THE CHURCH ON TOP.
TUBERCULOSIS AND CANCER.
WHO WILL RIDE?
WHEN OLD AND POOR.

Man builds the house for God to dwell therein was an old idea. The modern idea is a combination skyscraper church, stores, offices, apartments, swimming pools, gymnasium. New York's Manhattan Congregational Church will spend $2,000,000 on such a building, twenty-three stories high. The clergymen will live on the ground floor.

A Frenchman, Doctor Calmette, has developed an anti-tuberculosis vaccine, so successful that its use for all children is suggested.

There is no injection of tubercle, losis germs. The vaccine merely "suggests" the disease, and rouses to activity the anti-tubercular bacilli in the body. The new remedy, called "BCG," was tried on monkeys and other animals for thirteen years in the Pasteur Institute before experiments were made on humans. "BCG" is said to reduce consumption in twenty-five cases out of twenty-six.

The famous American doctor, William J. Mayo, believes that science will find a way to immunize against cancer. A woman, Doctor Maude Slye of Chicago, has bred mice in which cancer can be no means he developed and other mice invariably born with cancer.

When consumption and cancer are conquered, as they will be, will be rid of their most deadly microscopic enemies. They already know how to deal with the deadly plagues from Asia, one of which, "the black death," wiped out nearly half the population of Europe.

Commercial flying, including ocean flights, may become a reality soon. Commander Byrd was besieged by would-be passengers willing to pay and price if he would take them to Europe.

Young Lindbergh casually flew from St. Louis on a little trip to New York via Washington.

Bellanca, the Italian genius builder of the Chamberlin-Levins airplane, is building airplanes for a commercial air line between Chicago and New York. Five ships are ordered, guaranteed to make the trip in seven and a half hours. Each can will carry twelve passengers, have three engines, and cost $25,500.

When you ask yourself, "Who will ride them?" remember that when the French built the railroad from Paris to Versailles, actors and actresses were hired to sit in the train looking out of the windows, smiling as though they enjoyed it. And when the first elevator with a steel column under it was installed in the Grand Hotel in Paris, about sixty years ago, old French ladies and gentlemen continued to walk up stairs to the fifth floor.

The world is a sad place for the old and poor, and children are cruel.

Long years ago, Anna Noyek sang before the Emperor Franz Joseph in Vienna. Now, seventy-seven years old, she is ejected from her room, claiming "not so much because she doesn't pay her rent, but because she had twenty cats in the room with her."

But, old and gray, she stood on the sidewalk with her twenty-forn cats, and children that call her "old witch" threw stones at her. A year ago as she hurried along the street to work they tripped her and broke her shoulder. She had been earning $1.60 a day doing fine embroidery. Cold charity will take care of her somehow—or at least that the cats do not starve.

If past forty please read. The head of the American College of Surgeons says: "After forty comes the dangerous age."

Five great dangers that threaten you are kidney trouble, heart disease, tuberculosis, Bright's disease and paralysis.

It is possible, but fortunately, unusual, to have all of them. Also with a little thought and common sense you may avoid all of them, or get rid of them if they haven't gone too far.

POLICE OFFICERS—MUST WEAR UNIFORMS?

All peace officers, except sheriffs and their duly appointed deputies and game wardens performing duty in the state of Indiana, in connection with enforcement of state and city traffic laws and ordinances, must henceforth wear uniforms in performance of such duties, it was declared Saturday in a proclamation from F. E. Schortemeyer, secretary of state, promulgating a law recently enacted by the state legislature.

The purpose of the law, it is explained, is to eliminate the objectionable "highway detectives" working in plain clothes, and operators of "speed traps," as well as other persons who have made themselves obnoxious by their tactics in various parts of the state.

The secretary's proclamation prescribes that all uniform worn by traffic supervisors shall be distinctive and so designed as to readily show the wearer to be a peace officer.

FIRE RAZES PRINT SHOP

C. W. KRATHWOHL PRINT SHOP IS DESTROYED BY FIRE MONDAY NIGHT. $2,500 LOSS.

Originating from some unknown cause, fire completely destroyed the printing shop of C. W. Krathwol, known as the "Country Print Shop," about 12:30 Monday night.

