PROBLEM FACING CITY CHURCH

By REV. C. H. SEARS, General Secretary Baptist Missions Society.

THE task of supplying a therapeutic for the degenerative diseases of the soul of the city man is big enough to require the co-operation of all religious faiths. It has been assumed that the problem of the city church has grown out of the rapid community changes of the last few years. The problem is much deeper; the problem of the city church grows out of the changes in the city man who has to do with things and people not known and with forces not understood.

In his daily quest for the utilities, values and thrills which the city has to offer, he joins the daily rhythm of city life, a tidal movement of the crowds. Under such conditions an individual tends to sink into anonymity and to cease to feel himself a person. Moral restraints are seriously weakened when contacts become thus impersonal and conflicting.

The city man lives in a social whirlpool. Stimulation has gone beyond the danger point, both for health and for morals. Neither physical proximity nor the mechanics of communication makes for sympathy. The city man lives in isolation within a multitude of contacts; a city is where men die of loneliness in the crowd. Aggressiveness on the part of one person or group is met by a defensive attitude on the part of others. Self-assertion is a characteristic sin of the city man.

Nor is there a compensating moral control for the city man. It is doubtful if religion, with its tendency toward otherworldliness and the church, with its traditional aloofness, have helped to make available spiritual forces released by the discoveries and inventions of a scientific age. The task of supplying a therapeutic for the degenerative diseases of the soul of the city man is big enough for the co-operation of all religious faiths. It is even bigger than co-operative Protestantism.

Convention of the Farm Bureau Federation.

This Will be One of the Greatest Meetings Ever Held in the Interests of the Farmer, and we Urge All Who Can to Attend.

The eleventh annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation will be held this year from December 9 to 11 at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago. Because it is the first national assembly of the Farm Bureau since the passage of a farm relief measure, for which the organization was so persistent an advocate, unusual significance attaches to this year's gathering. Preceding the convention a two-day leadership training school for Farm Bureau executives will be held Dec. 6 and 7.

In recognition of the progress in the farm relief fight, Alexander Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, and the man entrusted by President Hoover with responsibility for administration of the Farm Relief Law, is to be the principal speaker on the first day of the convention. Mr. Legge will appear Monday afternoon, December 9. He is expected to outline to the Farm Bureau the opportunities which await farmers of America under the new marketing act and to explain how the Farm Bureau can best co-operate with the Farm Board.

Five other topics of the utmost importance to American agriculture are to be discussed by outstanding authorities during the course of the three-day convention. These include rural child health, taxation, secondary highway development, farm finances and waterways. On each of these a definite expression of policy will be formulated by the delegates and the project incorporated into the American Farm Bureau's program of service to agriculture for the coming year.

Railroads have reduced their rates for the big convention, so that visitors can make the trip for a fair and a half from any point in the United States, if provided with certificates obtained through county agents and Farm Bureau officials. Various aviation companies are also offering inducements to air-minded farmers.

At least 5,000 farmers and farm women are expected at the convention and because of this those who plan to attend are advised to make hotel reservations early. Requests sent to national headquarters of the Farm Bureau, 58 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., will be cared for, and further information furnished about convention details.

INCREASE PURCHASING POWER

By SECRETARY OF LABOR JAMES J. DAVIS.

Troubles of the textile industry, the current history of which in the hitherto rural South has been attended by violence, rioting and death, may be ascribed in part to overproduction. I would urge a liberal wage to increase the buying power of wage-earners generally as a means of improving the market for textiles and other commodities suffering from unfavorable conditions.

In coal, in textiles and in lumber I find that the potential capacity of the mines, factories and lumber operations are generally in excess of the needs of our country. As a consequence, industry in some of these fields faces overdeveloped units, along with the ever-present problem of overproduction, which in turn means irregular employment and unsatisfactory earnings for both management and men.

My experience through life has pretty well proved to me that if we equip the 45,000,000 of gainfully employed people in the United States with ample purchasing power they will buy liberally of the products of our mines, mills and factories. This would lessen overdevelopment and at the same time stimulate business.

I have never yet been able to understand why some of the business men of our country have not discovered that if we give the American wage earner a liberal wage and regular employment he will make all of our industries hum in supplying his needs and desires.

We need to augment the genius for inventing mechanical devices with ways and means of utilizing the men and women displaced by our machines.

Cows Fed on Ticker Tape

While flying over the barren lands of the Persian gulf, Lady Maud Hoare, the first woman to travel by air from England to India, saw many starved-looking cows; she recently related. Upon landing she asked what they were fed on. "Waste paper from the telegraph machines," was the reply.

Christmas
on a Battleship

By HAROLD COOK

NICE old lady who had no relatives, but who did have plenty of money, wanted to spread Christmas happiness where she thought there would be none. She therefore prepared fifty beautiful packages all nicely wrapped.

In white tissue paper and nicely tied with red ribbon. In the packages were razor blades and bars of chocolate candy and bags of peanuts, cigarettes, talcum powder, shaving cream, and other things she thought would be acceptable to Uncle Sam's sailors.

On Christmas afternoon she had the packages piled into the back of her car and her chauffeur drove her to the navy yard. A handsome sailor was detailed to show her around, and what she saw was an education to a woman who believed that all sailors are half-starved paupers who earn but thirty dollars a month.

She was immediately conducted to the flag ship. It was beautifully trimmed for the holiday. Christmas trees were everywhere—on the stern, on the bow, on the towers, and even at the ends of the gang planks leading to the ship. And one whole deck had been divided up into little booths by the different divisions of sailors, and decorated like Greenwich Village dance halls for a festive celebration. Dim lights, fire places, radio music, and girls and children were everywhere. The sailors were dancing and having a fine time. The children wandered unrestricted and wide-eyed on all parts of the ship. They were orphans from the city, whom the sailors had entertained for dinner. And here

Radio Music, and Girls and Children Were Everywhere.

Is a list of the good things that the orphans and the sailors had to eat:

Celery, pickles and olives, roast turkey with giblet gravy, oyster dressing and cranberry sauce, baked spiced ham with green peas and asparagus tips, candied sweet potatoes and boiled onions and mashed potatoes. Lettuce and tomato salad, mince and pumpkin pie, mixed nuts, oranges and candies, pound cake and ice cream, bread and butter and coffee.

Besides this splendid dinner, the sailors had given each orphan a Christmas package of toys, and the men of one division had added a dollar bill to each package they gave out so that the child could buy what he wanted for himself if Santa Claus had not given it to him. Happiness beamed in the eyes of everybody.

The good old woman was delighted. She asked her guide to find some sailors who had not received any presents themselves, and soon forty-nine of them, mostly orphans themselves, were gathered around her to receive gifts. Thus these carefree sailors who had so generously given of their little to make other, younger orphans happy, each received for himself the kind of present that he could enjoy most on the ship.

But the kind old lady was reserving the loveliest package of all for some special case. She was just beginning to wonder if there was one such, when her guide took her into the sick ward. About twelve sailors were lying there in bed with books and boxes and even flowers all around. They looked very happy. The old lady asked the attendant if they had all had a happy Christmas, and he replied, "Yes, madame, all but one." He pointed to the far end of the room where there was a beautiful, smiling, black-haired boy lying in a bed. He seemed happy in just watching the other boys enjoy their presents, but he had not received a single gift himself as he was an orphan. Two little children whom he had especially befriended were standing by his bed talking with him. The old lady moved down toward him and handed him her loveliest package with a cheery "Merry Christmas!" Tears of gratitude and joy welled to the boy's eyes and the old lady hastened from the room to spare him the embarrassment of thanking her for her gift. Her eyes were moist, too, with tears of joy, for that was the climax of the happiest Christmas day that she had ever had.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By John Clarence Funk, A.M., Sc.D.

Director of Public Health Education,
State of Pennsylvania

That Leisure Time

ONE of the results of this wonderful machine age is leisure. Never before has there been so much of it as there is in the United States today. However, to hundreds of thousands of people it is comparatively a new toy. And new toys, as is well known, are not always properly handled or understood.

The person who allows his spare time to slip back at him in terms of ill health or a devitalized physical condition would perhaps be better off if the day's job utilized more of his time. And yet many people do just exactly that. They are victims of their leisure.

Take for example, the young men who spend their Saturday afternoons and all their evenings in the smoke-laden pool or card room. Consider the women who play bridge continually day after day. Think of the thousands who habitually waste their precious leisure in a misguided expression of alcoholic sociability. Or if you please, keep in mind that tremendous army of people who, with the radio turned on or a book in hand, regularly glue themselves to a chair during their leisure hours. All these people appear to forget that health justifies some consideration during the time that consideration can be given to it.

The sensible person who has a real desire to enjoy life to its fullest extent, as well as to persist in that enjoyment for as long a time as possible will give serious consideration to regular outdoor exercise, plenty of fresh air and sufficient sleep during the hours that these things are possible.

Enjoy leisure, of course, but put it regularly to work for you also. You will find it the most powerful builder for physical fitness, joy and happiness in the world—that is, if you give it a chance.

Dressed in Crepe Paper

This decorative gypsy doll fairly radiates vivid color from the corner of the davenport or divan where she is posed to look like a gay, round sofa cushion. A roll of crepe paper, modernistic both as to color and design, will dress several, and the doll heads cost but a few cents. From the standpoint of attractiveness at little expense, this doll qualifies as one of the most intriguing Christmas gift items brought out this season.

TUBERCULOSIS IS RESULT OF FILTH

Can Be Prevented if Proper Steps Are Taken.

That most dreaded disease of live stock, tuberculosis, is largely a filth-born infection. It can be prevented if proper measures are taken.

"Experimental evidence seems to prove that very few animals of any of the species are born infected with tuberculosis," says J. W. Lumb, extension veterinarian, Kansas State Agricultural college, in telling of the scientific findings. "Animals can be prevented from acquiring the disease if proper measures are taken. The organisms are usually taken in by way of the mouth with feed and water, occasionally with the air, or by way of mucous membranes."

