended, and considerable enthusiasm was manifested. But owing to a want of complete harmony of action nothing definite was accomplished, except to appoint a committee to make further investigations into the possibilities of the situation. G. R. Craft, C. E. Doane, S. S. Mentzer, J. W. Burwell and A. C. Manwaring compose said committee. Messrs Lesh and Doddridge are preparing definite propositions to be submitted to the committee, and it is quite probable that the present chaotic state of affairs will settle down into something solid. The stock company which has been under consideration for some time is assuming shape and we hope to have something more interesting to say about both enterprises in the near future.

Nylon, that test tube combination of coal, air and water, was the first synthetic to achieve commercial success. It was first produced in 1928 and introduced to the public in 1940 in the form of hosiery.

NIPSCO submits plan for filling at Bailly

Unemployment claims reduced

HAMMOND, Ind. -- Northern Indiana Public Service Company has voluntarily submitted plans to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for restoring the site of its recently cancelled Bailly Nuclear Plant to its original condition.

In a letter to Harold R. Denton, NRC's director of nuclear reactor regulation, NIPSCO said the excavation will be backfilled with the same or similar material which was removed during the preliminary stages of construction. The Bailly site in Porter County was purchased by NIPSCO in 1932 for the specific purpose of building future power plant additions. The site presently consists of approximately 350 acres. The excavation for the nuclear unit is located between the existing coal-fired units on the east, on the north by the coal conveyor facilities between the coal storage pile and the coal-fired units, the coal storage pile on the west and on the south by Bethlehem Steel Company.

H-piles, presently installed in the excavation will be cut off, left in place and covered over when the excavation is backfilled, the report said. Sheet piling within the excavation for the main building complex will be removed, if practicable.

Also scheduled for removal are well points and their associated headers as well as a meteorological tower and an instrument building located in NIPSCO's Greenbelt. Dewatering pumps located within the excavation have already been removed.

The report indicated that the slurry wall, sheet piling which forms the perimeter of the excavation for the main building complex, dewatering pump casings, a test well and drains and observation well pore pressure transducers will be left in place and covered over when the excavation is backfilled. The groundwater observation monitoring wells, all located outside the excavation, will be capped and left in place.

Several office and storage facilities, built during the initial phase of construction to support anticipated future building activities, will be left in place and utilized by other departments and units servicing the company's two coal-fired units located at the site.

These include the nuclear staff office building, construction warehouse, civil test laboratory, sewage treatment plant and a 34.5 kilovolt electric power line.

According to the report, various other NIPSCO departments are now occupying much of the office space left vacant as a result of nuclear staff personnel reductions.

The 34.5 kilovolt line will be left in place to supply power to the buildings as well as the wastewater treatment plant substation recently constructed for the two coal-fired units at the Bailly site. These units were built on the Bailly site in 1962 and 1968.

NIPSCO intends to seek interested buyers for certain equipment purchased for the nuclear unit and dispose of it as soon as practicable, the report said.

Since 1974, when the utility was granted a construction permit for the nuclear unit, NIPSCO has conducted an ecological monitoring program to provide data on the effects of plant construction on the local environment. During this entire time, the monitoring program found no discernible effects of the plant's construction on the local environment.

Unemployment insurance claims fell 4,446 last week to 59,438, according to the Indiana Employment Security Division. The comparable year-ago total was 100,456.

Holton Hayes, Division director, said initial claims decreased in almost three-fourths of the agency's offices following the previous week's increase when a new quarter's wage credits became available.

Continued claims decreased in 61 per cent of the offices as scattered recalls occurred in the electrical and nonelectrical machinery and transportation equipment industries, Hayes said.

The best way to keep up with the news is to read a good newspaper regularly.

Indiana fuel supplies sufficient

Winter fuel supplies should carry Indiana through the heating season, even though the first frost of the season came ten days earlier than expected.

This good news comes from Lt. Governor John M. Mutz, director of the Indiana Department of Commerce which includes the Division of Energy Policy.

Temperatures and precipitation are expected to remain near the seasonal norm, and the heating season is expected to start ten days earlier than usual, but the lieutenant governor explained that Indiana's heating fuel supplies will be more than adequate.

The heating and grain drying seasons will overlap more than usual this year, creating a demand increase of 25 percent. Mutz said that most farmers have anticipated the overlap and have stockpiled propane. Indiana's major propane suppliers foresee no difficulty in meeting the needs of the upcoming heating season.

Indiana's major gas utilities report the supply outlook for the 1981-1982 winter heating season is excellent, said Mutz. In fact, Indiana Gas Company reported to the commerce department that supplies of natural gas are the best that they have been in years. Storage is full and pipelines are able to supply the full requirements.

Suppliers of petroleum products reported to the commerce department that there is no reason for concern about the availability of their fuel. The demand for refined products has steadily declined as a result of conservation efforts, said Mutz.

He said that coal supplies look especially good for this heating season. A survey of major electric utilities found supplies to be adequate. A representative of one coal company said that 1981 demand is expected to be similar to 1980 demand. A spokesman for another coal company noted that production capabilities with his company have increased ten percent, but so far the sale of coal is down approximately five percent.

The lieutenant governor noted that in 1980, 50.6 million tons of coal were used in Indiana of which 44 percent was produced in the state.

NIPSCO
Energy #3
Report

Large-Use Customers Have a Beneficial Effect on Residential Energy Costs

That's right!

Residential gas rates are less — substantially less — than they would be if it were not for our large industrial customers.

These large customers, with their high load and utilization factors, help spread NIPSCO's fixed or overhead costs over a broader base, thereby reducing the share of these costs residential customers would otherwise have to pay.

These industrial customers do this by taking large volumes of service and using it for more sustained periods than residential customers.

Residential and commercial consumption fluctuates at different times of the day and the year which would otherwise require the investment in facilities to meet those few periods of maximum demand—facilities that would not be fully utilized. Large industrial customers, especially in northwest Indiana, utilize this service on a sustained basis throughout the year and help absorb the fixed costs other customers would have to pay. This way we all benefit—you, the industrial customer and NIPSCO.

Therefore, industrial customers here in northern Indiana not only provide jobs and taxes, but their large consumption of utility service, at a constant pace, and for an extended period of time help make all of our gas supplies more reliable and our rates lower than they would be otherwise.

Maintaining this high load factor.

We are providing as much natural gas service to industrial customers as we can. Also, we are continuing to encourage industrial and commercial expansion in northern Indiana through our own Area Development Program by supporting and cooperating with industrial development activities in the cities, towns and rural communities we serve.

By industrial growth and expansion, we can help increase job opportunities, maintain a higher utilization of our facilities, and continue to provide reliable service to you and other residential customers. At the same time we can continue trying to hold your energy costs as low as possible. Costs will go up, but the increases will be moderated and supply maintained by these programs.

GUEST EDITORIAL

A STRIKE AGAINST INFLATION?

by James J. Treires

Sometimes a crazy idea turns out to be not so crazy after all. I came up with one the other day.

It's about inflation. Contrary to what the government tells us, inflation does not hurt everyone. If it did, we wouldn't have any. But it does hurt the great majority of Americans trying to make ends meet. Inflation has brought unemployment, record high interest rates, and mortgage terms that have all but destroyed the home-building industry.

But perhaps the most damaging thing about inflation is that it disorients people. If you earned $20,000 in 1973 and paid twenty cents for a cup of coffee, you might now be earning $40,000. But it still rankles you to pay forty cents for the same cup of coffee. Not many of us can mentally adjust to rapid changes in prices.

Before the era of rapid inflation, the prices of basic items were fixed in people's minds. I have a friend who simply refuses to pay fifty cents for a tomato, and even though an economist should know better, I myself was jarred at the supermarket last winter to see four neatly-wrapped tomatoes priced at $3.72! I thought I must be in the meat department.

I'm sure most of you have had similar experiences, and you're just as angry about inflation as I am. But what can we do about it?

We have tried the political process. We got rid of Lyndon Johnson after he tried to finance the Vietnam War without raising taxes and thus began the new era of high inflation. Richard Nixon came into office promising to turn inflation around, but except for the wage and price controls that held prices down long enough to get him reelected, he accomplished nothing.

When Nixon left, Gerald Ford and his silly WIN buttons took over, but inflation continued. Jimmy Carter was elected partly because people thought Ford's policies were ineffective, but his own program for fighting inflation operated in reverse. His contribution to the war on inflation was to double the rate during his four years and make "double-digit" a household word.

This brings us to our current leader, Ronald Reagan, the Keynesian in conservative clothing. Although his brand is called Military Keynesianism because its excessive spending is for the Pentagon, not the people, its fiscal result is the same—a huge federal deficit made much worse by a heavy cut in taxes that nobody really asked for and nobody but the rich will benefit from.