Harry Morgan of Warsaw noticed the fire while driving in the country and came to town to investigate. As none of the volunteer fire department were on hand, then, Morgan went to the station and drove the fire truck out, and to the building, which by that time was well in flames. He aroused Mr. Krathwol and asked him where the nearest fire plug was. The nearest one was on the corner of the Baptist Church corner. After attaching the hose to the plug, and the water was turned on, no pressure could be had. Investigation showed the hose which the Gant Construction Company had left on the plug to be the cause. The Gant hose was kinked and soon water was flowing through the hose onto the fire.

But by that time the printing shop was beyond help, and successful efforts were made to prevent the flames from consuming the barn immediately to the east. An outhouse next to the Krathwol plant was also badly hurt.

The heat was so intense that most of the machinery, including a flat-bed press, two job presses, and a paper cutter, was completely ruined.

A large amount of paper, stacked in piles in the shop, was left a heap of ashes. The type cabinets, with their loads of different types, were completely burnt, except somewhere where the type melted and kept the flames from consuming the case.

The building was a frame two-story, and is on the back of the Krathwol lot in the north side of town. The sides of the shop were burnt nearly to the ground and what was not burnt is badly charred.

Mr. Krathwol stated that a conservative estimate of the loss was $2,500. Insurance to the amount of little over $2,000 was carried on the plant.

Mr. Krathwol said this morning that he expected to set up in business immediately, and would either rebuild the shop on the present site, or rent a building down town.

STATE MAY TAKE OVER THE WARSAW MENTONE ROAD

Unconfirmed reports are circulating that the Indiana state highway commission is again considering taking over the Kosciusko county unit road extending from Warsaw to Men- tone.

If this road is taken over by the state, a portion of the east and west road south of Mentone will be taken for a state highway joining No. 31 between here and Culver.

State highway No. 31 runs north and south from South Bend in Indianapolis, through Rochester and Peru.

Another report is that the Warsaw-Menton road would connect state highway 31 at Rochester. It is believed that if concerted action is started by good roads boosters that this state improvement is possible. It is reported that it would give a direct line to the northern lake region for the state capital and all of southern Indiana. It would give the cities south a direct connection at Warsaw with No. 15 and No. 9 at Columbia City.

Another report is that the Warsaw-Menton road would be the logical route for traffic through that area. More than one-third of the route is exceptionally good gravel road, which is always kept up and in the best condition for heavy traffic.

After the completion of the Plymouth road, there will be a connection between Goschen and the Peru-Elkhart line, over which much traffic from Michigan is expected to be routed to Indianapolis.

The Elkhart-Peru Short Line is said to be 18 miles shorter than any state road.

EXOTIC SHAWLS FOR EVENING; MILLINERY FOR SUMMER TIME

"SEE the new moon, make a wish and the moon comes true." Here's a question for the wives made by thousands of star-gazing women—Spanish shawl! Friend husband asks the "better half" to choose the gift she wants most—"Spanish shawl!" her eager reply. Dear wife, the household is about to carry the "class" home, and shall devoted mother and father bestow upon their loved one as a graduating gift—Spanish shawl! are lovely crepe de chine squares, in white or pastel color, unadorned save a long, hand-knotted fringe. Silk aqua, with wide bands of silver or gold cloth bordering them are the smart thing in Paris. The centers are hand-painted or embroidered. This sort are fringeless.

Yes, we believe in evolution, speaking from a fashion standpoint. For pastels, chintz, taffeta hats as created, this season by renowned Parisian modistes. See is the picture how several of these models mark the evolution of grandmother's lovely log-cabin patchwork and other quaint quilt patterning into smartest Twentieth-century millinery.

Perhaps it is Italian art—mosaics which furnished the inspiration for the latest lace-worked taffeta, also ribbon hats which are glowing present-day millinery models. Or is the inspiration from what source it may, one thing is apparent—new beauty note has been sounded by the artist who is using taffeta in such unique and alluring ways as exemplified in the hats in this issue?