Available experimental records indicate that hogs acquire tuberculosis mainly through the mouth with feed and water and sometimes by way of the nostrils, according to the specialist. In the case of cattle it is acquired largely through the mouth, with feed and water, or licking each other while in contact. There is a possibility, most rarely, for the animal to acquire the disease through the nose, mucous membranes of the eyes, and through the skin.

Cattle Are Wintered on Mixture of Grass

J. Sotola, State college of Washington, reports that there is little if any commercial production of beef on alfalfa in that state. But the college, which is in the southeastern section of the state, maintains a herd of 80 pure-bred beef cattle and for nine years the herd was pastured on straight alfalfa all through the summer, approximately 220 days.

"Our cattle are wintered on a mixture of one part cut alfalfa and three parts sunflower silage," said Professor Sotola. "The last part of April, when the alfalfa pasture is ready, we give the cattle a good feed of roughage and then immediately turn them out on this pasture, but we choose periods of clear weather so as to avoid having the cattle on wet alfalfa. During the period of nine years that we have done this we have not had a single case of bloat or digestive disturbance. The first few weeks that cattle are on green feed, they may scour slightly but soon get over the exceedingly laxative effect of succulent feed."

Another practice that may be followed is pasturing the alfalfa after one or more cuttings of hay have been taken. Professor Sotola reports that the college has harvested 1½ tons of alfalfa an acre from a single cutting and then obtained 83 mature cowdays of pasture on the aftermath. By a mature cowday of pasture is meant the green feed consumed by a mature beef cow in 24 hours.

Live Stock Facts

There is no excuse for losing sheep and lambs from parasites.

Supply salt at all times and water even if the sheep uses but little.

The feeding of lambs is necessarily a speculative venture on the part of anyone.

Ewes suckling lambs can be fed as high as three pounds of silage per day with good results.

Even though work horses are fed plenty of grain they will not keep in good shape if their ration is not properly balanced.

Where no precautions are made against the infection of round worms, the per cent of wormy, runted pigs will be from 30 to 60.

During the winter months when the farm chores are not pressing, some extra profit may be made on fat beeves if sold dressed rather than on foot.

The bull represents the cornerstone for a foundation of successful cattle production. Closely connected with him is the right kind of cows. They should represent the good, big beef type.

Cattle that seem to have a craving for something that they do not get in their feed, may be helped by the addition of a reliable mineral where they can eat what they want of it at any time.

Pigs need water as badly as feed, and if the water is placed in a sheltered place, they will drink more during the winter.

The live stock producer who has stuck it out over the industry's long lean period is about to reap the reward for his perseverance.

That age and health of the animal affect both the weight and strength of the fleece, as well as mutton production, is a fact carefully considered by the wool grower in culling his flock.

Poison in Daffodils

A Long Island man took a job in a greenhouse because he liked flowers. He was interested especially in caring for a bed of daffodils. But he was not sufficiently versed in horticulture to know that beneath the yellow brilliance the plants hid a subtle poison. One day an abrasion on his ankle became infected. For the next few months he lay in a hospital ward, and was lucky to escape having his foot amputated.

By Clara Agee Hays

ON CHRISTMAS eve Marion surveyed her apartment—wreaths of holly in the windows and a tiny tree with colored lights in the living room. For three Christmases—all alone—she'd done this. Even baked a chicken to—well—make it seem Christmasy.

Anyway, she wasn't hungry or homeless. Marion's smile was wistful and perhaps a little bitter. There was no one in the whole city to share her Christmas. She'd worked up to a good job, but her business acquaintances all had their own family festivities. How the girls who worked under her had planned and chattered for the last week! They called Marion "Miss Morris" and were timid before her. Of course, she couldn't break the ice with, "I'm only a lonely girl! Don't think of me as a boss. Let me share your fun."

Marion paused, now, as she passed "Jack's" picture on her table. Playfully she screwed up her face. She'd get him a present, of course. A—cigarette case with his initials—expensive but simple. That's the way the girls at the office sounded. And he'd get her a—She dropped the enlargement and hurried to rescue the potatoes—scorched for supper.

Last year "Jack" had been a present from herself. Her brother, Ben, thousands of miles away, had sent a snapshot of himself taken with a young man. "My pal and I—He's a real fellow." Ben had scrawled across the back. Marion had studied the fine face in the picture and yearning born of a long unrealized dream of romance stirred her. Finally when last Christmas came she had gullily cut her brother's picture off and had the other enlarged, tinted and framed.

"The color of his eyes?" asked the artist.

"Oh—er—brown," she said and blushed. That was what she wanted him to have. She had called him "Jack." And ever since "Jack" had been her confident, her pal, her fiancé.

"Here on Business. . . Told Ben I'd Look You Up."

The long evenings passed more easily when she looked into the large brown eyes and dreamed of the time she and "Jack" might have a home of their own.

But, tonight, another empty Christmas eve, imaginative Marion with twinkling eyes, became matter-of-fact Miss Morris of the office. "It's ridiculous!" she scolded. "Completely in love with a picture! I must be losing my mind!" Vindictively she thrust "Jack" into a drawer and sat down to make herself read and forget.

Suddenly the door bell rang. Marion opened the door cautiously. Then she gasped.

When David Bruce entered he wondered why the attractive sister of his pal stared at him as if she could not believe her eyes and sank weakly into a chair.

"Here on business. . . Told Ben I'd look you up," he explained a little nervously. "Shouldn't have broken in on your Christmas—a perfect stranger—I—ah—was a little lonesome, I guess. . ."

Marion managed to say softly, "I'm glad you came." And David, looking at her felt that, somehow, she was.

There'd been lots to talk about. David leaving late, anticipated with actual eagerness the dinner with her tomorrow. And Marion's heart sang as she got up early on Christmas to "get things done." David came early, too, and Marion, pinning a towel around him, let him help. It seemed natural. She and he had been friends in her imagination so long! The afternoon passed sweetly. In the evening they went to a theater.

When they returned, "A look at the tree before you go?" invited Marion.

David stepped in—for a look at Marion. He flushed and glanced down.

"I—I told Ben—if his sister was as attractive as the picture he showed me, I'd want to bring her back with me and—" He looked up seriously. "Please don't think me cheeky. I've got to return so soon and—well, she's better than the picture. I . . ."

A minute later he held her in his arms.

"Oh, Jack!" Marion gasped in happy confusion and then flushed. But David's brown eyes had read hers and what her lips said didn't matter.

FARM STOCK

PRODUCTION OF AVERAGE SHEEP

Wise Culling and Attention Bring Returns to Owner.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How culling and wise attention to breeding of farm animals may be expected to produce returns for farmers is reflected in statistics gathered by the bureau of animal industry and published in the current Yearbook of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"In 1840," says E. W. Sheets, in charge of animal husbandry investigations, "the average weight of fleece sheared from American sheep was less than two pounds. By 1900 it had increased to nearly five and one-half pounds. Today it is approaching eight pounds. In other words, an average sheep today grows wool enough each year to make approximately one suit of clothes. In 1840 it took the wool of four sheep to make a suit of equal weight and quality."

Better breeding and more rigid culling of breeding flocks promise to raise this average still further. Wool production is similar to such qualities as heavy milk production in dairy cattle and heavy egg production of hens. The offspring of heavy producers are likely to be heavy producers and to transmit to their offspring the capacity for heavy production.

In the case of sheep, Mr. Sheets says: "There is still room for improvement. By 'weeding out' the poor producers and breeding from the heavily fleeced sheep, flock owners can raise the average."

Self-Feeders Produce Most Profitable Pork

The importance of self-feeders in producing profitable pork is rapidly increasing. The successful use of a self-feeder in making pork is well proven and every hog farm is now using them for feeding the growing shoats. This popularity of the self-feeder for producing pork has, as many other good things, its drawbacks. One of these is the ease with which rain and snow seeps in and dampens or wets the feed. Were it not for the delicate digestive system of the pig, this condition would pass unnoticed. However, the stomach of the growing pig is like that of a small child and eating wet or damp feed which has started to mold has about the same effect on it as green apples have on the child. The care and guidance of the mother removes the apples from the youngster, and it soon recovers. As in the case of the child, the thinking must be done by the man caring for the animals.

Kellogg Peace Fruits To Boom Good Times When a Man Scribbles Think of Mexico

China says Russia's attack on her Manchurian possessions, seizing the railroads, killing Chinese, setting fire to their homes, etc., is a defiance of the Kellogg peace pact.

Britain and America will talk that over and see what can be done about it. Henderson, foreign minister in Britain's labor cabinet, says Japan will take part in the discussion. Russia asks no one's advice and the only thing that could be done about it would be to fight Russia.

It would be interesting if the first fruits of the Kellogg peace pact should be the start of another war. If that war came Japan, highly intelligent, would send a few "observers," as in the big war, and do nothing else.

Britain would be too busy with other things and too "fed up" for any more fighting. Uncle Sam would be told: "After all, Kellogg is your man. It is your peace pact. Have the common decency to attend to this matter."

Insult of Chicago. Cortelyou of New York and Owen D. Young of Europe, New York and everywhere have seen the President. They and other industrial stars promise the President to co-operate in his admirable undertaking, promotion of new enterprises, wise spending of money and creation of jobs.

Their promise is no small one, for they agree to spend fifteen hundred million dollars on one program.

What the country needs, if it really needs anything beyond common sense, is to spend part of the money we have, and we have hundreds of billions of it. On past occasions this country has stood petrified unable to move, like a man watching his house burn down, unable to use his legs or hands.

You might buy of autograph dealers a signature of Herbert Hoover on a sheet of paper with many little queer geometrical diagrams scratched on the paper while listening to a visitor.

These diagrams usually mean that the man making them is not listening "very hard."

If Rockefeller or Ford called to tell the President of a plan to put ten million men to work at good wages, he would listen and wouldn't do any scribbling as he listened.