So what can we do? Well, here is my crazy idea: Let's call a one-day Strike Against Inflation. I mean a general strike; everybody in the country would stay home from work. We would parade down Main Street with banners like "Stop Inflation or Else" or "Balance the Budget NOW" or "If You Can Balance the Budget in 1984, Why Not Now?"

What we want to do is show the President and our Congressmen that we are dead serious about this and we won't be put off any longer. Social Security pensioners don't want cost-of-living raises; they want a stable dollar. Bankers don't want variable-rate mortgages; they want a stable dollar. Car-buyers don't want longer term loans; they want a stable dollar.

The 1983 federal budget will be in preparation this fall and winter. A good time for a General Strike Against Inflation would be early next year. It would have to be a workday or it wouldn't be a real strike.

Just picture it: employers and employees, bankers and construction workers, stockbrokers and pensioners, federal workers and farmers, waitresses and realtors, policeman and insurance salesmen all on one picket line. Maybe 100 million people acting together on one day would convince the politicians that we're mad as hell about inflation, and we're not going to take it any more.

TO THE EDITOR

So many people have headaches and feel bad. Why not get up and say, "This is a great day to be alive." Go out for a walk around the block. Look at the beautiful flowers. Smell the fresh air. Smile at someone who is downcast. Cook a good breakfast. Make a cup of hot chocolate or a cup of saffra tea; leave the coffee alone, as it is a depressant. Plan your day. Do something for someone. Laugh. Go to church; some church should have services every morning. Take holy communion. Go to work; say, "This place could not run so well without me." Say, "Everyone cares for me." Get all bitterness out. Say a prayer for our elected officials. Don't say, "I am retired" but say, "I am starting a new life to make the world better." Call someone; greet him or her with, "It's a lovely morning." If it's raining, go out for a walk in the rain. Get wet. Have fun. Send your grandchild a two-dollar bill for Halloween. Write five letters to people; it will only cost one dollar. Go out to lunch with someone. Use one-half of your lunch period to take a short nap. In the evening, work a few minutes in the garden. Surprise your preacher by going to prayer meeting. Eat a cup of crackers and milk. Turn on the TV, so you will have the pleasure of turning it off. Say your prayer after reading a chapter from the Bible, go to sleep. Goodnight.

Garrett H. Phillips

Dear Editor:

I am writing in reference to the class size of the second grade at the Akron Elementary School. I am very disturbed with the attitudes of some of our board members.

I was told by a board member that since I was a concerned parent, my child would learn. He stated that children who didn't learn to read come from homes where the parents don't care anyway. Could this board member's attitude be supported by any educational data? I fail to find any.

My child is in a classroom of 30 students. He is learning. But he is very fortunate in that learning is not difficult for him. What if he had a learning disability? Would he be able to get the one-to-one relationship with his teacher that he would desperately need in a class of 30? No.

I would like to list some things required of a teacher. 1. Preparing lesson plans. 2. Preparing visual aids. 3. Presenting lessons. 4. Preparing follow-up lessons for very difficult assignments. 5. Grading papers. (anywhere from 150 to 300 a day) 6. Working with students at recess (her only break) 7. Having playground duty. 8. Attending teacher oriented meetings. 9. Attending extra-curricular activities. 10. Counting lunch money. 11. Filling out permanent records. 12. Doing report cards. 13. Bandaging knees. 14. Coping with upset stomachs, divorce and death. 15. Maintaining discipline. This becomes more complex with a higher number of students.

I know from my experience as a teacher that it is much easier to work effectively with a smaller number of students. I have 20 students this year and I am able to supplement their program with extra projects, learning centers, and self-discovery activities much better than with a larger class.

A comment was also made by a board member that he was in a large class and he did all right. Is all right satisfactory to parents? People used to have wringer washing machines that did all right. Would they use them now when something much better is available? We are modernizing our buildings and our athletic facilities. Shouldn't we be modernizing our academic strategies, also?

Parents, please don't just sit back and say, "my child is doing all right." What about that unfortunate one who isn't? If his parents don't care, who will? We must!

I think we have been stalled too long for remedial action this year. I would hate to see any child uprooted now. They have become very fond of their teachers. But what about the future? Are we going to sit back and watch our children's educations being jeopardized? Please support us.

THE ANSWER

The little girl who received her reward in Heaven, at the age of eleven.

First what happened to Dad and Mom after the funeral, they could not eat, sleep, talk, do nothing, but cry. A few days went by, and then they went to this soldier boy, and asked what shall we do. He told them to study Acts 2:38 and read the book of Job. They did, today he is the pastor of the old log cabin, his wife, the song leader. The old pastor could not take it either, one day they found him beside his bed. He too went to meet his reward, Good old grammar, soon she left also.

If I hear from a few of you, that reads this, I will then write the little girl's last Testimony, it was more of a sermon.

JUNE FULLER

THE COUPON CLIPPER

Build your proof-of-purchase collection

By June Fuller

One of the secrets of successful refunding is never to throw away an empty package until you have used it at least twice.

This means that after I cut out the box top from a package of raisin bran to take advantage of a refund offer, I put the remainder of the box back in my proof-of-purchase file. The chances are that the manufacturer will soon make another offer asking for a different proof that I can cut out from the same package!

Does this happen often? Yes, it does. For smart refunders, proof-of-purchase "lightning" can strike the same package two, three and even four times! (Four is my record.)

That's why I save every possible proof of purchase.

Many refunders don't have the space for a vast collection of box tops and labels. Here are my tips for cutting your collection down to appropriate size.

— Instead of saving the whole package, cut out the important proofs such as the box top, the net-weight statement, the Universal Product Code symbol and the proof-of-purchase seal (if there is one).

— If you decide to cut out the individual proofs, be sure to write the brand name and size on the back of each of them. I keep small proofs in see-through plastic bags so that I can look them over without having to remove them.

— To reduce your space requirements further, carefully peel the label portion of the proof away from the cardboard backing.

— Some refunders who don't mind being outfoxed now and then save only the "popular proofs." These are the proofs that the big companies are requesting currently. Green Giant, for instance, almost always asks for ingredient statements, so you may only want to save these proofs from the Green Giant packages.

— You can make up your own list of "popular proofs" by recording the proofs mentioned in my refund listings. Within a month or two you will have a good idea of what the major companies are asking for and you can save accordingly.

But be warned! The only sure way to have the proofs that a new offer may require is to save everything!

In my next column, I'll tell you about the wonderful time I had at the Rochester Refunders' Convention.

Today's Super Shopper is Lee Murphy of Beverly, N.J. He tells of purchasing all the Scott paper products needed for the company's "45 Worth of Coupons" offer using store sales and double coupons for a total cost of less than $5. When the $5 worth of coupons arrived, a local store was offering triple-value coupons. So, he really cashed in.

Murphy and other readers whose smart shopping experiences appear in my column received a copy of the refunding magazine, The National Supermarket Shopper. Write to me in care of this newspaper.

Here's a refund form to write for: Purina Special Dinners Refund, P.O. Box PL-14112, Belleville, Ill. 62224. This offer of a $1 refund or $1.50 worth of coupons expires July 31, 1982.

Here is this week's list of refund offers. Start looking for the required refund forms, which you can obtain at the supermarket, in newspaper and magazine advertisements and from trading with friends. Meanwhile, start collecting the needed proofs of purchase as detailed below. Remember, some offers are not available in all areas of the country.

Today's refund offers are worth $17.75.

Quayle works to save 100 Amtrak jobs

WASHINGTON--U.S. Senator Dan Quayle (R-Ind.) announced recently that "as the result of meetings with Amtrak officials, the number of layoffs at the Beech Grove maintenance facility has been reduced from 225 workers to 125 workers."

Quayle met with Amtrak President Alan Boyd after being informed of the proposed layoffs. The Indiana Senator received a letter from Boyd which stated that "developments" had led to the decision to "reduce the number (of employees) to be furloughed." Quayle said he had pledged his "active participation in attempting to bring new business to Beech Grove." The facility has been seeking to bring in rail cars from other companies—including subway cars, and rail cars from other countries—to be refurbished at that facility.

"I will work with Amtrak, with other Federal officials, and with as many State and local officials as necessary to insure that there is a continuation of work at Beech Grove," Quayle said. "I feel strongly that public officials have to do more than go to the floor of the Chamber and deliver speeches. I'm ready to roll up my sleeves and go to bat for the employees by increasing the amount of work to be done at the Beech Grove facility."

A.S.C.S. corn loans available

After the fall harvest, farmers will decide how much corn to sell and how much to hold for later sale in hopes of higher market prices. Current prospects for near record feed grains and somewhat lower prices could cause many producers to opt for the commodity loan program administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"Farmers who have suitable storage on their farms or the use of an approved warehouse are eligible to obtain a price support loan on their 1981 corn crop," Fulton ASC committee chairman Robert Herrold said.