Taffeta is a very important medium for the making of the better class of millinery this season. Many of our loveliest hats are built patch upon patch, folded or folded or taffeta, displaying not only great workmanship, but also resulting color schemes which furnish subject matter for artist and poet.

Note that hat in the center of the picture, for instance, it is reminiscent of the silk lot pattern, which you have been treasuring for years in that cedar chest of heirolooms? The narrow ribbons work out a delicate rainbow coloring, while the contour of the hat is the "very latest." Especially consider this stylish model, a side-back view of which is here given below to the left. The darker stripes are navy blue, introduced into a medley of old rose, pale green, maize and gray taffeta.

The first hat shows stitched taffeta combined with narrow grosgrain ribbons. The folds of taffeta are criss-crossed into a stylized design, the hat at the top to the left. The band is concluded with an all-taffeta band with markings of fine pedestal straw. The tiny roses about the crown are formed of multicolored taffeta.

Clean by Electricity

The uses of electric cleaners are many, especially those which can be reversed to blow as well as inhale. Once it was rushed into a coal mine at Milwaukee in January 1923 to pump air to miners imprisoned by rock falls after an explosion. In rock mines used one last winter to blow warm air down between house walls to thaw out a frozen water pipe. An antiseptic effectively defeated beetles whose larvae, previously uncontrollable, damaged a soft cheese at an English castle. An American farmer uses one regularly each summer to separate leaves from berries that have been picked and spread out on a sheet.

BLOWITZ HID FACT OF JEWISH ORIGIN

Some curious things have come up at the trial of the man accused of being a member of the secret society, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. The man, a Jewish lawyer from New York, was unmasked in his native village in Slovakia. The Jewish master of the village has been largely responsible for the whole affair. He showed guests a letter, written in French from Paris, in which Dr. Blowitz seeks admission into the Roman Catholic church and expresses his desire to give a gift to the poor local church. The man's name, he said, was Oppen and who came from Blovice, however, writes in his autobiography that he was a Catholic from infancy. He also starts his book with a reference to the chateau of Blovice, where he was born and died in a little house in the square. His father was no lord of the manor, but a Jewish shopkeeper who at the same time acted as caretaker of the local synagogue. The boy, Oppen, was educated at the village school, as the parents could afford, when he won a prize in 1884 for his proficiency in reading the Czech language.

Statesman Drew Ire of Ohio Legislator

One Ohio legislator adopted a resolution declaring a former President of the United States guilty of a treasonable act. It is true the succeeding legislature rescinded it, but it stood on the journal for two years. The Forty-second legislature was the body that adopted it, and George W. Adams was the proposed man. He was then a member of the house of representatives, representing Massachusetts in congress and had laid before the house the petition of a constituent asking that the union of states be dissolved. The resolution, adopted in Ohio declared that in aiding to give publicity and importance to this treasonable proposition, Mr. Adams had merited censure and that the legislature of Ohio "should stamp him out and expel him from the nation." After the next legislature met, a resolution to rescind the action was passed. The rescinding resolution declared that the censure had been based on erroneous information and was "calculated to cast undue reproach on the character of a statesman and patriot."

Traded Shirt for Pearl

A white undershirt occupies a higher position in the eyes of natives inhabiting Penrhyn Island, which is near Christmas Island, far out in the Pacific, than does white man's money, according to Edward E. Kellogg, who recently completed a tour of travel in the South seas. Arriving at Penrhyn Island, Kellogg offered a native several thousand dollars for a genuine "pil" pearl. The native refused to consider selling his gem for money, but accepted Kellogg's white undershirt in trade and regarded his new acquisition as being well worth its cost to him.

Shame on Him

A rather prominent member of the business women's section of the Woman's Department club was recently invited to a "show" for a bride-elect. As she started from her home with her gift (a waffle iron) carefully wrapped in a box, she met her next door neighbor, a young former soldier. She playfully handed him the package and said: "Guess what I'm taking to the party." He felt it and replied: "So you baked a cake, did you?"—Indianapolis News.