When you talk and a man scribbles, make it short. He isn't much interested.

It was a distressing slump in Wall street, but think of poor Mexico. That country has had not a slump but a downward cataclysm.

Figures prepared by L. F. Herbert, authority on Mexican securities, show that national and railroad securities in Mexico with a par value of $563,926,156 are now selling on a basis of $37,000,000, or about six and a half per cent of par.

Suppose you could buy $100 worth of our government bonds or best railroad stock for $6.50. That would be worry.

And the simple-hearted Mexicans have not been dumping out new stock, 20,000,000 shares at a time, either.

Business men that know what it means to take an inventory of a good-sized store will shudder when they hear that Doctor Shapley of Harvard has a plan for taking an inventory of the universe or "an index," as he calls it. Man is very far down in that inventory, about as important as a shoestring in a wholesale dry goods store.

In the cosmos everything is to be listed in its place, from electrons to "super galaxies." The difference between a super galaxy and an electron of which millions might revolve unperceived around their nucleus in the corner of the eye, is quite a difference.

Consider that the molecules in a pint of water, placed side by side, touching, would go around the earth two hundred million times; that our sun is a million times as big as the earth; that here exist other suns, one million times as big as ours, and you can imagine what a cosmic inventory would be. But men will make it, including everything within the telescope's reach.

Under ground near the marshy shore of the Bay of Biscay old Clemenceau would be interested to hear that the German newspapers say, "We should have won the war if we had had the greatest Frenchman since Napoleon."

E. E. Free, able engineer, says 1950 will see electric houses, lighted with artificial sunlight, weather arranged as prescribed by the doctor, like a baby's modified milk, no windows, soundproof, and electrically ventilated. The soundproof suggestion is welcome, and the rest, not.

Men are, physically speaking, animals. They want the sun shining in regularly, the air blowing through. They want to come in and go out as they did in the cave days, and do not want the inside made like the outside. (© 1929 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Step-Up" If You Please

You know how it is yourself to try to get something off the top shelf just out of reach. Well, it won't happen again, that annoyance, providing you are the fortunate recipient this Christmas of one of the cunning, gayly decorated "step-ups" such as most of the gift shops are showing. Tiny stool step-ups for children, too. These convenient contrivances come in all colors to match the other boudoir furnishings.

Crochet Crepe Twist Mules

An ideal Yuletide gift for the young girl who loves boudoir finery. These dainty "mules" are crocheted of crepe twist which looks like raffia. It's really hard-twisted crepe paper and it comes in the loveliest colors. Six skeins make one pair of mule tips. Mount them on satin padded soles. Sew on tufts of gay ostrich plumes as an extra beauty touch.

Health Hint

Splinters should never be neglected, especially in the foot, on account of possible infection from sock or stocking. When using a needle to remove a splinter, be sure to heat it over a flame first to sterilize it. For this a burning match will do.

Betty's Christmas Eve

By NONI C. BAILEY

MOTHERS coming Christmas," said Gertrude entering her circle in the great department store. "Fine," said Mina replenishing spool cases. "I'm going out to Uncle Matt's—can taste turkey and mince pie right now." "Bill and I are invited to Charlie's. They're having a swell party," said Hattie sorting dress shields.

Betty ran the comb through the wavy hair of the dummy thoughtfully and applied a hair curler. Resolutely she snapped the rubber band into place. Betty was a stranger. Her room was comfortable, her salary sufficient, but companionship she had not found. Holiday planning was entirely apart from her. She decided with the snap of that rubber band that there would be a place in the Christmas cheer—somewhere—for her.

Gertrude noticed the change in Betty. "She's getting human," she whispered, then "What's his name, Sunshine?" she teased, approaching that familiarity which appertains to those they like. "You'd be surprised," Betty laughed.

On the street car she found her inspiration. "Masquerade Ice Carnival," the handbill read. "North River at Beaver Bend, Bench for Crippled Children. Christmas eve at 8 p. m."

Betty's fingers were busy every night with her costume. White fur trimmed the bright red jersey. Golden-haired Betty knew what to wear.

Christmas eve found her radiant and happy, enjoying her favorite sport. Masked, she did not seem alone. Suddenly they began changing partners. Betty found herself skating first with one man, then another. They enjoyed her easy glide and graceful turns. A kiltie-clad Scotchman seemed always ready to take her hand when another let it go. "Aren't you tired?" he asked; "let's have lunch." It had not occurred to her to be tired—her skates were Cinderella slippers. The Scotchman's request was like the midnight bell. This stranger must not know she was alone and to accept his invitation would be to invite discovery. "I must find my friends," she prevaricated, skating swiftly away. Having obtained her wrap from the checkroom she found a sleigh "for hire" instead of a pumpkin chariot and sped home over the crispy snow.

Betty chided and excused herself for her unfinished fun and the sudden dismissal of her delightful skating partner: "I didn't dare. I couldn't bear to have him know I came alone." Happy reflections filled her Christmas day.

Next morning in the store girls were relating experiences while putting their stock in order. "Well, Sunshine, did he come?" asked Gertrude folding the covercloth. "Of course he did," said Betty caressing the dummy's hair.

Her happy face made her words ring true.

Across the aisle stood the department manager curiously studying the group. As he approached the counter each girl busily sought her own section. He chipped a flake of wax from the dummy's ear and said, "Miss Betty, I think there's a better head in the stockroom. Come, let us see."

Betty followed him down long aisles between rows and rows of boxes, silently. She trembled. On a table were heads—brown, blonde, red, black Betty studied them critically.

"Why did you run away last night?" The voice sounded strange and uncanny as the dummy's looked. Betty started. "Oh, I—what do you mean?" "Just that," he said; "I don't believe you knew I was the Scotchman."

"Why, I never dreamed it," she laughed.

"Then, won't you go with me to the ice rink tonight? I love to skate with you, Betty. I do enjoy skating. Then perhaps you'll tell me why you ran away."

Betty laughed happily and promised.

Back to the main floor they went, forgetful of the badly needed head. "Where's the new doll, Sunshine?" said Hattie. "There wasn't any—that is—that would do." Betty was thinking more of skating than of marcelled dummies that day and soon another girl had the demonstration.

The girls in the circle did not know what became of Betty until one day she came down the aisle chatting gayly with her husband, the department manager.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

It is unwise to advise women in all parts of the country to preserve and pickle this or that at a certain time. Fruits may be gone in the South and not yet in the markets in the North. One must watch their own market and choose the fruit at the proper time. Early peaches are often picked green to get the early prices and are tasteless and unpalatable. When coming in by the bushel and at a reasonable price is the time to can and preserve peaches. Each year we are warned that the crop is light and it is best to can early; however, it is not good management to follow such advice, as a rule.

Quinces usually come late in the fall in the North and a few will add much to the winter attractions.

Quince and Apple Marmalade.—Wash the quinces and remove the brown end. Cut the fruit, without peeling, into small pieces, cover with water and cook until soft. Rub through a sieve and combine with twice the measure or even more of cooked apple pulp. Use two measures of sugar for three of the pulp. Cook slowly for half an hour, or longer. Pour into glasses and seal with paraffin when the marmalade is cold.

Plum Conserve.—Wash and cook five pounds of Damson plums with two cupsful of crushed pineapple. Add three-fourths of the quantity of sugar and cook slowly until clear. Add the juice of a lemon and one-fourth pound of almonds, blanched and shredded. Cook five minutes longer and pour into jars and seal.

Carrot Marmalade.—Many like this confection as well as the pure fruit marmalade. Take twelve raw carrots grated, four cupsful of sugar, three lemons, one teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon and allspice. Cook all together slowly one hour. Turn into jars and seal.

Concord grapes make delicious jam if the skins are cooked until tender and added to the pulp just before taking off the heat.

New Cushion Themes

In regard to the Christmas gift problem there's this in favor of sofa cushions, no matter how many one may possess "there's always room for one more." To women skilled in fine needlecraft the pillow of chenille-embroidered velvet is proving a new inspiration. Something "different" too, is the black felt cushion top done in cut-out design, and posed over white or colorful satin.

Holds Toothbrush

As a reminder that "a place for everything and everything in its place" is a good precept, Santa Claus plans to distribute "oodles" of cunning toothbrush holders to the "kiddies" this year. Two popular painted wooden types are shown in the picture. An amusing model which brings a smile at every glance is that of a wee china dog or kitty cat which holds the brush so that it looks like the tail of the little creature.

FARM POULTRY

GREEN FEED BIG WINTER DEMAND

Increases Egg Production and Is Profitable.

Green feed added to the laying hen's ration in winter has increased egg production and has proven profitable wherever used.

"When the green feed pasture is exhausted with the coming of frost and cold weather, it is then necessary for the poultryman to provide such feed," recommends C. F. Parrish, poultry extension specialist at the North Carolina State college. "There is a wide variety of feeds that may be used to avoid monotony. Rape, alfalfa, oats, clovers, wheat, rye, barley, mangels and other feeds may be used. Sprouted oats are also used effectively by some growers. The oats are fed when the sprout is about three inches long and make an excellent succulent to supplement the scratch grain and mash."

Mr. Parrish says that it is not difficult to build a home-made oat sprouter. All that is needed is a number of trays with holes punched in the bottom to allow excess water to escape. The seed oats are spread thinly over the trays to prevent the formation of mold growths. Sprouted oats secured in this manner are fed at the rate of from one to two ounces per day per hen. A good producing hen will consume from 25 to 30 pounds of this feed in a winter.

Hanging cabbage about 18 inches from the floor will afford the laying hen needed exercise and will give her the succulent green feed needed. Beets may be used the same way.

When it is impossible to supply green feed, cod-liver oil may be mixed with the mash or grain ration to supply the same food elements. In mixing this oil with the feed, Mr. Parrish suggests that a small amount of the feed be taken and the cod-liver oil worked in thoroughly and this used as a stock mixture with the remaining food. One pint of the oil to each 100 pounds of feed is enough to use.