Loan rates per bushel for Fulton county's feed grain crops are $2.45 for corn and $1.35 for oats.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture forecasts a 7.94 billion bushel corn crop for this year, 16 percent more than last year and the second largest crop on record. Department officials also predict large crop of sorghum, barley and oats.

Per bushel farm prices for the season may average between $2.70 and $3.15 for corn, $2.50 and $2.90 for sorghum, $2.35 and $2.60 for barley, and $1.65 and $1.85 for oats.

The ASC commodity loan program provides farmers with operating cash and allows them to hold their crops off the market and benefit from price increases that often come after harvest. Although the program does not guarantee participating farmers a profit, it does guarantee a minimum price.

The ASC official said farmers can store the grain for as short a time as they wish or for as long as nine months.

The interest rate on commodity loans is now 14-1/2 percent but will be adjusted on Oct. 1 and April 1 to reflect the cost of borrowing money from the U. S. Treasury.

Doing MORE...With LESS!

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

GREAT-GRANDDAD'S MOUSETRAP

Great-Granddad seldom wasted money on store-bought mousetraps. Instead, he controlled the little rodents that raided his pantry with a device consisting of a bucket half full of water, a board, a sheet of brown paper, some string, and bait. You can too... once you know his trick.

Cover the partly filled pail with brown paper (cut from a large grocery sack), held taut and in place with string. Then set the pail in a corner of the utility room, kitchen, pantry, barn, or wherever the unwanted guests are gathering.

Use a piece of scrap lumber to make a ramp from the floor to the top of the bucket and put a small mound of bread, bacon, walnut meats, or some such treat in the center of the pail's paper top. It's also a good idea to suspend an attractive chunk of bait directly over the rest of the mouse food.

Let the critters gorge on this feast for two or three nights (replace the bait as necessary) until the whole tribe gets in the habit of freeloading on top of the bucket. Then use a razor blade or very sharp knife to carefully slit an "X" in the center of the pail's cover (directly beneath the hanging bait)... thereby creating a trap that automatically resets itself.

A quick dump of the bucket the following morning should dispose of most every troublesome mouse in the group.

It always helps to have more than one technique up your sleeve, so here's a means of protecting your pantry against any rodents who escape the bucket trap!

Merely take an old dinner plate, a bowl (about one quart in size), and a thimble filled with a mice-enticing goodie. Place the bowl upside down on the plate with one side of the bowl propped up on the side of the thimble. (The open end of the food-filled thimble should face inside the bowl.)

When the critter nibbles on the bait, the bowl will fall and make it a prisoner. You can then drop the whole shebang into a pail of water (or otherwise dispose of your unwanted visitor as you see fit).

Although the death of any creature is hardly a joyous event, the elimination of rodents—which pose threats to the health of animals and humans alike—is sometimes a necessary task. The methods described here may help you control your rodent population efficiently and cleanly.

Mentone E.M.S. asks for help

The Mentone Four Way E.M.S. had an emergency call to cover a farm accident this week. How long will it be until we no longer have an ambulance service to answer these calls?

The Mentone E.M.S. has a real need for more E.M.T.'s or drivers.

Do you have some time you can donate to a worthy cause? Maybe your own family will need these services tomorrow. We would like to start a class here at Mentone if we can get enough people to start one.

If you can help or are interested in taking the class please contact any E.M.T. or call 353-7955.

South Mud, Pleasant lakes stocked

Two northwest Indiana lakes, South Mud Lake and Pleasant Lake, were stocked with a total of 1,005 tiger muskie recently by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), according to DNR Director James M. Ridenour.

South Mud Lake and Pleasant Lake, both in Fulton County, received 470 and 535 muskie respectively.

The tiger muskie, a fast growing hybrid cross between a northern pike and muskellunge, were six to eight inches long when stocked. They are expected to reach the legal size of 30 inches by 1983. Legal size muskie have already been caught in Indiana's Lake-of-the-Woods, which received its third muskie stocking this year.

The three northwestern tiger muskie lakes have state-owned boat ramps for use by the public. Privately owned boat rentals and bait shops are also located near each lake.

For more information on fishing in northwest Indiana, contact Bass Lake State Fish Hatchery, R.R. 3, Box 240, Knox, IN 46534.

Some time has elapsed since petitions were circulated to appeal for the construction of new school units at the Mentone school, but we can announce that the preliminary work is progressing about as rapidly as it is possible. The petitions have been certified by the county officials, and other technical matters taken care of.

A State Trooper was in town a time or two recently, and Sunday, in a special meeting held at the town hall, organized a post hole gang. Initiation was held immediately following.

Some of the boys who spend their nights on the prowl about town, decided that strangers in our midst might get confused with our road signs, so proceeded to fix things up. The one for Burket city limits was placed at the south edge of Mentone; Mentone's city limits started at the Burket road on Road 25, etc.

The state law enforcement officials said there'd be no jail sentences or fines if said signs were placed back in their proper places - so about ten of our young men spent Sunday afternoon playing Halloween in reverse.

And it had to be some bird resting on the slippery side of 80 years to fill one of the holes with rocks while the boys were after the proper sign for the hole. In fact, he not only filled the hole with rocks, but he covered it with grass, so they couldn't even find where the hole had been.

Halloween is the festival celebrated on October 31st whose name means hallowed or holy evening because it takes place the day before All Saint's Day. Halloween is a time for parties for both young and old. Costume parties for the children where special games are played such as bobbing for apples and telling fortunes, ghost stories, etc. Many superstitions and symbols are connected with this date plus the custom of using leaves, pumpkins and cornstalks for decorations.

The Akron Lions Club Nutrition Site is in need of volunteer drivers

Silver Lake home destroyed by fire

Fire destroyed the Dean Whitaker home, located just west of the cemetery in Silver Lake, early Friday, October 17th.

When the fire broke out around 10 a.m. no one was home. Two neighbors, Richmond Wadkins and his wife were driving past the house when they observed smoke erupting from the eaves. After Wadkins notified the Silver Lake Fire Department, firefighters were on the scene within minutes.

While no definite conclusion as to the cause of the fire can be made at this time, firemen believe a spark from an open fireplace might have blown across the room, setting the davenport on fire.

Whitaker said, "My wife was at work. The children had just left for school, and I went to Columbia City to get mother out of the hospital."

According to Whitaker, he had started a small fire in the fireplace to remove the chill from the house, and it appeared the fire was burning low and was under control.

Silver Lake Fireman Ed Stone estimated that approximately 80 percent of the house was damaged. It is possible the roof and framework can be utilized to rebuild the house.

There are two girls, ages 11 and 8; and two boys, ages 10 and 7. All the clothing for the family was destroyed besides all other personal items.

The Whitakers had just added on two bedrooms, and had done extensive remodeling in the kitchen. "It's hard to believe that a person's work can be destroyed so quickly," Whitaker remarked. The family will stay with Whitaker's mother in a mobile home, which is located just across the driveway from the gutted house. Whitaker commented, "All I can do is pick up the pieces and start over again."

Jr. High concert dates changed

The concerts that were scheduled for Akron and Mentone Jr. Highs on Oct. 26 and Nov. 2 will be rescheduled for later in the school year. The changes were necessary due to a change in the rehearsal schedules of the music groups in the Jr. High Schools. Dates will be given later.

STERN NOTICE

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM -- The Kremlin will take "countermeasures" if NATO deploys medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe, a member of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee warns in an article published in Brussels.

New law effective first of year

Indiana State Police Superintendent John T. Shettle reminds motorists of the new law prohibiting vehicles with tinted windows after December 31, 1981.

The law states that no person shall drive any motor vehicle which has (1) windshield; (2) side wing; or (3) side window which is part of a front door; which is tinted to the extent, or manufactured in such a way, that the occupants of the vehicle cannot be easily identified through that window from outside the vehicle.

The law provides better visibility for the driver as well as allowing other motorists to observe the driver's actions. By being able to see the other driver, motorists can often determine intended vehicle movement. In addition, the law provides unrestricted vision of drivers and passengers by Police Officers as they approach the vehicle during traffic stops.

The tinted window law applies to all vehicles and the violator is subject to a maximum fine of $500.00 upon conviction.

Too many of us waste too much time on petty matters.

The TRC cross-country sectional was run Oct. 17 at Manchester High School. Out of a staggering twelve schools entered, Tippecanoe Valley finished a respectable sixth. Valley missed sprinting on to the regional by just one team place value.

Valley ran up a rather high score of 167 points. In a sport, like golf, the lower the score, the better.

Valley's total is considered superior when considered with the age of the team. All of the team members will be eligible, except one senior, for competition next season. Thus, next season's team will be a contender for the sectional championship and on to the regional.

Individual winners for Valley were: Dave Chaney, 26th; Chad Grossman, 30th; Mitch Good, 33rd; Rod Smythe, 35th; Rex Laughlin, 43; Randy Laughlin, 58th; and Jeff Peters, 68th.