NAVY MAN VACANCIES FOR3,000 IN TRADE BRANCHES

According to the present account of the Navy, there are about 3,000 vacancies in the special trade branches. This shortage consists mostly of electricians, radiomen, carpenters, marines, engineers, boilermakers, cooks, bakers, mechanics, etc.

The Navy now maintains about 2,000 men in its various trade schools, fitting them as skilled men in their rate in the Navy or their trade later in civil life. Spending in Youth

Pathetic in Old Age
He sat waiting in the outer room of a busy office. He had been sent to pick up a package and deliver to his employer.

He was an old man whose dull eyes and gnarled, shaking hands proclaimed him an old man. The office—or indeed business. But he had to stay in the game, for even an old man is very strong, a little bit of hearing and slow in his feet, must earn his living when he has no other means of support.

So he plodded back in the years. His old man was young and virile. His eyes were alert, his feet moved swiftly. He had a way with him. Those were the good old days of prosperity and good times. There was a fine pay check every Saturday and a bunch of good fellows to go out with on Saturday nights. Ah, yes, those were the days!

But it's different now. The good old days have gone. An old man, with nothing back of him and pathetic as Lear, is shuffling through an eran of small responsibilities.—Thrift Magazine.

Pays Way With Milk

The most ingenious way of working one's way through college, w believes is demonstrated by a senior in a West coast university. He entered as a freshman accompanied by a cow. He started a milk route at once, and now owns three cows and does a flourishing business.—The Outlook.

Phone Silencer Invented

Holding one's hand over the telephone mouthpiece while conversing masked with other persons in the room is a common device recently perfected by a British inventor. By pushing a lever on the silencer, which fits behind the transmitter, sounds in the room are entirely cut off from the wire.

Doris—Oh, it always cheers me up when I think of how much it might be costing here.

Floopy—There are just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught.

John—Of course, but not so many.

DON'T STOP ON ROAD,

TO FIX YOUR TIRE

"Why will automobile drivers persist in endangering their own lives and the lives of others by stopping their car on the driving portion of paved roads for the purpose of repairing tires," this is the question asked by the Hoosier State Automobile Association. "We are receiving many complaints" according to the association, "from individuals against this practice of other drivers themselves getting farther out into the right of way, thus endangering traffic. One member, under date of June 22nd writes as follows: 'Why can't the motor clubs get this practice of stopping on paved roads to repair tires stopped? It is very dangerous to the ones doing it and passing cars. On my way back from Chicago it was necessary for me to go into the ditch to avoid a smash up because of a parked car with tire trouble, plus the fact that the family in danger. That burns me up.'

"It would seem that for self protection as well as for consideration of others that everyone would take pains to get the car to the side of the road so as to do repair work without running a chance of being killed or causing somebody else's death."

THE IMPORTANT GARNISH

IT WAS a little New York city school girl who raised her hand in the cooking class when the teacher asked, "What is a garnish?" and all the rest of the class looked dumbfounded.

"I know, teacher," piped Yetta, "It's parsley."

There are a good many women like Yetta, who think that parsley is all there is to the entire subject of garnishing foods to make them more attractive.

Parsley and lemon are the housewife's stand-by for garnishes, because they are always obtainable, twelve months out of the twelve. The housewife who has not access to large markets can grow her own parsley in a pot on the kitchen windowsill. Of course, lemons are always to be found in every well-stocked kitchen, and there is scarcely a day when it is not needed for something. Fish, whether baked or fried, is one meat which seems to demand a dash of lemon juice to bring out its flavor, and for such garnishes the lemon should be cut into sections lengthwise, six sections from one lemon. These long strips are much easier to use than slices, and are also decorative.

Cold meats look tempting when carefully arranged on a large platter, garnished not only with parsley, but with other decorative foods as well, such as slices of firm red tomato, each disk of carrots, cucumber, rings of sweet green peppers, onions, tiny disks of sliced sweet gherkins. Thin red radishes, either plain or cut into buds, and whole olives are always good looking, either on a platter of cold meats or dressing a salad.