Lack of Water Causes Early Molt by Layers

Water supplies an important and indispensable part of the ration. Hens can go longer without feed than without water and still live.

The hen's body is made up of over one-half water and the eggs which she lays are approximately two-thirds water.

Heavily producing hens which are deprived of water often go into a molt, and that means a marked cutting down in egg production.

Since the fowls in the laying pens drink often, taking small quantities at a time, it is essential that proper provision be made so they may satisfy their thirst at all times.

Practice Culling All Seasons on Any Flock

"Culling should be practiced at all seasons of the year and on all stock when its use is advisable," says the Maryland experiment station. Any bird observed at any time which is sick or unthrifty should be removed from the flock at once. Delay in removing such birds often results in the spread of serious diseases throughout the flock. If such birds are in a serious condition they should be immediately disposed of by burying or burning.

Poultry Notes

The Bronze and White Holland breeds are popular.

The logical solution for raising poultry on any farm is a rotation of range area.

The essentials of good winter quarters for poultry are that the place should be clean, dry, well-lighted and free from drafts.

Heating drinking water for the hens with coal or wood is much cheaper than letting them heat it with food.

A shutter ventilator, or baffle, may be used in place of one sash of a window to give better ventilation during the winter when the poultry house is closed.

The question of whether or not hens should be confined to the house during the winter is debated by poultrymen and diverse opinions are found among them.

Arranging roosts that they can be raised will give greater access to the droppings boards for cleaning.

A scratch-mash ration has been found better than an all-mash ration for hens, and even for chicks after they are six or eight weeks old.

Even when one is practicing a system of sanitation in regard to the ranges and yard, he should not overlook the fact that clean brooder houses and laying houses are vitally essential.

If your locality is not at present represented with a correspondent and you wish to act as such just call at this office or write us and we will furnish you with the necessary stationery and instructions.

TRAIN BOYS FOR FATHERHOOD

By DR. I. M. ALLEN, Michigan School Superintendent.

BOYS ought to be trained for fatherhood just as much as girls ought to be trained for motherhood. Pre-parental education for girls has already been provided in the Highland Park schools. The next logical step is to extend pre-parental education to boys and to organize parental education classes, either as a part of the school curriculum or through the organization of child study groups by parent-teacher organizations. The greatest contribution the parent-teacher organization in any community can make to the schools is the promotion of child study groups among parents and future parents to secure a more widespread and scientific knowledge of the child.

Extension of the work of the parent-teacher association in providing physical examinations for children under school age to the realm of mental hygiene is also contemplated in Highland Park. Such a development would mean that by the time the child is ready to enter school for the first time a complete record of the history of his early mental development would be available in addition to physical records, thus materially aiding the school authorities in planning mental and social adjustments in extra-normal cases.

There is no short cut method for building character in the large. The schools operate on the theory that specific character traits have essential activities that contribute to the fixation of such character traits. These activities the schools are selecting for emphasis. The home may render valuable assistance by encouraging participation in these activities.

PUBLIC ACCORD TEST OF LAW

By ROBERT F. WAGNER, United States Senator.

Law must never be merely a business; the primary thing is justice. The lawyer today must be an artist. He must have a knowledge of science and of social behavior. Tradition through generations has raised him in the profession to an artist.

We may as well realize that whatever may be our theoretical notions as to the common origin of law, citizens and officials alike carefully discriminate between law and law. In a democracy the best test of law is public accord. When that is lacking the law becomes a hollow phrase, devoid of the living spirit. No amount of mechanical tinkering can make it a living thing. The repeal of such a law merely prevents its already lifeless form from cluttering our statute books.

As to President Hoover's crime commission, if it starts out in a spirit of adventure, discovers its own facts and draws its own inferences it will be a success. But if it accepts the views of the President in his address on law observance it will from the beginning be tied to an unrealistic view of the law which may well spell the wreck of the whole adventure.

LICE CAUSE SKIN ILLS OF ANIMALS

Much Annoyance and Unthrif Comes in Winter.

Lousiness is one of the most common skin disorders affecting domestic animals during the winter and spring months, and results in a good deal of annoyance and unthrif. Two general types of lice are to be found on animals, namely biting and sucking lice. The first variety feeds upon the skin secretions and epidermic cells while the second pierces the skin and sucks blood.

Because of their feeding habits, biting lice can be destroyed by the use of stomach poisons, such as sodium fluoride, dusted into the coat of the animal or bird. Biting lice are the only type affecting fowls, hence this powder is very effective in treating them. These poisons, however, are worthless in treating sucking lice. Here either contact poisons or oily preparations must be used.

Hogs harbor only sucking lice and are usually treated by dipping or hand dressing with crude petroleum—equal parts of kerosene and cotton-seed oil or some similar preparation. Oils, while effective in destroying lice on horses and cattle, are objectionable, because of the messy condition in which the coat is left and because oils used freely tend to cause a loss of hair, especially in horses. Coal tar dips are effective, cheap and easily applied. They should be used with caution, however, in cold weather because of likelihood of chilling the animal and danger of pneumonia. Wood alcohol is an effective insecticide when used on horses or other animals but is inflammable and care must be exercised to avoid fire.

Whatever insecticide is used for destroying lice will require repetition in about twenty days, as none of these agents destroy the eggs or nits effectively. Clipping of long hair is a material aid in treatment when weather or housing conditions will permit.—R. F. Bourne, Department of Veterinary Medicine, Colorado Agricultural College.

Stockmen Taking Steps

Leading to Big Horses

Since the supply of draft horses is limited, many stock men are taking steps leading up to the breeding and production of their own animals. Not every farmer is adapted for the production of horses and many do not have the facilities at hand for economical horse production. However, in every community, there are men who enjoy working with horses and know how to raise them. These men are equipped usually to give intelligent time and feeding to the development of draft colts and there is but little doubt that the time is at hand when such men can profitably engage in horse production, at least to the extent of taking care of their own replacements and so managing their operations that they will have a team or two to sell each season.

Rough Handling Causes

Heavy Losses of Swine

The hog is subjected to its first danger of bruising when being loaded out of the feeding pen at the farm previous to being taken to market. Very often the pigs have not been out of the fattening pen for months, and unless strict precaution is exercised in loading out of the pen difficulties will occur. Where the shipper loses his temper and the pigs are beaten and hammered the result is that they are heated up and often bruised before they leave the station. Bruises that occur before shipment are the most serious because sufficient time elapses before slaughter to allow such bruises to fester, thus damaging a portion of the surrounding tissue in addition to the bruised spot.

Live Stock Facts

Good yields per animal are necessary to low cost production.

Oats or rye, either one, are feeds than can be used with fair success in feeding hogs.

Nothing but pure bred sires are now being used by 17,345 live stock owners in the United States.

Dehorning calves should be done when a few days old, or as soon as the horns can be felt under the skin.

A foal makes more than half of its entire growth during the first year. If stunted during this time, it will never fully recover. Good bone and muscle are of prime importance with the horse and feeds which tend to produce these should be chosen.

Barley is a good hog feed. It is trifle bulky for the best results for fattening purposes when fed alone. When used on a 50-50 basis with corn and a 5 per cent tankage ration, good results have been obtained with barley as a pork producer.

Fast and Frantic

Tornadoes, despite the tremendous damage they cause, seldom exist for more than an hour at a time. Fast workers, tornadoes.

Art in Basketry

A basket for every need is evidently the slogan adopted in modern Christmas gift sections. Art in basketry is indeed touching the high spots this season, as the gorgeous raffia basket in the picture bears witness. The flowers are done in the bas relief and gayly painted. 'Twould indeed be a difficult matter to conceive of a more happily chosen gift coming from one woman to another at Christmas time.

BAMBOOZLE HENS BY USING LIGHTS

Lengthening Day Must Be Done Carefully to Pay.

Being notoriously simple-minded, the hen can readily be bamboozled by the use of electric lights, into working 14 hours a day during the winter. But the trick is a good one only when it works, and the careless or ignorant user of lights can do his flock more damage than the extra eggs will pay for. The theory of the thing is that having more light, the hen will eat more food, which will enable her to lay more eggs.

A series of cautions for the user of lights in the poultry house, is found on the Ohio State poultry calendar. They are as follows:

1. Grade and pen pullets according to age, condition, and laying qualities, so that each group may be properly handled.
2. Excessive fall production makes it hard to keep the flock in heavy production during the winter.
3. Don't use lights to produce more than a 14-hour day. Excessive use of lights means overproduction, followed by a slump.
4. To avoid a spring molt, discontinue lights slowly in the spring.
5. Use lights on breeders only after January 1 to 15, in order to help them back into production.
6. Don't crowd production over 60 per cent, otherwise the flock will become thin and molt.
7. Be regular in management and the use of lights.
8. Feed grain liberally when using lights.
9. Always have feed and water available when lights are on.
10. Do not turn lights off too early in the spring.
11. Do not stop feeding early and late in the day when lights are finally eliminated.

Early Hatched Pullets Best for Winter Eggs

Where eggs in winter are wanted the early hatched pullet is, without doubt, the one to depend upon. Yearling hens and those older ones are very rarely good producers during November and December.

They are uncertain even in January and February and really do not begin to lay well until March. Where the egg production falls below 15 per cent during the winter months, one is not making much profit.

The age at which most pullets begin laying is from six to seven months; some lay at four and one-half to five months, and others not until eight or nine months of age.

This means that if a 50 per cent egg yield is wanted in November, the pullets should be hatched during March or April; May hatched pullets will lay a little, but, as a rule, not 40 or more per cent daily.

Vigor and Vitality of Parent Stock Weighty

Successful hatching of eggs in incubators depends fully as much on the vigor and vitality of the parent stock and the care of the eggs before being put into the incubator as upon the incubator itself.

Successful hatches can be expected only when the birds in the pens from which the eggs come are enjoying an abundant health.

Poor hatches are probably caused more frequently by poor breeding stock than by poor incubators.