The sectional concluded the 1981 cross country season. During the entire season, all of the nine Valley runners along with Coach Kreiger displayed true "Valley Spirit" and pride.

those scores but they tried - 15-11 and 15-2.

These last two games were the last of the 1981 season but soon the nets will rise again for a new and better season.

Girls Swimming

The Tippecanoe Valley swim team evened its record at 4 victories and 4 losses last week. At Manchester, the Vikes swam away with a 99-61 win. Three days later, though, Wawasee downed Valley by capturing 8 out of 11 events and racking up 100 points compared to 72 points.

The Manchester meet was dominated by Valley's six first places. The 200 medley relay team consisting of Felicia Harrell, Cathy Duncan, Mary Harter and Julie Manwaring finished first with a respectable time of 2:18. The other firsts came from Harter in the 100 breaststroke, Harrell in the 50 freestyle, Paula Shireman in diving and Sara Harrell took two, the 200 and 500 freestyle events.

During the home meet against Wawasee, the Valley swimmers weren't in the same form as against Manchester and only won three events. The 200 medley relay team was again successful along with Sara Harrell in the 200 and 500 freestyle. Although the Vikings did place ten other times and 500 freestyles. The Vikings did place ten other times in the meet.

The last two meets of the regular season are away.

J.V. Football

The junior varsity football team concluded its season with a 29-0 score over North Miami during a rescheduled game on the 19th of October. Valley's final record of 7-1 reflects the strength of Viking football program.

Valley used a whole arsenal of weapons for the victory over North Miami. Pacing the Viking offense was Mike Shoemaker with 57 yards rushing on 14 attempts (2 were touchdown runs). Rob Pinder snatched a 10 yard touchdown pass and a PAT pass from Shad McConkey. Second in the rushing category was Lee Swihart for 50 yards on 11 attempts. Jim Anerson put an extra point on the scoreboard with a PAT.

Two "Joos" also added to the Valley victory. Joe Hawkins caught a one-yard touchdown toss from McConkey. The other "Joe" Joe Hughes, blasted through with a 2 point conversion.

One major part of the total Valley football package has always been defense and this time wasn't an exception. Leading the Vikes in shutting out their opponent was Tim Gagnon, with 29 tackle points. Scott Teel and Chris Griffith with 27 and 25, respectively, were also major components in the defense.

Volleyball

A regular season game against Eastern this week has been canceled.

The major striving force in any sport is the hope of improvement. That is exactly what both the varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams displayed last week against Wawasee and Eastern at home.

Against Wawasee, the varsity team won the first game, 15-8, and after a hard fought battle, lost the last two games, 6-15 and 8-15, for the match. The junior varsity fell to defeat at a staggering rate. Both games were lost 2-15.

Although, by the time Thursday rolled around and the game against Eastern had occurred, they had materialized into a potent army. Each member working with the other. The varsity won easily to the tune of 15-8 and 15-1. The junior varsity couldn't out-do

Goals set for Valley basketball

Story by: Matt Brown

It's that time of year again. It's time for all of the loyal Valley fans to make the transition from the frosty air of the football field to the stuffiness of a packed gym. That's right, basketball season is just around the corner!

Unless the football season is extended for post-season play, the Vikings will play their first home game on November 21. They will be facing Argos, a team with an unbelievable regular season winning streak.

The varsity players, who will be trying their hardest to break Argos' streak are Todd Leckrone, Don Studebaker, Ray Davis, Andy Alsbaugh, Jeff Webb, Shawn Stokes, Pat Lafferty, Tod Uter, and Brian Anglin.

The driving force behind these outstanding athletes is Coach Roland Fletcher. Mr. Fletcher is originally from Winchester, Virginia, which is near Washington, D.C. He went to college at Grace College, Indiana University, and worked on his master's degree at Ball State University.

His major goal for the team this season is to have a better final record than the team did last year. He says that the team has gotten off to a slow start, but they are improving steadily, and have a good shot at his goal of improving over last year's record.

Reflecting on last year's season, Mr. Fletcher commented that the most memorable moments for him were winning six games late in the season, and giving Plymouth a real run for their money. (Valley lost, 75-73, but the game went into two overtimes).

Whether it's swimming or volleyball, basketball or football, one thing is the same about all Valley sports. It's the excitement about them among the students and fans, and this year's basketball season will not be an exception.

Kiwanis come to Akron

Kiwanis is a voluntary organization where concerned men can become personally involved in making their own community a better place to live. Working together, Kiwanis can accomplish and achieve projects that individuals cannot do alone. These projects include such activities as assistance to the youth and aging, conservation of natural resources, development of community facilities and creation of international understanding and goodwill.

Kiwanis is open to all men of good character and community standing who reside in, or have other interests within, the area served by the club. Each member is expected to be involved in the activities of his club and to be regular in attendance.

Each club establishes its own membership fee and then annual dues are determined to cover the cost of club administration and to meet district and International dues. Compared with the satisfaction the Kiwanis clubs make to the communities, the cost is not great.

If you are interested in joining Kiwanis in serving Akron area, meet with us in the Akron library at 6:45 a.m. on Tuesday. Doughnuts and coffee will be served.

Watershed meeting held at Rochester

Fifty-seven people attended Bruce Lake Watershed public planning meeting. A new concept in Public Law 83-566 small watershed land treatment was explained. The Bruce Lake project is the first of its kind receiving approval in Indiana. The purpose is protection of the watersheds resource base - the farmland - for future productivity. Considerable and open discussion was held on resource needs of the area and solutions for correcting the problems.

In summary it was acknowledged that cases of severe soil erosion was occurring, that this is increasing the costs of production, degrading water quality, compounding county ditch and road maintenance problems, and seriously threatening the viability of Bruce Lake. Coupled with this is serious drainage and flooding problems. One farmer reported his loss of $190 per acre of production expenses this year because of flooding with no hope of any returns. Nutrient value alone for soil losses was estimated at $120 per acre over the watershed and $500 per year in more critical areas.

Despite many complex - often seemingly conflicting factors, a general attitude prevailed that everyone would benefit from cooperating and working together. It was apparent that the PL-566 program was providing the stimulus for cooperation through the efforts of its three co-sponsoring agencies. The Fulton County Soil and Water Conservation District is making soil conservation assistance available to farmers and will be assisting in the administration of cost sharing contracts for erosion control practices; the Fulton County Drainage Board will assist in taking care of the special drainage related problems through use of the County surveyors office; and the Lake Bruce Association will help by accepting some of the financial responsibilities for drainage projects which includes a siltation basin to provide additional water quality benefits for the lake.

Hope was expressed that the planning phase of the PL-566 program would end successfully in June 1982 with approval for starting the next phase in the project - the application of cost sharing practices for landowners and operators.

The Backyard Mechanic Vol. III

For many of us, just lifting the hood of a car to look for the source of a problem can bring on an anxiety attack. There's so much stuff in there! Far too much, we promptly convince ourselves, to ever make sense. Anyway, it would probably take $537 worth of gribbet wrenches, widget calibrators, and assorted other specialty tools before we could even begin to do anything.

You'll be less easily intimidated if you have a good guidebook to follow. One that's written in ordinary English, and that doesn't assume you know anything to begin with. One of these is just out. The Backyard Mechanic, Volume III walks you through a series of repairs ranging from replacing filters to pounding out dents. To get a copy, send $4.00 to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 204J, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Say your dashboard lights go out. Not having much of an idea what could be involved, you might begin patting your wallet nervously. It could seem like a complicated electrical problem that could cost a lot.

But armed with a little knowledge, you can check for yourself to see if it's something as simple as a blown fuse. Like houses, cars have fuses; only the automotive variety is shaped a bit differently, usually a thin, metal-tipped glass cylinder, no more than an inch in length. Typically, between five and a dozen of these fuses are all mounted together on a flat panel somewhere between the dashboard and the floor or just under the hood. (If you can't locate your fuse panel, find out where it is by looking in your owner's manual.) Each of the fuses on the panel will be marked to indicate the function it controls. For example, "Dashboard lights" might be abbreviated down to "DSH LGT."

A pair of simple metal clips, one at either end holds each fuse in place. To remove the suspect fuse, just pry it out. Don't use a screwdriver, or anything else that's metal - you could give yourself a shock, or even start an electrical fire. A good tool to use is a popsicle stick.

When you've removed the fuse that you think might be bad, take it to a car parts store, and get another fuse of the same rating. You may have to buy a box of four or five, but you still won't have to pay more than a couple of dollars.

Pop the new fuse into place with your fingers. With any kind of luck, your problem will be solved. And you'll have more confidence to tackle the next repair on your own, too.