In garnishing salads and desserts, nut meats and candied fruits, cherries are a pretty garnish. Stir jelly may be cut into tiny cubes with a sharp knife, or scooped into balls with a vegetable scoop. This little touch is very effective in making balls of apple, banana, watermelon, beef, etc., to rim up various dishes. Capers and tiny pickled onions are also quaint as well as attractive garnishes.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT
By F. A. WALKER

FIGHTING — RETREATING

A GOOD many battles have been lost because the combatants, though general in learning how to fight, neglected to learn how to retreat.

In the battle of life it is quite as necessary to know how to extricate yourself from a difficulty as it is to know the principles of getting ahead.

Who continues to attempt what has passed beyond the range of accomplishment may have admirable courage but very poor judgment.

The one thing that a good general does when he is retreating is to KEEP FIGHTING.

If you keep fighting hard enough the retreat itself may be the means of eventual victory.

A young man who has chosen the wrong occupation, who has undertaken a job for which he is not fitted, will gain in the end if he retreats and gets into a new and better position.

Most of us are best fitted for one thing.

If we try to be more than that or other than that we sacrifice results, and results are the only things that count.

There are very few Michaelangelo's who can be equal successors as sculptors and painters and architects. It is only once in ages that there is a man like Leonardo Da Vinci, who was perhaps the wisest man that ever lived.

His "Almanac of Jokes," "The Last Supper" and "Mona Lisa" have been reproduced more than any other two pictures ever painted.

He was a great engineer, a wonderful inventor, a musician of merit, a botanist, a chemist, an astronomer, a geologist, an engineer and geographer and on all of these fields he was a voluminous and entertaining writer.

He was one general in a million—he had never occasion to retreat.

Conduct your retreat in an orderly manner.

Cyrus the Great, who won many victories to have his head cut off by the woman, Queen Tomris, to whom he lost the last battle, was said of retreating: "When an army must retreat the retreat must be managed in the safest manner and not in the quickest."

Don't be in a hurry about changing your work.

Don't be impulsive and throwing down your tools, or your books or writing papers, or your briefcase, with a "to h—l with my job."

Conduct your retreat in a safe, sane way, fighting as you go, fighting to find the right thing and the right place where you will be worth most to yourself and therefore most to everybody else.

The one thing is to be sure you are doing something. Either go ahead or retreat.

Don't try to be a stand-still soldier. It is often stated a truism that a rolling stone gathers no moss. Moss is not a very valuable asset and nobody need count himself a great failure if he dies without ever having possessed any.

A well-preserved diamond is the most valuable of the mineral family, and the value comes to that only after a good deal of rough contact with things harder than itself which shape and brighten it.

Don't waste time if you can. But if you cannot go further ahead on the line you have chosen, don't be afraid to "back up" and try another road to success.

YOU
By EVELYN GAGE BROWNE

THERE'S nothing to fear—you're as good as the best. As strong as the mightiest, too; You can win in every battle or test; For there's no one JUST LIKE YOU!

There's only one YOU in the world today. So nobody else, you see, Can do your work in as fine a way. You're the only YOU there'll be!

So face the world and all life is yours To conquer and love and live, And you'll find the happiness that endures, In just the measure you give.

There's nothing too good for you to possess, Nor heights where you cannot go; Your power is more than belief or guess—

It is something you have to KNOW!

There's nothing to fear—YOU CAN AND WILL

For you're the invincible YOU! So set your feet on the highest hill—

THESE'S NOTHING YOU CAN NOT DO!

DAD-IN-LAW

(By D. J. Walsh.)

FROM Jane Crenshaw's home in the mountains Hal Pickens drove toward the lowlands. The mountain girl had loved long before he was born, but understood what separated her social status from his. He had just refused to marry her for no better reason than that she did not relish being patronized by Pickens who used the mountains only as a fishing and hunting base.

The argument he had used against marrying him showed now against his brain like the clang of a funeral bell. The status that her people had given her the girl had declared to be unimportant.

She had been educated by her mother, who had received Hal in her home. Her mother had once served a sentence for counterfeiting, and though she believed him to be a law-abiding citizen now the stigma remained. Jane had furiously told her father that now her father was under a cloud.