Poultry Facts

Hens pay for warming their drink.

The largest breed of chickens raised in the United States is said to be the Jersey black giant.

Build the straw loft straight across. There should be 12 to 18 inches of straw after it has settled.

Watch the old hens in your poultry flock. They are dangerous spreaders of poultry tuberculosis.

Heating the laying houses is becoming a more frequent practice. If heat is properly applied and used with discretion, it should prove beneficial.

Liquid, condensed or dried skim milk or buttermilk is valuable for winter feeding. Milk has a tonic effect, whets the appetite for other feeds and serves as a partial substitute for green feed.

A straw loft just high enough to keep you from using swear words will make a lot of difference in keeping the poultry house warm and dry.

Producers have had experience in the past where their hens did better when confined to the houses than when they were given range.

Over one-half of the total egg crop for the year is produced during the four months of March, April, May and June, according to United States Department of Agriculture statistics.

LIVE STOCK

NEED FOR 1,000,000 COLTS EACH YEAR

Animals Wanted to Replace and Maintain Work Stock.

Even on the farm, his last stronghold, the horse is now giving way to the automobile and tractor at the rate of 500,000 a year, reports C. D. Lowe, Department of Agriculture statistician, writing in the Farm Journal. Where there were 21,555,000 farm horses in America in 1918 there are barely more than 14,000,000 today.

Of course, an abnormal increase in horse and mule breeding marked the war year, when the animals were shipped overseas by the million, but the years since have seen a distinct falling off even from normal pre-war figures.

"The Department of Agriculture puts the total number of horses on farms in the United States at 14,029,000 head, and mules 5,447,000 head," reports Mr. Lowe. "This is a reduction in horses of approximately 500,000 and in mules of 85,000 in a year."

"Assuming that the average life of a farm-work animal is 15 years, about a million foals annually are required to maintain the work-stock population at its present level. At present it is only on a half-rate replacement basis."

However, the horse has and will hold his place in the city where he has been found more efficient than the motor truck for certain types of heavy hauling in congested traffic, and on the hilly farm, as well as in sport, where he can never be replaced.

Mr. Lowe's Farm Journal figures indicate a trend toward more heavy-duty horses and the selective breeding of riding and racing types. The draft breed stallions now being licensed, he points out, outnumber the lighter type stallions by approximately 12 to 1.

Live Stock Does Best on Fresh, Warm Water

Good feeders have long recognized the value of liberal quantities of water to all classes of live stock. Hogs "do better" and are more thrifty, and cows give more milk when they drink freely. One justification of the old slopping method of feeding hogs was the fact that it encouraged them to drink great amounts of water.

Experiment station tests and farm experience have established beyond question the value of warm water for stock during winter weather. In one test with fall pigs, the use of automatically heated waterers saved $1 per pig in feeding costs. A cow producing 5 gallons of milk a day will drink about 20 gallons of water. If she is compelled to drink that amount of ice water, much of her energy is required to heat it to body temperature, and her production suffers.

Tank heaters and automatic waterers help solve the problem of warm water in winter. Some of the automatic waterers can be used to heat water in cold weather and to keep it cool in summer.

Cottonseed or Linseed Oil Meal for Fattening

A recent test was made at the Illinois experiment station to see if cottonseed meal could replace the linseed meal in the drylot supplement of two parts of tankage, one part of linseed meal, and one part of alfalfa meal. Two lots of 20 63-pound pigs were fed for 112 days in drylot on shelled corn with the two supplements, and each lot had access to a mineral mixture. The gains in both lots were practically identical. More of the cottonseed meal supplement was eaten, but less corn was consumed than when linseed meal was used. Somewhat less feed was required for 100 pounds of gain when cottonseed meal was used. No harmful effects were noted from feeding cottonseed meal, but it was considered that pigs fed cottonseed meal lacked somewhat in luster of coat and finish at the end of the experiment as compared with the linseed meal group.

With Corn Plentiful Fattening Ration Easy

Where corn is plentiful this year the fattening ration is simple, as corn is the best as well as the most commonly used fat producer. It is usually one of the most economical feeds for hogs and should comprise the greater portion of the ration. Corn alone is not a complete ration. It should be balanced with about three to five pounds of tankage for each 100 pounds of corn for fattening. It does not pay to soak, grind, or cook corn for fattening hogs.

Legume and Grain Needed

Young stock cannot make normal growth during the winter season on cornstalks, silage and prairie hay. Such feeds furnish enough heat to maintain the body temperature but do not provide the nutrients necessary for building bone and tissue. Legume hays such as clover and alfalfa should be furnished in addition to the poorer grade roughages. For the best possible growth it is necessary to feed some grain to young stock during the winter.

A Christmas Candle

By Katherine Edelman

LOWLY, almost reverently, Nora Carney set the Christmas candle in the window, whispering a prayer as she looked out into the cold, still night. Bravely the little flame gleamed out into the darkness; a beckoning light to any wanderer that might be seeking shelter.

"Mother, won't you tell us the story of Christmas again?" little Michael asked. "Tell us about the coming of the Christ Child, and—-and the reason they light the Christmas candle in Ireland?"

Nora Carney had been born in Ireland. Now, her home was in the midst of a great western prairie, but, as her children gathered around her, she told them the story of the coming of the Christ Child and the reason for the lighting of the Christmas candle as her own mother used to tell it to her long ago, around a glowing peat fire in far-away Ireland.

"You know, children," she began, "when Jesus came there was no place for Him. Joseph and Mary were so tired and so weary after the long journey into Bethlehem, but every place they sought a shelter they got the same answer 'no room.' People took little interest in them because they were poor; so they had to go out to that dark, cold cave, and there the little Christ Child was born. Angels were singing their songs of joy and welcome for Him over the hills of Judea, but in Bethlehem they sought a shelter in vain.

"I wish our house had been there, mother; we—we would have let them in," little Mary interrupted.

Mrs. Carney stopped to stroke the curly head with her work worn hand, then went on: "In Ireland there is a beautiful legend that very often Mary, with the little Christ Child in her arms, comes back to earth on Christmas eve, and wanders around seeking a shelter for herself and Jesus. And lest she might seek a place in vain, a Christmas candle is placed in every home to guide her."

"Oh, children," she went on, her voice taking on a radiant note, "it is a beautiful sight to look out on Christmas eve and see every hill and valley in Ireland dotted with little golden lights; the whole country looks like one big Christmas tree."

She stopped a few moments as if memory carried her back over the years and she was looking on the scene once more; then, at the insistence of the children, went on:

"This was how the beautiful custom of lighting the Christmas candle started, and it has been kept up through the years."

"But—but—" practical-minded Jimmie interrupted: "They—the mother and child don't really come back—do they?"

"I—I don't know for sure, Jimmie, but I do know that very often others that the Christ Child loves are needing aid or shelter. Sometimes it is only a kind word, or a bit of encouragement, maybe, but if we give it, and give it cheerfully at Christmas, we are really doing it for Him and—-and giving Him the shelter that they refused in Bethlehem long ago. You know the words He said when He was here: 'Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, ye do it unto Me.'"

Silence fell upon the room after the story was finished. Even practical-minded Jimmie asked no other question. All the children seemed to be looking toward the little candle that was shining so bravely in the window. Now, after the story that they had listened to, it was no ordinary candle that they were looking at; it had grown to be something sacred, something inspiring.

And in the years to come, no matter where the Carney children might be scattered over the earth, always the lighting of the Christmas candle would bring back the memory of this hour, and for all of them it would always be a symbol of the love and desire to help others at Christmas for His sake.

The custom of hanging evergreens in the house at Christmas time originally had a purpose beyond decoration. In olden times, each kind of evergreen was supposed to confer special blessings on those who passed beneath it. To pass under holly insured good fortune for the coming year.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By John Clarence Funk, A. M., Sc. D.

Director of Public Health Education, State of Pennsylvania

No Need to Be Ashamed

THE other day a health officer tacked up a scarlet-fever sign on a man's house. When night came the owner tore it down. The next evening he paid a fine of fifty dollars and costs for interfering with a health law!

It seems that this particular householder was ashamed of the sign and somehow concluded that he was personally discredited for having it there—a silly notion, of course.

Disease is no respecter of persons. Like rain, it falls upon the good and the bad, the rich and the poor, the wise and the foolish. Therefore, unless one has thoughtlessly or deliberately done something to direct illness to one's self or others, there is certainly nothing about which to blush. In other words, it may be hard luck to have a communicable disease in one's home, but it most emphatically is not a crime.

Epidemics are serious, costly and deadly things. Quarantine is designed to limit the spread of contagion and usually satisfactorily fulfills its purpose. In fact, it is the most successful public health weapon that can be employed when a communicable disease asserts itself.

It would be foolish to say that this control method is not a decided inconvenience to the family involved. But the law of the greatest good to the greatest number must always prevail. Consequently, irrespective of temporary inconvenience or desire, under no circumstances "crash" a quarantine sign. This applies equally to the "outs," as well as to the "ins."

HINTS THAT HELP

The custom of serving fruit cup or cocktails at dinner is one that should be encouraged.

The contents may vary with the season, but even when serving a hot soup on a cool day the cocktail is enjoyed as a beginner of the meal. Oranges combine with almost any fruit combination and they are one of our year round fruits. Grapefruit is canned now, and so delicious that one need never worry when the fresh fruit is not available, as the canned is always here.

It is a good plan to make a lemon sirup and keep it in the ice chest to add to various fruits. Muskmelon cut with a French cutter into balls and dressed with a lemon or a preserved ginger sirup is especially attractive and tasty for a fruit cocktail.

With the delightful honey melons so thick, sweet and meaty, a bit of rather acid lemon sauce is most acceptable.

Add a half teaspoonful or a bit more to a kettle of corn, to the peas, beans, or in fact a bit of sugar to any vegetable added while cooking will improve the flavor.