Fuses are just one of fifteen subjects covered in the booklet. And, when you order The Backyard Mechanic, Volume III ($4.00), you'll also receive a free copy of the Consumer Information Catalog. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the U.S. General Services Administration, the Catalog lists more than 200 free and low-cost publications of general consumer interest.

REMINDER: There is a charge of $4.00 for The Backyard Mechanic, Volume III.

Never pay any attention to the person who knows what he says is right.

Something to think about

New York State's highest court ruled in a recent law suit that a driver who didn't have her seat belt buckled, was NOT ENTITLED TO DAMAGES for injuries from a smashup allegedly caused by someone else.

The case involved a woman who, driving with seat belt unbuckled, was hit by a tractor-trailer at an intersection. She was thrown from her car, which rolled over and pinned her legs under a wheel. She sued the trucking firm on grounds that she had the right-of-way and that the truck driver was clearly at fault. The company countered that if her seat belt had been fastened, she would not have been thrown out and injured. THE JURY AGREED AND SHE GOT NOTHING. She ultimately took her case to the highest court in the state, and lost again because - the verdict read - she had failed to "exercise due care, not only to avoid injury to herself but to mitigate any injury she might sustain."

So when you decide it is too much trouble to buckle up, remember: You may have to pay for that wheel chair yourself.

Lugar says Soviet control is no alternative

WASHINGTON—Senator Dick Lugar (R-Ind.) told an international meeting of religious leaders in London, England, today that the "acceptance of military occupation and political and economic control by the Soviet Union in exchange for peace is neither defensible as an ideal nor practical as a policy."

In his speech to the United Methodist Church's International Conference on Christian Heritage in Government, Lugar, who is a Methodist lay minister, criticized the policies of some religious leaders in the world who seem to prefer Soviet control to providing adequate defense against those opposed to democratic governments.

"Some persons are prepared to counsel taking a chance on Soviet occupation rather than effecting appropriate defenses for religious and political freedoms," said Lugar, who is Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's Subcommittee on European Affairs and a member of the Select Senate Committee on Intelligence. "Others assert human rights deficiencies in Latin America or elsewhere while maintaining severe blind spots about the lack of political and economic rights in numerous totalitarian regimes dominated by a tyranny of the left rather than of the right. But I am hopeful that Christian leaders and Christian laymen will hold to sound judgments that are designed to prevent a nuclear holocaust and will avoid sentimental promotion of totalitarian regimes which purport to liberate even while they enslave."

Lugar said that without debating the merits of the recent European demonstrations against NATO missiles "one must ask how many demonstrators were present in the Soviet Union to protest Soviet deployment of SS-20 missiles which are now aimed at Western Europe in a most direct and intimidating manner? How many delegations of journalists, traveling parliamentarians, and entertainers do Soviet leaders permit in a spirit of free inquiry and debate about nuclear weaponry which is already in place and menacing every European who has a semblance of interest in freedom of worship, democratic and political institutions, or even open debate on questions of how to maintain world peace?"

Christians should not give up all hope in life because of a possible nuclear holocaust, Lugar argued. "We are fated to struggle with the global issues of keeping peace, preserving and expanding the realm of human freedom, and providing economic well-being for as many people as possible. The magnitude of our dilemma impels us to broader and more imaginative responses to it."

"Strong and equitable limitations on nuclear armaments remain in the best interests of both the United States and the Soviet Union," Lugar continued. "But they must be achieved in an atmosphere of confidence in the other side, of which one step forward is certain verification procedures. The awesome realities of nuclear weapons demand an openness which will change the nature of Soviet society. Our military strength must be obvious, carefully controlled and credible in backing our strong quest for arms control, arms reduction and resistance of nation state aggression."

Lugar said if the religious leaders at the convention "could go through the steps which the Poles are taking, establishing inch by inch the limits of free expression, free elections, decisions on divisions of economic resources to boost growth dynamically, boost exports miraculously, feed the people, and strengthen individual and corporate religious faith all of us would have an exhilarating and exhausting experience, but we would come to a new optimism about how the world is going to survive and how we are going to make progress in becoming better stewards of God's previous resources."

"Each of us has every reason to look upon the celebration of initiative, invention, private property, investment risk and dynamic growth with skepticism based on the fear that gains may breed selfishness and egregious maldistribution of resources," Lugar said, "but we should be equally skeptical of those who extol so-called state planning, state capitalism, redistribution of a diminishing pie coupled with demands that others supplement the folly of flawed economic reasoning."

Alternatives to leaf burning

Fall can be a difficult time of the year for people suffering from lung disease because of the extensive amount of leaf burning that takes place. For everyone's health the American Lung Association would like to encourage individuals to utilize alternatives to leaf burning.

These methods include bagging the leaves, mulching, shredding and composting. Shredding, mulching and composting are all excellent ways you can turn leaves into soil conditioners.

Here are some of the steps in utilizing these methods:

1) Shredding - You can shred leaves by simply mowing over them with your lawn mower. Shredded leaves can either be left on your lawn to act as a soil conditioner or used in mulching. Many power mowers today come with a "shredding" attachment.

2) Mulching - Mulching is when you place whole or shredded leaves around trees and shrubs. This helps retain moisture and helps prevent freezing of the roots.

3) Composting - Rake your leaves to an unused corner of your lawn in a six to twelve inch layer. Moisten the leaves by sprinkling them. Then add a few handfuls of fertilizer over the top to speed up decay and add nutrients. Any regular agricultural lime could also be used. Continue to layer as mentioned above until all your leaves are layered. Keep the top of the pile flat or slightly concaved to retain moisture. Allow six months to a year for the leaves to decay, then spread the decomposed leaf mixture around trees, flowers, shrubs or work into the top soil.

If you choose not to use these methods, you can always bag your leaves and have them picked up. Any other material that is usually burned should be compacted and put out for haul away service.

Utilizing these alternatives to open burning will benefit you, your lawn, and those around you. Remember, it's a matter of life and breath to the Christmas Seal people. Further information may be obtained by contacting the American Lung Association of North Central Indiana.

Governor Advisory Council on Tourism

"For Indiana's tourism industry to flourish, the public and private sectors must join forces and use every resource available to tout our state," said Lt. Governor John M. Mutz.

Mutz announced the creation of the Lieutenant Governor's Advisory Council on Tourism to make this union possible.

The 15-member council held an organizational meeting recently in Indianapolis where the lieutenant governor welcomed the members and stressed the value of their participation on the council.

"The Tourism Advisory Council can establish greater recognition of tourism's importance to Indiana's economy," explained Mutz, who as director of the Indiana Department of Commerce oversees the Tourism Development Division. "Because the council members represent state government and various areas of the state's private sector, they can offer ideas and guidance to the state's Tourism Development Division. The council can also work on behalf of the state's tourism industry in seeking private and public assistance for tourism promotion and development."

The council members are appointed by the lieutenant governor for one year terms and may be reappointed indefinitely by him.

"The council consists of interested, hard-working individuals who can contribute greatly by offering expertise in their specific area," said Mutz.

Included on the tourism board are Lt. Governor Mutz; Alan Kimbell, deputy director of the Indiana Department of Commerce; Jan Diggins, director of the Tourism Development Division; Gene Hallock, director of the Indiana Department of Highways; and, James Ridenour, director of the Indiana Department of Natural Resources.

"We have a beautiful state that offers so many things to see and do, but we have to let people know what we have. I'm confident that this advisory council is an important step in accomplishing that goal."

The Marines

Throughout the history of the United States the flag and defense of the nation have been superbly served by the U.S. Marine Corps. The Corps dates from November 10, 1775. On this day the Continental Congress in Philadelphia authorized formation of two battalions to aid in the war against England.

There had been companies of marines in America, but under British command, and the two battalions were the first American marine units. The first captain commissioned was Samuel Nickolas. He opened recruiting headquarters in the Tun Tavern in Philadelphia since considered the birthplace of the U.S. Marines.

Though the Corps was decommissioned shortly after independence was won, Congress reestablished it in its present form in 1798.

Every minority has the idea that it should rule the nation.

Two year term for station break-in

John L. Quirk, 23, of 201 Walnut St., Nappanee, was sentenced to two years with the Indiana Department of Corrections in Kosciusko Circuit Court.

Charged with burglary, a Class C felony, officials say he broke into the Heyde Gas Station, 303 South Huntington St., Syracuse, on July 14.

He was one of several to appear before Judge Richard Sand on Friday and Monday.

Steven K. Farmer, Rt. 2, Warsaw, pleaded guilty to theft, a Class D felony. Pursuant to a plea bargain with the prosecutor's office, a charge of burglary, a Class C felony, will be dismissed and any term of imprisonment will be stipended.

Farmer was charged with the Jan. 17 break-in at D and D Livestock, Inc., in which a Holstein veal calf was taken.