BOUND to the NORTH

by Harold MacGrath
Illustrated by Henry Jay Lee

WHO'S WHO

Jeanne Beaufort, daughter of a Virginian, wears vengeance against the North for the deaths of her father and two brothers in the Civil War. She is enrolled as a spy for the Confederate government and instructed to use the wiles of her sex to bring Parson John Kennedy, a Union spy, within the power of the South. Discovered in the act of spying upon the group of Secret Service agents of whom Kennedy is the leader, Jeanne is given the alternative of death or marriage to one of their number. They are all masked, but Jeanne rejects one volunteer and chooses another of the eleven as her husband. To herself, she calls him Irony. Parson Kennedy performs the ceremony and the bride and groom, ignorant of each other's names and she not even knowing what he looks like sign the marriage certificate as "Mary Smith" and "John Jones." As witnesses they sign as follows:

John Kennedy, D. D.
A-NK-S P-PA-G
G-RD-A J-NK-F
L-WG-A F-BN-S
F-WG-S W-BE-H

They leave her bound and disappear.

Henry Morgan, a Southern officer and spy for the Confederacy, is in love with her but she rejects his advances. One day getting a letter signed "your husband," Jeanne realizes that her identity is known. Dismantling herself with a knife and staining her face, Jeanne assumes the name of Alice.

Alice Trent, she goes to Baltimore to carry on her work. She is unaware that a real "Alice Trent" lives in Baltimore.

John Armitage, a Union officer rescues Jeanne from a drunken man, Jeanne Indiana Morgan to abduct Kennedy so that she may question him about the names on the certificate and about the curious tattoo mark on the arm of the man she married. Armitage rescues him, but Jeanne escapes. She sees placards announcing a reward for her capture, "dead or alive."

General Armitage, father of the Captain, is discussing plans for the final campaign against Richmond when Jeanne, attempting to steal them is captured. Though she is in boy's clothes, Captain Armitage recognizes her, but says nothing, and is bound to face a firing squad in the morning.

Armitage helps Jeanne to escape and she makes her way back to her home. It is now the Center of a Confederate encampment. Sentries bring word that Union spy is on the grounds.

The spy attempting to escape is killed. Jeanne reads a dispatch in his pocket, indicating that he was G-RD-A and on his arm sees the tattoo mark. She now believes that he was her husband. Morgan is discovered to be a Confederate spy and swears vengeance on Kennedy. Jeanne hopes to obtain, by force, the necessary truth about her marriage from Kennedy. The parson and Armitage accordingly are kidnapped and taken to a deserted cabin. There, bound, they are seated when Morgan lights a short fuse attached to a powder barrel.

Jeanne saves them and tells Armitage, with whom she is falling deeper and deeper in love, that she gives him "a life for a life." Armitage, rejoicing in his father's command, is present when she runs away with a federal locomotive. He fires at the engine and hits her in the arm. She makes her way back to the Confederate lines and while recuperating, Morgan gives her a sheet of paper containing the names of "the eleven."

Armitage on a scouting expedition, cannot resist the temptation to go near Jeanne's home and is captured by the Confederates. Facing the fate of a spy in the morning, he accepts the offer of Morgan to while away the time in a game of cards.

CHAPTER XI

"Do you know, Morgan, I believe that I shall never attend your firing party in the morning?"

"I should, Armitage, you'll be there. I wouldn't let a girl miss it for anything. I thought you had that ten-pot, well, the game ends."

"So it does!"

Armitage's hand flew across the table with the quickness of an adorer's strike and seized Morgan's pistol. He drew back with equal rapidity.

"Sister or make a sound, and I'll kill you, Morgan. You know it. If I have to die, you'll go with me or before me."

Jeanne is in the doorway—impelled irresistibly to return—pressed him thoughtfully. There was a third man whom neither Kennedy nor Lowell observed.

Kennedy caught up with Lowell. "Well, what was it about?"

"Good Lord, Parson, I had forgotten all about you! Oh, there was nothing governmental in the affair. I'll let you know all about it in two hours."

Kennedy nodded and pretended not to notice Lowell's preoccupation. "Mind the tone!"

The moment the sentry started to enter the room, Armitage drew back his hand and savagely struck Morgan behind the ear. Then he leaped from the window just as Jeanne hurtled her book at the candleabra, accurately!