A sprinkling of sugar over roasts makes them brown nicely and the sweet is not noticed.

Lemon juice is a mild bleaching agent which is always available. Use a pumice stone to rub off the roughness on the hands and fingers then add the lemon juice to remove the stain.

Add half a lemon to the rinse water when washing the hair; it will cut any soap that may cling to the rinse. A drop of bluing added to the rinse for white hair will take away the yellow look which is so common to many white-haired people.

Fine lace, delicate white embroidery which has become yellowed, will, when boiled in water with a little lemon juice and a few drops of blu-ing, become snowy white again.

Lemon and salt is good for cleaning copper and brass.

TURKEY RAISING SHOULD DEVELOP

Survey Reveals Industry One of Most Profitable.

That "turkey production in the West should become one of the major farm enterprises if economic conditions remain as good as they have been during the past three years" is the belief of F. B. Headley, chief of the department of farm development of the University of Nevada agricultural experiment station.

Basis for his conclusion, Headley says, is a cost of production study carried on by his department during the last three years on five farms in Churchill county. Other profitable enterprises on the farms surveyed, according to the experiment station man, were alfalfa production, dairying and the raising of chickens, but turkeys brought in greater return for capital and labor expended.

Cost of producing the average turkey, which weighed 13 pounds dressed, on the basis of more than 5,000 birds covered by the study, was $3.52, or approximately 27 cents a pound.

"The bulk of the cost in producing turkeys is for feed," Headley says. "On most farms pasture constitutes an essential part of the ration and it is probable that the low cost of production is due in large part to the excellent alfalfa and grain stubble pasture that has been available."

Other conclusions concerning turkey production drawn by Headley from the survey are that the interest on investment is low, that "large flocks require less time per bird than the smaller flocks, and that over 75 per cent of all costs is for labor and feed."

Popularity of Frozen Eggs Fast Increasing

While at one time practically all eggs kept in Pennsylvania cold storage warehouses were "in shell," several million pounds of eggs "out of shell" have been reported in storage each year during the past few years, according to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. On June 30, 1928, the cold storage report for the state showed 4,657,000 pounds of eggs out of shell in storage, just ten times more than were in storage on the corresponding date in 1914.

The increasing popularity of the frozen eggs is explained by the bureau of markets as follows: "In the spring when eggs are plentiful, surplus eggs are purchased by breaking establishments which break and place the eggs in containers to be frozen as whole eggs, egg yolks, or egg whites for the use of the baking industry. After being frozen solid, the eggs are kept at a temperature ranging from zero to five degrees below. These are then made available to bakers at any time during the year. Many bakers report that these eggs give the most satisfactory results when kept in a frozen condition for about three months."

Well-Ventilated House Needful During Winter

A warm poultry house that will help to keep egg production high during the winter months must be well ventilated, says Prof. E. R. Gross, agricultural engineer at the New Jersey experiment station, New Brunswick.

To maintain a warm, well-ventilated henhouse three things are needed, advises Professor Gross: Tight walls, doors, and windows; ventilating flues, which may be constructed of wood at a low cost, and limited overhead space. To make the building tight, close all the cracks, cover the outside walls with roll roofing, or ceil the inside walls. Reduce the air space by ceiling overhead or by constructing a straw loft.

Ventilation and warmth go together. If the house is tightly built and has all doors and windows closed, the birds will give off heat enough to raise the inside temperature considerably above that on the outside. But when the house is tightly closed, moisture will begin to accumulate and the air become stale. Ventilation is needed, therefore, to carry away the moisture and to bring in fresh air.

Disappointment Sure

Compounding the ration of the laying hen, particular attention should be paid to the inclusion of the necessary vitamins. Yellow corn and green feeds provide much of vitamin A. Vitamin B is carried in wheat, corn, green feeds, alfalfa meal, alfalfa leaf flour and others. Vitamin D, or its equivalent, is supplied by making use of direct sunshine or by resorting to cod liver oil, the latter being an outstanding source of this most essential substance.

Keep Ground Clean

Clean and fresh ground may be made available by moving the house or houses to new ground each year, or by having a regular rotation of sown crops.

Sanitary ground is particularly necessary in the handling of all chicks and growing stock.

All poultry runs should be disced and planted with oats, rye, wheat or similar crops. Discing or plowing once a year is not sufficient for best results.

Comfort for Many

The Surprise Santa Claus

By Florence Harris Wells

HERE'S the Christmas tree, Miss Johnson. That's that." Tom Blodgett, who represented the school board in the snow-bound village, stood back and surveyed the fine symmetrical fir he had just made stable in the center of the schoolroom platform. "Now what next, teacher?"

Peggy Johnson laughed gayly: "Next, we hang all the Christmas ornaments I've been able to get together in this community, and all the strings of popcorn and cranberries the mothers could spare."

"You're bound to have a Christmas celebration of some kind, aren't you, even if we have been hemmed in here for four straight weeks. In all the years I've been here I've never seen such a steady snowfall," Tom continued; "not a chance for an auto to make that forty miles to the city, all up grade as it is. The youngsters will get their faith in Santa Claus shaken. I'm afraid this year. Presents will be mighty scarce."

"Scarce all right," Peggy cheerfully agreed. "But they're going to have as good a Christmas as it is possible for us to give them."

"I'm with you on that," Tom said. "My little folks and all the other kiddies are looking forward to this more than they ever have to any Christmas. The big folks are, too. Fine idea of yours, Miss Johnson. Everybody's keen about it."

As they chatted the tree was fast becoming gay and festive in its Christmas apparel. They had barely finished when the village folks began to straggle in, laden with baskets of food. It was to be a community dinner, followed by carols and games and the distribution of the few presents they had been able to assemble from the town's meager resources.

It was when the games were the very liveliest that the crash came—a crash that kered the little schoolhouse and brought the merrymaking to an abrupt standstill.

A second, and Tom, followed by others, rushed out; then came the real surprise. In came Tom and with him —Santa Claus in a scarlet Hudson Bay coat, plaid trowsers tucked into his heavy boots, and a fur cap pulled down over his ears.

Behind them were the others, their arms filled with bundles of all sizes and descriptions; while dolls and trumpets, drums and all sorts of toys were piled in a great hamper that two of the men brought in between them.

The boys and girls shouted with glee and the older folks looked on in amazement. Tom and Santa Claus walked straight to Miss Johnson. Santa Claus pulled off the great fur cap. Both Santa Claus and Peggy stared.

"Peggy!" he stammered. "Reg!" she stammered back. "Where did you come from?"

Santa Claus found his tongue: "I was headed here—I didn't know you were here. I heard the town was snowbound and I thought I'd be Santa Claus. But I thought it was five miles beyond. I figured my big car could get through on the down grade. I hated to think of kiddies having no Christmas. But the car got off the track in the drifts and we came down the side of the hill like a rocket until we hit this school."

"I'd say you did," Tom interrupted as he turned away from them.

"I thought I was done for," Reg continued. "Instead I'm made if you say so, Peggy. I've hunted all over for you since your father lost his money and you ran away from me because you thought it made a difference."

Peggy's eyes glistened as she fought back her tears; then she caught Reg by the hand and dragged him into the group surrounding the gifts.

"Here's Santa Claus already to distribute the presents!" Santa Claus caught her spirit and held her hand a bit tighter as he gayly added: "And the future Mrs. Santa Claus already to help him. We wish you all a Merry Christmas!"

And the little room, that all the evening had been so filled with good will, just brimmed over with laughter and song and Merry Christmases.

The Real Holiday Spirit Prevails in Mentone

Never before was the holiday spirit so much in evidence in this village as at the present time. Our merchants have all made a special effort and stocked anything and everything that would be suitable for gifts at this Yuletide.

A visit to the business section of our little city and a look in the show windows will surely solve that ever perplexing problem "what to buy." The many neatly trimmed show windows are surely worth seeing, and inside of the stores you will find that the prices asked are remarkably low and the articles of highest quality. In our opinion there is simply no good reason why any of our people should go to any other town to do their Christmas shopping, and we truly believe that a better quality of goods and at lower prices can be had in our home town—Mentone. There are a number of merchants advertising in the Farm News that invite you to visit their stores. Their advertising support makes it possible for us to publish this paper and we trust that our readers will call and look their stocks over and give them their patronage.

NEED FOR BROTHERHOOD SPIRIT

By DR. JULIUS ATWOOD, Former Episcopal Bishop of Arizona.

Right and wrong are undeniable facts of the universe. Although we may differ regarding prohibition and total abstinence, we must surely recognize that drunkenness is wrong, and the laws of the nation must be obeyed. It is harder to live for one's country than to die for it. With the strong appeal these days for money and power, it is still harder. The integrity of our nation is at stake when money and power are used dishonestly by our public officials.

There cannot be a national faith without trust, a national fame without truthfulness and a national responsibility without justice. You and I are not only responsible for our own selves but for the welfare of all. What shall it profit a nation, as much as man, to gain the whole world and lose its own soul. The spirit of brotherhood, sympathy and service are needed in this new age to guide us, for men cannot worship Christ and the devil at the same time. The spirit of Him who first gave us an expression of a true democracy will in turn give us perfect liberty as a nation.

NATION'S YOUTH WOMAN-MINDED

By PROFESSOR ROGERS, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

For a half century now the larger part of our young people have been trained exclusively by women teachers. Fifty years of this has produced a public incompetent to think politically and philosophically. Our American thinking is feminine thinking, inculcated by women teachers, highly competent in detail, rigidly idealistic, regardless of the working facts, and weak on critical examination.

The fault is not the children's nor the women's but that of the business men, who do, or at least should, manage their communities. It is not stinginess. We pay millions for educational fads, fancies and teachers, but we won't pay salaries sufficient to attract competent and strong men teachers to teach our young people.

Girls as well as boys need men teachers long before they reach the age of seventeen or eighteen. They need them at the beginning of adolescence.

I differ from the common wail that our young people are irreligious. They have no intellectual training which enables them to settle their religious problems adequately.