Robert Allen Rickel, 25, of 1504 Chestnut St., Winona Lake, pleaded guilty to theft, a Class D felony, and not guilty to burglary, a Class B felony. He is charged with the break-in of the James Oliver residence in Frazier Park on Jan. 14 in which numerous bottles of wine, four packages of frozen meat, a pair of binoculars and a dresser drawer knobs were taken. Horatio Hernandez, 18, Milford, pleaded guilty to the theft of a 1973 Chevrolet El Camino on June 27, but not guilty to taking a bicycle on the same date.

Both are Class D felonies. Steve Pier, 31, Milford, requested that local attorney Milo W. Lightfoot be appointed to represent him. Pauper counsel William M. Dalton II was relieved of his duties and Pier's request was granted.

He is being held for charges of driving while intoxicated, a Class D felony; attempted escape, a Class C felony; two counts of battery, both Class D felonies; one count of battery, a Class C felony; and resisting law enforcement, a Class D felony.

He was first apprehended on April 3 on a routine traffic stop, but attempted to elude authorities. In doing so, he allegedly struck an officer. Several months later, while an inmate at the Kosciusko County Jail, he again allegedly struck a police officer, causing injuries, while being moved from one cell to another.

Penalty for a Class B felony is imprisonment for six to 20 years; for a Class C felony, two to eight years; and for a Class D felony, two to four years. A fine up to $10,000 may also be imposed in each case.

Proper care between the time of purchase and the time of cooking is important to preserve lamb's natural goodness. Lamb, like any meat, is perishable; but if it is well cared for, it can be kept in better condition longer.

Pre-packaged fresh lamb can be stored as packaged for a day or two, however, if kept longer, wrappings should be loosened. Store immediately in the coldest part of the refrigerator. If it is not to be used by the end of the fourth day it is best to freeze it. Ground lamb should not be held unfrozen more than 24 hours, since no ground meat has the keeping qualities of solid pieces. If frozen, use lamb roasts, chops, etc. within 6 to 9 months; ground lamb within 3 to 4 months.

Lamb is easy to cook. In fact, any of the six basic methods on which all meat recipes are based may be used in cooking lamb. Regardless of the cooking method used, remember that a low heat produces the best results. The low temperature holds shrinkage and loss of juices to a minimum, makes for even cooking and browning, and more appealing flavor.

Substitute lamb in your family recipes for a new, delicate taste and better-than-before flavors. A little pre-planning and preparation can put a "how-did-you-fix-it, something-so-fantastic-so-fast" meal on the table in 30 to 60 minutes.

SCOTTISH LAMB VEGETABLE SOUP-filling, nutritious and economical.

2 lbs. cubed lamb, trimmed of all fat (bones may be added for flavor). 2 qts. water, 1 tsp. salt, 4 whole cloves, 4 whole peppercorns, 1 large onion, (chopped), 1 turnip, (chopped), 1/4 cup barley or rice, 2 cups chopped fresh or canned tomatoes, 3 cups frozen mixed vegetables or vegetables of your choice, (zucchini, yellow squash, okra, spinach, cabbage, or some of each), 1 T. dried parsley, place all ingredients in electric slow-cooker. Cover. Cook on low for about 10 hours. Takes 15 minutes to prepare ingredients; cooks while the cooks away, and serves 8.

Nature's Wonders

by: Marie Steffen

Indiana Audubon Society, Inc.

"Wildlife has the same needs in your yard as in the National Forests: food, water, cover, and suitable sites for reproduction," the National Wildlife Federation points out in its leaflet, "Invite Wildlife to your Back-yard."

"Don't make the mistake of considering food provision the beginning and end of wildlife management. Food must be accompanied by the other three habitat elements to enable wildlife to live in your yard."

Any back-yard can be made into a miniature wildlife refuge by including food, water, cover, and nest sites. A three-acre lot in the suburbs may include a wide variety of fruit and seed-bearing trees and a pond where turtles and dragonflies feel at home, but even a city back-yard can have a birdfeeder, some inviting shrubs, and a birdbath.

It is often just as easy to plan a yard for wildlife as to landscape in the ordinary, common, purely visual way--and many times more pleasing to your eye as well as to wildlife. One secret is to pick the right plants. For example, oaks, beeches, and pines offer nuts, seeds, and cones for wildlife. Many flowering trees have tasty berries and fruits for birds as well as beautiful flowers. The shrub families known as "viburnums" and "cotonasters" are prolific berry-producers, and have other attractive "claims to fame."

Certain annual flowers, including sunflowers, asters, daisies, marigolds, and black-eyed Susans, have seeds that are particularly attractive to birds.

Another secret in attracting wildlife is to create "edges"--areas where the cover of shrubs and trees meet grassy open areas. A yard that is too neat and well trimmed, with underbrush removed and closely-cut grass that reaches to the street, is not as inviting to wildlife as the relaxed and informal type of terrain where birds and small animals can find cover to protect themselves from the weather and from predators. It is important to provide cover close to food and water--and of course plants can also be food plants.

The NWF leaflet, a sixteen-page guide to back-yard wildlife, includes suggested plans for lots of different sizes, with an explanation of the basic principles of attracting wildlife. The lists of specific plants which are most attractive to wildlife, as well as being suited to growth in back-yards, are particularly valuable, and can be adapted to meet season requirements of any area of Indiana.

your own mouth. Keep the coffee table clear of small objects a child might reach for...and ask your lung association for the leaflet: "Keep Your Child From Choking."

Keep your child from choking

Halloween brings ghosts, goblins and, sometimes, real danger. The American Lung Association warns about one danger for children--the risk of choking on holiday treats such as candy corn, hard candy, and peanuts.

At Halloween, children go door-to-door "begging". Parents should insist youngsters bring the goodies home for inspection. For the youngest--two, three or even four years old--some of the candy can be divided or mashed before eating.

The chewing and swallowing muscles of young children may not be sufficiently developed to cope with certain treats. Choking can result. Halloween goodies also may "go down the wrong way," and lodge in the lung instead of the stomach. This is called aspiration. A "foreign object" of any kind in the lung can cause life-long problems. At times, surgery for removal is required.

The best warning is: Be sure children are old enough to chew and swallow correctly before trusting them with small, hard bits of food. Parents should always be on guard against "small objects" getting into the hands of children. Particularly those young enough to want to put everything into their mouths. Choking, blocked air passages, even aspiration into the lungs can result. Moreover, such items as eyes and buttons that might come loose from dolls or wheels from toy cars. Set a good example. Young farm couple to win free trip

Some young farm couple from Indiana is going to get a free trip to San Diego, California. The winner of the Indiana Farm Bureau Young Farmer discussion contest and spouse will win this trip for competition in the American Farm Bureau national contest January 10.

You don't have to be a public speaker to win. Mel Hollingsworth, Indiana Farm Bureau's Education Department coordinator, says informal, casual type discussions, similar to the kind farmers have at the community coffee shop, will be held. "It will be just like sitting down with other farmers and discussing common farm problems," Hollingsworth says.

The state contest will be held Sunday, December 6, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, Indianapolis, as part of the Indiana Farm Bureau convention. To be eligible, contestants can not have received money for speaking, must be 18 to 30 years of age on December 31, 1981, must be engaged in producing farm products for market, and must be Farm Bureau members.

The topics for discussion are the role of young farmers in improving public awareness of farmers' needs; the implications of a market-oriented policy for farm producers of the future; the alternatives to land use decisions being made, and the extent of government involvement, and the importance of continued agricultural research and who should pay for it.

Discussion participant names must be in the Indiana Farm Bureau office by November 1. They should be sent to the attention of Mel Hollingsworth, 130 East Washington Street, Indianapolis, IN 46204.

Since the founding of our nation, lamb has been prized by generations of American cooks for its delicate flavor, tenderness, and versatility. Lamb is an excellent source of protein and necessary minerals such as iron and zinc. It's also low in calories--a 3 oz. serving of roast leg of lamb provides 158 calories.

Today's busy homemaker can be assured that lamb is easy to prepare. Since lamb is the meat of an animal under twelve months of age and often less than six employees may now purchase life insurance for their families for a minimal fee of $1 per person per month.

Clerk Ernest Smith noted receipt of a letter from a company offering services to the town in codifying the town ordinances. The new Home Rule law which became effective September 1, 1981 requires all towns to codify all permanent ordinances, arranging them by subject matter for easy use by the public officials and citizens. Fenimore was to check with the attorney about the matter -- if codification is mandatory.

Last month it was announced to the citizens of the Town of Akron the intent of Dr. Kenneth Hoff of Rochester to deed his interest in the vacant lots East of Bahney Chevrolet to the town, if citizens could come up with some good uses for the property. In answer to this, a letter was shown during the board meeting which was signed by the Board of Directors of Pike Lumber Co., Inc., suggesting Dr. Hoff's lots be used as a park, concentrating on simplicity and physical beauty instead of activities and athletics, since we already have a park for those purposes. With the addition of some landscaping with shrubs, flowers and trees, it would lend a nice view to the uptown area. In the letter they had asked Dr. Hoff in any future development he might make to the lots, he protect the large White Oak trees which grow there and include them in the landscape along with the younger trees located at the back of the lots, stating the large trees are of great beauty and might be the oldest trees in the Town of Akron. This idea was offered as a starting point to be improved and elaborated on.