"Cell to the sentry to come around and order the room," commanded Armitage. "Mind the tone!"

The moment the sentry started to obey the command, Armitage drew back his hand and savagely struck Morgan behind the ear. Then he leaped from the window just as Jeanne hurtled her book at the candleabra, accurately!

Morgan stared at the round, black muzzle of his revolver; he was paralysed by the unexpectedness of the coup.

"Cell to the sentry to come around and order the room," commanded Armitage. "Mind the tone!"

The moment the sentry started to obey the command, Armitage drew back his hand and savagely struck Morgan behind the ear. Then he leaped from the window just as Jeanne hurtled her book at the candleabra, accurately!

When her arm was strong again, she determined to return to Washington. To learn for sure the name of the man who had married her and had now become an abomination; she must know or go mad.

She had not the slightest faith in Armitage's statement. He was not the man; she was so absolutely sure of this that no shadow of doubt regarding it ever entered her head.

Jeanne Beaufort was Parson Kennedy's obsession, he proposed to be rid of it that night, once and for all.

The moment he left, Lowell, he put this idea into action. He would trap her by promising to give her the name of the man she had married (for no doubt that was the reason for her seeking Lowell); he would use Lowell's name besides.

Oh, she would come to that old attic where she and Morgan had exchanged their bits of information.

It was moonlight outside. Kennedy and his men waited in the dark.

They were all squatting on the floor in order to prevent the slightest sound.

As Jeanne entered from her left came the scrape of a match. It flared. She gripped a huge hand and her fascinated glance ran up the arm to the face above.

She stood face to face with Parson Kennedy!

"All's fair in love and war," observed Kennedy. "Love for women and war for men. Well, Madam, what have you to say?"

"Nothing."

"There really isn't much to say, is there?"

"You tried to murder my soul; my body is nothing."

Parson Kennedy frowned. He wanted to humble this creature, to call if I give you explicitly directions how to find me? I have something to say to you which vitally concerns us both."

"Address W-X, general post office."

"What do you think of it, son?" he asked.

MRS. COOLIDGE,
COMMON SENSE.
POLITE GOV. MOODY.
REAL FLYING AUGUST 1.

Mrs. Coolidge, in South Dakota, sees women of all kinds, young girls and grandmothers, wearing knickerbockers. Mrs. Coolidge respects them and probably admires their common sense, but she will not wear knickerbockers. Rubber boots when she goes fishing and a skirt or sensible length—never mind if it gets wet.

Clothes, as Carlyle shows in "Sartor Rextarius," make all the difference between a king in his grandeur and a "featherless biped."

Two hundred and seven Americans reported incomes of $1,000,000 a year or more in 1925.

In 1924 only seventy-five reported incomes of a million dollars or over.

Once a man owning a million was a wonder. Now 207 have a million or more income and some have fifty millions of income and a good deal more through corporation ownership.

And a billion a year income will arrive before earth's phase of industrial feudalism shall pass.

Mrs. Freeman, the unhappy mother whose husband was killed by an automobile, killed herself and her five children when told they must go to an orphan asylum. "Better dead than without a mother," said the poor woman, and went with them.

She was careful to protect two very tiny birds putting them where the deadly gun could not reach them. She knew that canary birds have a value; somebody would buy them and treat them kindly. She knew that children have no value; that she could not be sure that strangers in an asylum would treat them kindly.

Visiting New York City with a party of distinguished Texans, welcomed and looked up to, literally and in other ways, Governor Moody lists and thinks.

He hears that New York City is the biggest American factory town, turning out five and a half billion dollars worth of products a year. Governor Moody is too polite to mention the fact that any State he has seen on his way East, including New York, could be tucked away in Texas and not attract much attention. Texas alone intensively cultivated could feed every one of the 1,900,000,000 human beings on earth and have room left to raise cotton.

While Byrd was flying east across the Atlantic and two young Army men west across the Pacific, at 110 miles an hour, our distinguished visitor, the comet Pons-Vanoczeck, was leaving the earth behind passing through various constellations, at the rate of 66,600 miles an hour.