Mentone Wins Two More Double Headers

The Mentone Basket Ball Team played at Silver Lake hall Friday night. The Mentone Team after trailing behind a few points at the start soon gained a lead on the Silver Lake boys, the score at the first half stood 17 to 12 in favor of Mentone.

Mentone resumed their scoring in the second half, and at the close of the game the score was 33 to 15.

The second team won also with little difficulty, leading all through the game, the score was 28 to 12.

Saturday night the Mentone boys played at Sidney. The boys again maintained an early lead over Sidney which was held throughout the game. At the first half Mentone was leading by a score of 33 to 11. The Mentone boys came back strong again in the second half and scored freely, until near the close of the game when Sidney made a rally but was unable to overcome Mentone lead. Mentone won by a score of 58 to 34.

The Mentone second team played an equally fine game winning over the Sidney boys by a score of 41 to 21.

Sidney has been playing a strong game but was unable to keep up to Mentone's fast offense.

Mentone's next game will be with North Webster at Mentone, Friday evening, December 20. This promises to be a good game and a large crowd is expected.

Rewards Await

There is no road too long to the man who advances deliberately and without undue haste; no honors too distant to the man who prepares himself for them with patience.—La Bruyere.

If It's Done For Love No More Could Be Asked.

AFTER ALL, LIFE offers many compensations. Someone once said; "It matters not who won or lost, but how did you play the Game?" And own compensation often comes that way. Great loves and deep sorrows come to every life. And when one erects a memorial to the memory of a love that is intimate and deeply personal, it is the spirit of action which means the most. "If it's done for love no more could be asked."

We will gladly give you information on some of the beautiful new designs just received at our office.

Resolutions

To the memory of Mrs. Bessie Clutter, beloved member, of the Sodales Club, who passed away from this world into the greater experience upon Nov. 25th, 1929. We as her fellow club members and devoted friends, wish to pay fitting tribute.

Mrs. Clutter possessed a noble mind, a splendid versatility, an unusual power of comprehension, a ready sympathy, a divine understanding coupled with the strength of will for their right use. All who met her trusted her instinctively and that well founded faith was never betrayed.

She lived a life of service. Her time was never too limited for a cheery word or a kind deed.

Realizing only too poignantly our own sorrow at our loss, we the members of the Sodales Club, do resolve to extend to the members of her immediate family as well as to her large circle of friends, our expression of deepest sympathy and commiseration.

Pretty Idea for Clock

To suggest the gathering of sweets in which he specializes, a French confectioner has devised a clock that suggests bees passing from flower to flower. Revision Added to Beauty

Of that mighty poem, Gray's "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard," it is known that Gray made many revisions and changes in it. Hard for Robots and Men We Need Submarines Letting Convicts Read A New Standard Lady Science piles prodigy on prodigy, miracle on miracle, so rapidly that it tires the average brain.

Professor Partridge, only twenty-six years old, in New York university's chemistry department, can manufacture lithium at $15 a pound. A little while ago you couldn't have got a pound for a million dollars. Lithium is a metal so light that it floats even on kerosene.

Some things that float on water, you know, will not float on kerosene.

Professor McTavish of New York university demonstrates a robot, a mechanical man, with an electric lamp in place of eyes, a radio tube in place of a brain, relays and magnets for hands.

However, it can be shown that no robot can ever develop any new idea.

He who wishes to avoid robot competition should devote himself to developing new ideas and working them out.

From Seattle, the Pacific Aeronautics Research foundation plans, for next May, a nonstop flight across the Pacific.

Men have flown from Europe to South America, from London to India, across the Atlantic repeatedly, over the North and South poles.

The Pacific alone remains to be conquered.

And only a few years ago Lord Northcliffe offered $50,000 to any one that would fly the English channel!

The Brooklyn navy yard starts work on a new submarine, the V-7, keeping at work 725 men that would have been discharged. This encourages the people to think we may have some intelligent interest in national defense. Submarines with modern engines can go around the world without taking fuel, travelling on the surface, as they do in peace. A good fleet of really big submarines with heavy guns, knocked-down fighting planes, high speed and long sailing range would do a great deal for peace if they could be sent to visit every important port in the world.

Those well prepared have peace. The unprepared have war.

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing prison, wise man, says: "I shall let my convicts read in newspapers accounts of the outbreak in the Auburn penitentiary. There will be a good deal of buzzing when they read them. But the effect on their morale of withholding the newspapers would be worse than allowing them to see them."

That's an intelligent man. The czars might be ruling yet had they known enough to let the people know the facts.

Information and discussion supply a great safety valve.

The warden of Auburn prison, captured by convicts in rebellion, said the convicts, of whom many are dead, were made desperate by the knowledge that if they failed, they would surely go to the electric chair. In this case, at least, capital punishment did not deter men from murder.

The United States bureau of standards says the ideal woman is now "the perfect 34," not the "perfect 36" of days before the "boyish figure."

If your bust is 36 your waist should measure 31 inches, hips 39 inches.

Thirty-four bust, 28-inch waist, 37-inch hips, is the "standard lady," according to the bureau, which, however, knows nothing about it.

Abraham Lincoln's mother wasn't a "standard 34" nor was "Bertha with the big feet," mother of Charlemagne.

For a cloak model, the "perfect 34" is ideal, perhaps.

For an efficient mother, which is what counts, bigger busts, bigger waists, bigger hips.

Somebody supposed to be an expert says that the United States will manufacture in 1930, 1,000,000 fewer automobiles than in 1929.

That prediction, probably mistaken, is not creditable to the people's intelligence.

Many things a family can do without, but no family, properly organized can do without a good automobile.

The country, apparently, is still doing business. "Big Steel," Wall Street's name for the United States Steel corporation, shows unfilled orders for steel tonnage increased by 33,783 tons last month.

The company has a total of unfilled orders amounting to 4,123,345 tons, which does not look much like a "panic."

"As a sheep before her shearers is dumb." That's from the Bible.

"As a lamb after its shearing is dumb" may soon be the news in Wall Street. It depends on the rapidity with which the lambs go back for another shearing.

They always do go back, which is what makes brokers' seats worth $500,000 apiece, and will some day make them worth $1,000,000 apiece.

Mr. John Y. P. Moffat, representing the United States at Geneva, signed the protocol that, if nothing happens to prevent, will land us in the World court.

More Than Pleased

C. L. Manwaring, Mgr., of the White City Egg Farm received a letter from a customer in Pennsylvania recently, stating that the baby chicks that he purchased from the White City last year developed into larger fowls, producing more and larger eggs than any chicks that they had ever purchased. This customer had been dealing with the large eastern hatcheries, and stated that in the future the White City would get all of his orders for baby chicks. This surely is quite a compliment for Mr. Manwaring and the White City strain of White Leghorns.

Employment Problem Congress Comes Back Soul and Body One Quite a Budget

President Hoover's forceful address to nearly 400 industrial leaders in Washington is one for which the country will thank him. It is bound to produce results.

There is no cause for any pessimism or permanent discouragement, but the well-informed men know that there has been a sharp increase in unemployment.

We have probably in the United States fully as many unemployed as there are in Britain, where government pays a "dole" enough to live on each week, to those out of work.

We have here 2,000,000 more unemployed than they have in France, where unemployment is practically unknown.

And this is surprising in the richest, most prosperous country on earth.

The President is determined to do something about it.

Congress again in session and a cut of $100,000,000 in the income tax is the program.

That will be welcome news to those that pay income tax, a small percentage of all the people.

But it is just as important news to those that pay no income tax. They all earn money, and any cut in income tax, especially in corporation tax, encourages development, expansion, employment.

A man will work harder for money that the government does not take away from him.

One of the most important institutions in America is the new psychiatric unit of the medical center at Columbia college.

Doctor Butler of Columbia, Doctor Kirby and all promoting that important scientific center, including the New York state authorities, are to be congratulated.

EARLY DETECTION OF TB BIG HELP

Tuberculin Test When Properly Made Not Injurious.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Post-mortem examinations are often regarded as the final word in determining the presence of diseases in animals, although such examinations are valuable, the tuberculin test used in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, is actually more reliable than the customary post-mortem for determining the presence of tuberculosis, according to Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

"The tuberculin test indicates the presence of the disease but does not show the progress which the infection has made within the body," Doctor Mohler states. "Hence in the early stages of the disease it is entirely possible for an animal which is actually infected with tuberculosis to show no visible signs on either ante-mortem or post-mortem examination."

"Tuberculin is a product prepared by sterilizing, filtering, and concentrating the liquid upon which the tubercle bacilli have been allowed to grow. It contains the sterile product of the growth of the germs, but not the germs themselves. When properly used it can have no possible injurious effect on healthy cattle. Tuberculin commonly used in testing live stock in the United States is made under government supervision, which assures its purity and potency."

"The results obtained thus far in systematic tuberculin testing show the effectiveness of this means for eliminating infected animals. During the last 12 years more than 1,500,000 tuberculous cattle have been removed from herds in the United States and more than 2,000,000 herds have been freed of the disease."

Adapted Feed for Pigs Just at Weaning Time

Corn, shorts, and skim milk plus bright, leafy fourth cutting alfalfa hay make a very satisfactory ration to feed pigs at weaning time. Sweet milk is to be preferred to sour milk. However, if the milk is allowed to sour in clean containers it should prove satisfactory. It is not advisable to change from sweet milk to sour milk or vice versa.

Brood sows should be fed all the alfalfa hay they will eat, together with just enough corn to keep them in thrifty breeding condition. Oats may be used to good advantage in the brood sow ration. Too much corn will cause the sows to become fat, lazy and unprofitable producers.—A. D. Weber, University of Nebraska.

Breeding Ewes Require Little Grain and Hay

When on alfalfa hay alone, a group of breeding ewes will require in the neighborhood of 3½ pounds of prairie hay per day per head. Usually one needs to figure about a 200-day winter feeding period. This would require a supply of 12 to 15 tons of hay.