The meeting was adjourned after claims were signed. The next regular meeting of the board will be Tuesday, November 17 at 7:30 p.m. in town hall.

taking tests at present. The school participated in Fire Prevention Week activities and had a poster contest, also taking part in WOWO's fire drill during the week. He noted Burket would also be having Parent-Teacher conferences on the 5th and 6th.

Mr. Wortinger, asst. principal, at Valley, said the freshman class was being given tests; that several parent meetings had already been held; the Senior trip was Wednesday to Washington, D.C., and the school had had several college representatives and business school representatives talking with prospective students. He noted the PSAT tests would be given Oct. 28, and they were all getting ready to go to the football playoffs.

During the audience participation, two parents (no names given), inquired if any decision about the second grades at Akron had been made by the board. Mr. Paige noted that there had been a recent drop in enrollment to 30 and 32 students in each room and then an addition, so at this time there are 31 and 32 students respectively. The teachers were giving the students extra reading time if they needed it and the teachers' aides were working with the students. The parents said they did not believe that much of a problem exists, but when their daughter begins to have trouble, they will come to the board to be heard again.

Lancers score first at Valley

The Tippecanoe Valley football team shook in more ways than one during the 28-14 victory over LaVille last Friday. With this victory, the Vikings are looking at a possible play-off berth right in the eye. During the first half, it looked as if "Death" would have to be taken out of "Death Valley," but the Vikings came back and played superior football in the second half for the victory.

LaVille, during the first half, practically buried the Valley offensive and became the aggressor. After being forced to punt from the Lancer 36, Valley fell apart defensively and surrendered first-down after first-down until LaVille scored from eight yards out. Consistently, the Lancers used key pass plays to gain entrance out of tight situations and used this advantage to score the first touchdown of the game. An extra point attempt failed and LaVille led 6-0 with 1:20 left in the first quarter.

As if conditions weren't already fading for the Vikings, LaVille was again threatening to score, but the tide soon turned. The Lancers were at the Valley 15-yard line and decided to use the medium range pass that had proved fatal to Valley defense in the first drive. Although, Viking defensive-back Luis Santamaria had a different idea and picked off the toss at the one-yard line which produced the enthusiasm to change the whole tone of the game.

Valley only gained a small two-yard on the first play from scrimmage, but the next play turned into a 97-yard touchdown sprint, through a gaping hole in the tackle position, by Brent Hoffman. The extra point by Tod Utter went between the uprights and Valley gained possession of the lead, 7-6, which they would never relinquish again to the Lancers.

A true test of the Valley two-minute offense occurred before the half ended. A holding penalty dashed the hopes of a Viking field goal and the two-minute offense was put into the record books as an experiment that had failed. The half ended with just one point between the contestants.

Ice still popped out of the water hose, but the halftime discussion had heated up the Vikings. A LaVille fumble on the 43-yard line was the starting point of drive using Scott Bibler and Hoffman that produced the second Valley touchdown of the game. Utter's extra point was on target again and the 14-6 score looked a little more impressive than the first half had seemed.

The cold began to take its toll and fans from both sides began to dwindle as the outcome was fast becoming evident.

After LaVille was forced to punt just after 3 plays, Valley emerged in complete control of the game. Spurred on by a few yards from Bibler, Valley called a pass play that was formed into a 52-yard touchdown play by receiver Andy Alspaugh. Bibler crossed the TD line one more and Valley's 28 points lit up on the scoreboard. LaVille wasn't satisfied though, and with 3:06 left on the clock, scored one more touchdown from five yards out. A PAT pass gave the Lancers another 2 points and the final score of 28-14 didn't show how close the first half had been.

As the Vikings practice for a play-off seat, they must be attempting to produce a workable pass-oriented offense. The evidence of this lies in that Valley seemed much more comfortable with the pass than in past games.

One other area that might interest some loyal Valley fans is that there were some visitors in the grandstand. Hamilton Southeastern scouts were among the frigid fans memorizing and recording the Viking offense and defense right down to the player's uniform numbers. No alarm is warranted, though as Tippecanoe Valley does the same thing.

Tonight, the 9-0 Valley Vikings will travel to North Miami for the last game of the regular season. One final victory will clinch the TRC title and a play-off seat. The same night as the LaVille game, North Miami lost to Oak Hill to the tune of 27-0, but over-confidence could smash the efforts of an entire season.

Tippecanoe Valley concluded its junior varsity football season with a 29-0 win over North Miami, Monday, Oct. 19, giving the Vikings a final record of 7-1. A game with Eastern scheduled for next week has been canceled.

The running of Mike Shoemaker and the passing of Shad McConkey paced the Valley win. Shoemaker rushed for 57 yards (14 attempts) and had touchdown runs of three and two yards. McConkey threw TD passes of 10 yards to Joe Hawkins and tossed a PAT pass to Pinder. Joe Hughes ran for two points and Jim Anderson booted a PAT.

Lee Swihart rushed for 50 yards on 11 carries. The Valley defense was led by Tim Gagnon with 29 tackle points, Scott Teel with 27 and Chris Griffiths with 25.

THE BLUE FALCON by Robyn Carr - Richard's England is an England of pageantry, sorcery and jousts; of glory and hardship in a monarch's obsession with a Crusade; of castles held strong by the code of chivalry and walls crumbled by deceit and lust for power. In the best tradition of historical fiction, this novel is full-fledged entertainment, brimming with intrigue and thundering heroism and above all, an unforgettable love story.

THE BATTLE OF THE QUEENS by Jean Plaidy - During the first half of the thirteenth Century, two women dominated the scene. They were Isabella of Angouleme, who had been Queen of England and Blanche of Castile, who was Queen of France. Those were turbulent days for England. The French were on English soil when Henry assumed the throne but some of the Barons were determined to restore England to the English. The French court was dominated by Blanche. In opposition to Blanche was Isabella, with her husband Hugh, determined to destroy Blanche and stop at nothing, not even murder - in order to do so.

JONATHAN YOU LEFT TOO SOON - by David B. Biebel - Rev. David B. Biebel's first-person accounting of his struggles to reconcile the conflict between his son's death and God's love is a moving documentary of human loss and divine grace.

YELLOW-FLOWER MOON by Jean Hager - This modern love story with a Native American heroine is told against a background of big cattle ranches, oil wealth, and tribal tradition in the rolling, butte-dotted land that was once the Osage Indian Nation.

FLOWERS FOR LILLIAN by Anna Gilbert - Every year in the 1860's Maggie Ossian and her mother spent the summer months in the village of Ashbury Cross; enchanting holidays which to Maggie brought the added delight of reunion with her friends Francis and Lillian at Sacristy House. This novel's grand themes of love and jealousy are interwoven against the beautiful background of country house and cottage and against the eerie landscape of Hagg Barrow, the burial mound at Great Moor.

NIPSCO to sell up to 4 million additional shares of common stock

HAMMOND, Ind.—Directors of Northern Indiana Public Service Company recently authorized the sale of as many as 4 million additional shares of common stock, no par value, to the public by underwriters.

A petition for approval of the sale and issuance of these securities will be filed with the Public Service Commission of Indiana. A registration statement relating to these securities will also be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The dates of these filings have not been determined.

Proceeds of the sale will be used to provide funds for the utility's construction program and for the prepayment of bank loans.

This announcement is not an offering. The offering will be made only by a prospectus.

Yorktown program given

Mrs. William Ettinger was hostess to the October meeting of Anthony Nigo Chapter, DAR, with Mrs. James Tibbets and Mrs. Donald Boggs assisting.

Mrs. F.B. Koenig conducted the opening ritual. Seventeen members answered Roll Call. President General's message was read by Mrs. Wayne Smalley.

Education in our Public Schools was the topic on National Defense given by Mrs. Ernest Igo. Mrs. Ettinger presented the Budget and after much discussion and revision the budget was adopted.

The Resolution was ready by Mrs. K.A. Riner. Mrs. Koenig gave a report of State Conference which was held at the Atkinson Hotel in Indianapolis earlier this month. Mrs. Thomas F. Fitzgerald is the newly elected State President. She will assume her office at State Conference in the fall of 1982.

Mrs. Max Smith reported 5 boxes of clothing had been sent to Kate Duncan Smith through South Whitley Trucking.

Mrs. Arthur Brown introduced Mrs. Charles Tucker, who presented a very interesting and informative program on Yorktown. The victory at Yorktown was celebrated during the Yorktown Bicentennial ceremonies held on October 16th to 19th.