It probably would pay you to feed a little grain to these ewes beginning around the first of February and continuing until they go on grass. About three-fourths of a pound of grain per head per day would be sufficient and most any type of grain that you can secure easily will be satisfactory. Oats fed alone or a mixture of one-half oats and one-half barley or one-half oats and one-half corn would do very well.

Live Stock Hints

The silage fed steers have invariably been found to be more uniformly finished than steers fed straw and grain only.

Registered cattle with long time records in their pedigrees are bringing the most money.

If one-half gallon of skim milk is fed per pig per day the amount of tannage may be reduced one-half.

If ewes are to have good lambs next spring, they must have proper feed and plenty of exercise this winter.

Horse specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture forecast an increased demand for well bred horses during the next few years.

Some alfalfa or clover hay should be included in the ration for calves or yearlings being fattened for market.

Damp floors in hog houses need attention. Often a line of drain tile around the foundation will eliminate dampness.

In the western cattle raising country the tendency is toward smaller farms and ranches, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Ranching now calls for more farming and hay making than ever before.

Minerals Necessary for Growing Animals

Producing animals, pregnant animals, and growing animals need large amounts of minerals, says J. C. Nisbet of the Kansas extension service. A cow puts 14 pounds of mineral in every ton of milk, 56 pounds in a normal production year. A large amount of minerals is needed for repair within the body. A growing calf needs 40 to 60 grams of mineral matter per day.

Alfalfa hay contains the two minerals needed the most in animal nutrition, calcium lime and phosphorus. These minerals are available and in such abundance in alfalfa hay that there can be no deficiency when fed at the rate of one pound of hay for every 100 pounds live weight in a properly balanced ration. One pound of alfalfa hay contains more calcium than 100 pounds of corn. One ton of alfalfa contains 163 pounds of minerals.

Produce Ton Litters Without Feeding Corn

You can produce ton litters without corn. County Agent Svoboda, of Eddy county, North Dakota, tells of ten pigs, owned by Smith brothers and weighing 2,336 pounds at the age of six months. They were sired by a pure-bred Duroc boar and farrowed by a Chester White sow. After weaning, the pigs were on alfalfa pasture and were self-fed on ground barley at all times.

During the first four months these pigs were given a slop made of red dog and middlings, mixed with skim milk and water. The last two months the slop was made of ground hull-less oats. The owners believe the weight would have been increased had corn been available, but the experience shows that you can produce good pigs without corn.

Good Rams Needed

Those who have ewe flocks already established should by all means get good rams with which to mate them. Only by so doing can a product of good quality be secured. In some sheep raising countries the practice is to buy rams for the production of commercial lambs at a cost equal to from five to ten times the value of the average ewe. When good rams are secured this is not an exorbitant price and might serve as a fair guide as to how much to pay.

Sunflowers' Growth

The Department of Agriculture says that so far as it knows there has never been any authentic record made concerning the average height of sunflowers. However, it is estimated that six feet is usually the height of a healthy plant.

Hard to Melt Gold

It requires a temperature of about 2,000 degrees to melt gold. Therefore it cannot be melted without special apparatus.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By John Clarence Funk, A.M., Sc.D.

Blood Pressure

A MAN sitting in an office across the hall was designated by a friend as a "blood pressure victim." The term was mentioned in an awesome manner. And one could almost visualize a funeral. All very terrible, indeed. But the strange part about it is that the only people who do not have blood pressure are the dead ones!

Blood pressure can be likened to the force back of water in pipes. It is as necessary to distribute the blood to the tissues as it is to breathe. And blood pressure does the trick.

However, abnormal pressure is the condition that is professionally referred to as "blood pressure." But it must be understood that the mere presence of this type of trouble, in many instances, is far from being a death warrant. Quite otherwise, the men and women who are fortunate enough to discover that they possess high or low blood pressure are in the main more likely to live longer than is the person who plies such people and drops over dead the next week or year or decade himself.

This condition is based upon so many causes, ranging from worry nerves and hard work to a crippled arterial system and a diseased heart that such a diagnosis often means nothing more than taking care, mending habits and living longer than the fellow who has not had the advantage of such warning.

The main thing in connection with "blood pressure" is to find out that you have it. That is where the annual physical examination comes in. Then follow the doctor's orders—and live, as countless pressure victims have done, to a ripe old age!

In any event, don't get overexcited about this "blood pressure" business. A rational observance of the rules of health is the basis of prevention. And it goes without saying that normal blood pressure is the best pressure.

SHAFFER & GOODWIN

Will Ask for Increase In Phone Rates

The following articles appeared in the Warsaw Times of the 13th, and indicate that the phone company are about to take action in the matter of another increase in telephone rates.

North Manchester, Ind., Dec 13 The Northern Indiana Telephone company, with exchanges, here, at Laketon and Urbana, has taken preliminary steps toward an increase in telephone rates.

Letters have been sent to telephone subscribers, asking their views on a new schedule of rates. The announcement is made that the telephone company probably will petition the Indiana public service commission for an increase of rates.

The proposed schedule would boost the rates in North Manchester from 25 to 50 cents, sending the private business phone from $3.75 to $4.25, the private residence phone $2.00 to $2.50, and the party residence phone from $1.75 to $2.00. The company said that if the increase was granted, free toll service between North Manchester and Sidney would be granted to subscribers.

At Bippus, Atwood, Claypool, Etna Green, Burket, Fulton, Mill wood, Sidney, Silver Lake and Macy the new rates would be business phones $3.00; private residence, $2.00 and party lines $1.75. Rates at Akron, Bourbon and Mentone would be raised.

From the tone of a couple hundred letters that we have received from patrons of the company we have our doubts whether the patrons in the country will stand for the proposed increase and if the same is granted and put into effect we are satisfied that fully fifty percent of the phones will be ordered out, which in turn will cut the value of the village phone in half and cause a large percentage of them to be removed. It looks to us like the proposed increase will spell suicide for the company.

It seems that the officials of this company are under the impression that the patrons cannot get along without phone service regardless of where the price may go, but we believe that they will find that there is a limit to the value of a phone and that said limit is now at hand and that any increase will cause wholesale removal of the phones in this locality.

LIGHTS PROMOTE EGGS IN WINTER

Scratch Feed Is Scattered in Litter Previous Night.

Egg production can be profitably increased during winter months through the use of artificial lighting, suggests O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman for the Colorado Agricultural college.

"Hens normally lay the most eggs in the spring and early summer when there is the greatest amount of daylight," Mr. Ufford declares. "It has been found that by prolonging the period of light during winter days a higher average egg production will be obtained than when artificial light is not used."

There are three methods of artificially lighting the henhouse by the use of an automatic clock. Probably the most popular method is that of turning on the lights between 4 and 5 a. m. and keeping them on until daylight. The morning scratch feed is scattered in the litter the night before.

Sometimes a combination of morning and evening lights is used, the evening lights being turned on about 4 p. m. and kept on until 6:30 or 7 p. m., when the birds are sent to roost by automatically dimming the lights before they are entirely turned off. The lights are turned on again by the clock early in the morning.

The evening lunch method permits the birds to go to roost at the regular time, but arouses them when the lights are turned on about 8 p. m., when a feed of grain is scattered in the litter. This brings the birds off the roosts for about an hour for grain, mash and water, and then they are sent back to roost by the use of dimmers. This lunch prevents them from becoming hungry during the winter nights and enables them to better resist cold weather.

Mash for Winter Eggs

Favored by Specialist

With a 50 per cent production for young stock as a practical economical limit for their production, J. B. Hayes, poultry specialist at the University of Wisconsin, advises that careful feeding should attend their introduction into the class of producers.

"Forcing," he declares, "should not be attempted on young stock, nor should it be expected of them that production on top of early maturity gained from forcing will be the best for flock production."

For poultry stock which is in condition to be forced, such as pullets that are well along to maturity, and hens that have fully recovered from their molt and are again in good condition, increased feeding during the winter months is a good way to bring up production of the flock. One of the best of rations for the flock to bring them to better production is this one: Scratch Feed Mixture: Cracked corn, 2 pounds; wheat, 2 pounds; oats, 1 pound.

Mash: Bran, 100 pounds; wheat middlings, 100 pounds; buckwheat middlings, 100 pounds; ground oats, 100 pounds; oil meal, 50 pounds; salt, 3 pounds.

Practices in feeding that have been found to be the best, according to Hayes, include the feeding of grain in two or three portions during the day. The mash is the true "forcer" of the feed for the flock.

Rotting of Eggs Blamed on Carbon Dioxide Gas

According to a Cornell chemist, one of the chief reasons for the rotting of eggs is the escape of carbon dioxide gas through the shell. He discovered that newly laid eggs contain this gas in a limited quantity, but the porousness of the shell permits it to pass off within a short time.

He proved, however, that the egg would reabsorb the gas, and by exposing the shells to a minute quantity of carbon dioxide succeeded in keeping them fresh indefinitely. The cost of the treatment was said to be a few hundredths of a cent per dozen.

Fowls for Breeding

It is time to make the breeding pens. Select your best hens and confine them in small flocks of from 12 to 20, according to the breed, and place a good male in each pen. Have the hens in each pen as near alike as possible. If a number of males are allowed to run with a large flock you can never tell what the chicks will be when you select the eggs for hatching. Promiscuous breeding, even for utility stock, is never satisfactory for a profitable flock.

Management of Pullets

With regard to the management of the pullets, it will be advisable gradually to introduce the rations likely to be used during the laying period. Any change in the diet should be made before eggs are forthcoming in any large number.

All poultry keepers have difficulty in preventing the partial moult. While admitting that various factors may be responsible for this trouble, there is no doubt that management has much to do with it.

College Women's Union

The Association of American University Women is formed for the purpose of promoting the welfare and advancement of college women. One must be a graduate of a university before becoming an active member in the organization, although the requirements are less strict for associate members.