General Washington, who planned the combined Army-Navy operation, had long recognized the importance of sea power and called French naval superiority "the pivot upon which everything turned." This naval victory of the French, commanded by Admiral Francois de Grass, gave the Americans and their Allies control of the Chesapeake Bay and this was a major factor in bringing about the surrender of Cornwallis, who could no longer count on the Royal Navy to come to his rescue, and thus was the turning point in American Revolutionary victory.

Today, at Yorktown, the joy of the victors and the anguish of the vanquished have been replaced by a special serenity. Two centuries of silence have absorbed the crashing cannon, the pounding drums, and the thrilling fife. Yet as twilight descends, one can almost see the indomitable Washington standing in the shadows beside those best allies, Lafayette and Rochambeau. Even Cornwallis and his men lurk in the distance. History not only lives at Yorktown, it speaks across the years about Perseverance, trust, and above all, courage.

Mrs. Koenig reported our November meeting will be our reciprocity one, with Tippecanoe River as hostess, at Teel's Restaurant, November 10th, at 6:30 p.m. Mrs. Arthur Beinke, State Regent, will be a special

NIPSCO seeks approval for reduced gas rates for exempt customers

HAMMOND, Ind.—Northern Indiana Public Service Company recently petitioned the Public Service Commission of Indiana to approve reduced gas rates for sales to customers whose usage is exempt from incremental pricing provisions of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (NGPA).

The new rates reflect a reallocation of $993,971.23 collected from certain large industrial customers under the incremental pricing surcharge for boiler fuel uses in July, August and September of this year in accordance with the NGPA and orders of the Public Service Commission of Indiana.

If the rate changes are approved, the average NIPSCO residential customer using natural gas for homeheating and other purposes (147,600 cubic feet per year) would realize a decrease in gas costs of approximately 75 cents in the three-month period December 1981 through February 1982. The average residential customer using natural gas for purposes other than homeheating (39,800 cubic feet annually) would realize a reduction of about 17 cents in the same period.

NIPSCO Energy #5 Report

Get the Most Out of Your Heating Dollar This Winter

Winter's not too far away — remember that time of year with its falling temperatures and rising energy bills? Here are a few suggestions which could help you conserve valuable energy and hold down your heating costs this winter.

Small Investments Can Mean Big Paybacks

- Check insulation. Does it meet current standards?
- Weatherstrip doors and windows.
- Caulk joints between masonry and wood, as well as around windows and doors.
- Check filters often and change or clean when necessary.
- Have your heating system checked every year or so by a qualified, reputable heating contractor.

Greater Consumption, Higher Bills

Heating requirements bunch up into a few months of the heating season. In fact about 55 percent of your annual heating needs usually occur in just the three months of December, January and February, with an additional 15 percent in March.

Naturally, your heating bills reflect increased usage, regardless of the fuel used. Natural gas bills will be higher this heating season due to higher supplier costs which are being recovered through the purchased gas adjustment — a pass through from you to the supplier with no profit to NIPSCO.

These higher costs make it even more important to use energy wisely this winter.

Spreading Out Your Heating Costs

The simplest way to spread out your winter heating costs is to join our "Equal Payment Plan." The budget payment period ends with the May service bill.

Your estimated usage — based on past consumption — is divided into equal monthly payments. You receive a bill for the same amount each month. Any difference between the actual amount used and the budget amount billed will be adjusted on your May budget service bill.

Call or stop in your local NIPSCO customer service office for details.

GUEST EDITORIAL

WHEN A CUT IS NOT A CUT

by James J. Treires

Everybody talks about the defense budget, but nobody knows much about it. If you read every news item you can find, you will only become more confused.

For four or five years now we have been reading about cuts in the Pentagon budget. Meanwhile it keeps getting bigger and bigger.

When the President and Congress returned to Washington after their August recess, extreme pressures from the financial community forced them to seek ways to hold down next year's deficit. And since everything else had already been cut to ribbons, the military budget was given a second look. News media were filled with stories about the President's agreeing to a $2 billion cut in 1982 spending.

What is a budget cut? To any individual or business firm, a budget cut is a reduction from last year's spending. But that's not how we talk about military spending. To the Department of Defense, a budget cut is a reduction from the highest figure ever proposed for the next fiscal year.

Do you remember Jimmy Carter's first budget? Here he was, a former hawk who had campaigned on a promise to cut defense spending by $5 to $7 billion, but who lacked the will or the courage to oppose the Pentagon establishment. Since President Ford had spent $100 billion for defense the previous year, it would seem that Mr. Carter would have to cut the military budget down to around $94 billion to make good on his promise.

What did President Carter do? He decided to spend $112 billion. That looks like a $12 billion increase. But with the statistical ineventiveness characteristic of modern Presidents, Mr. Carter claimed that he was actually cutting the military budget just as he had promised.

How did he manage this? Well, as luck would have it, Gerald Ford thought he could win the election with the help of the powerful defense lobby, so he proposed a ridiculously large 1978 Pentagon budget of $122 billion. This figure was, as they say in Washington, "inoperative" since Mr. Ford had been defeated and the new President would submit his own budget.

You can guess what happened after that. Both Carter and the Pentagon were happy to pounce on former President Ford's impossible dream figure as the "planned" 1978 budget, from which any reduction would have to be considered a cut. That's how Carter could push through a $12 billion increase and still claim he had kept his promise to reduce military spending.

Now we are seeing a rerun of this technique. President Reagan's plans call for massive increases in Pentagon spending for each of the next three years. Once these figures are in print, they become standards from which "cuts" may be claimed. It's a little like being told that a salary committee had approved raising your pay from $25,000 to $30,000, but the boss later decided he could only afford to pay you $28,000 next year. If you were reared in the Pentagon, you would go home and tell your wife not that you had received a $3,000 raise, but that the boss had cut your pay by $2,000!

In plain American dollars, the Pentagon spent $136 billion in fiscal 1980 and about $162 billion in 1981. The current budget calls for spending $189 billion in 1982. If you see any cuts in there, let me know. I'd like to see the same kind of cuts in my own income.

TV COMMENTARY

By Bente Christensen

OPTIMISM among network newsmen that evening news shows would be extended from half hour to an hour has faded. NBC has dropped the idea and CBS, which still plans to make such a proposal to its affiliates, isn't likely to get much further.

IT was affiliated stations which doomed the NBC proposal. They don't want to turn over any more prime time to networks. Neither do cable interests. Nonetheless the CBS proposal will be submitted to CBS stations the middle of this month.

THERE was considerable criticism of the TV networks for showing the gory, bloody scenes of the Anwar Sadat assassination in Cairo. But worse has been shown and this was a news event of major magnitude. The networks showed the pictures--or two of them did--as they came in from a satellite transmission.

SPONSORS refuse to learn--from bad commercials. The off-base commercials of a few years back which so much hurt Schlitz beer haven't taught Anheuser-Busch its lesson.

BUSCH beer is still being plugged with the line: "Head For The Mountains!" What has that to do with beer, its quality and why people should choose, it? Nothing. It turns customers off because it insults one's intelligence. THE new commercials for Wheaties are repulsive also, as are the latest MacDonald's ads--with silly-looking people making sillier sounds. That also insults the intelligence.

MIKE Wallace, after years of bullying people on television, is finally coming under criticism. The sort of prosecutor-accuser question Wallace rams home to so many victims, being exposed on national television, is sometimes difficult to answer and often stuns guests.

Turn Them Off?

In Germany several towns and cities have been experimenting with a plan to turn off traffic lights at night. This saves money and speeds the flow of traffic in late hours --it's claimed.

Drivers, of course, must cooperate if such programs are not to lead to an increase in accidents. There's really no good reason why most drivers can't drive safely at night, approaching intersections with care. Will they do it?

Advocates point to several advantages. It saves gasoline, reduces pollution, reduces noise and is said to save 22 percent of the city's electricity bill for traffic lights. In Germany the cities experimenting with the program turn off the traffic lights at eleven p.m. and turn them back on at 5 a.m.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

I am writing in support of special education. I just finished reading the item of interest written by Laura Reese. Number one, I've never met L. Reese but I have 3 children who have attended T.V.S. systems for the last 14 years. One of whom recently "1981" graduated. He has a good education because of a high I.Q. and "some good grade school teachers." Not to mention Jr. Hi and High school teachers being just as fine. But had he not studied and been taught well in grade school, he wouldn't have survived in the crowded class rooms of today. I also have a child in special education with Ms. Ritter and Mrs. Cumberland who have done a tremendous job in special education with terrific counseling benefits for their students. Please support these ed. programs, teachers and most of all the students who will be the future. Maybe the board member mentioned has all the education he knows what to do with! But can we, the parents take the chance that our children will assert themselves in any form of self-education such as Abe Lincoln did. This should be the year of "parents stand-up for child's ed. programs," before it's too late.