Shall we tiny creatures, when pleased from service on this earth, make some such journey? That would be more interesting than going into the ground to stay there.

The VERY DRY'S plan a dry ticket in 1928, if neither party supplies them with a candidate dry enough.

It would be enlightening to nominate at least one independent dry. The result would be instructive. Few candidates dare defy the dry, few would want an out and out dry nomination.

At this moment of flying enthusiasm, one word of caution is necessary, and expert fliers remind you of it.

Don't go up "just to know how it feels" unless you know the pilot and the machine.

There are unsafe machines, plenty of them, including many bought second hand from the United States Government. There are unskillful pilots and others skilful, but reckless.

Barring dangerously bad weather, bad pilots and unsafe machines, flying is now safe. But Be CAREFUL.

Beginning on August 1, air passenger service from the Atlantic to the Pacific is promised, the trip to be totally burned.

First will come a straight line to New York line, with the same air trip from San Francisco to Chicago. Passenger ships will carry the mails and flying will have started.

AKRON, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1927.

DEATH CLAIMS PEIRCE GAULT

The Grim Reaper claimed another victim from this community Thursday when Franklin Pierce Gault passed away in an Elkhart Hospital. At time of his death, Mr. Gault was 74 years, three months and five days of age.

Death was contributed to a number of causes. The deceased had been in very poor health for several years and at one time suffered a stroke of paralysis. He had been in the hospital in Elkhart for several months.

Mr. Gault had been a resident of Mentone and vicinity nearly his entire life, having lived on his farm northeast of town for many years, until his failing health forced him to discontinue his active farm work. He and his wife then moved to a property here. Mrs. Gault passed away on January 30 of this year.

The decease leaves two sons, A. P. Gault of Ft. Wayne, and G. F. Gault of Elkhart, and a daughter, Mrs. Fred Pyle of Elkhart, besides several grandchildren.

Funeral rites were held here Saturday afternoon at 2:00 at the home in charge of Rev. Liddle. Burial was made at the Harrison Center Cemetery.

Mr. Gault had been in declining health for several years, resulting from a paralytic stroke, a second stroke suffered on July 1st, being the cause of his death.

Coming to Indiana with his parents when a small boy, the greater part of his life had been spent in Kosciusko County on a farm four miles north of Mentone, but owing to ill health the last seven years he had spent in town; five months while, since the death of his wife, he had spent in a hospital near his children and under their direct care.

Those left to mourn his loss are a daughter, Mrs. Fred Pyle of Elkhart, Indiana, and two sons, C. F. Gault of Elkhart, Ind., and A. P. Gault of Ft. Wayne, Ind., and ten grandchildren.

BOURBON NINE DEFEATS LOCAL BALL PLAYERS

A ball team which was quickly organized here last week, among some of the men who like to play baseball, was defeated at the hands of the Bourbon nine at Bourbon Sunday.

Although a little stabs for want of practice the local boys showed up in good form, and seemed to show the "makings" of a real ball team if they are organized and practice regularly. A member of the team said that a team might be organized here if enough interest is taken by those who can play ball, and if enough material is available.

BARN NORTHWEST OF CHALCOPOLIS BURNS DOWN

Beginning on August 1, air passenger service from the Atlantic to the Pacific is promised, the trip to be totally burned.

First will come a straight line to New York line, with the same air trip from San Francisco to Chicago. Passenger ships will carry the mails and flying will have started.

GOSHEN MAN IS STRUCK BY EYE GOLF BALL AT TIPPECANOE LAKE, SUNDAY

Barnhart is a brother to Hugh Barnhart, part owner of the Rochester News- Sentinel, and a son of Henry Barnhart, former congressman of the 11th Indiana District.

Barnhart sliced his ball into a woody hazard, and in attempting to knock the ball out, the sphere struck a tree and rebounded directly into his left eye.

The injured man was rushed directly to a Goshen Hospital, but it was found the optical nerve had been severed and the sight was entirely gone.

GREY ESTATE IS PAID $6000

A settlement was effected in the Kosciusko County Circuit Court last week, wherein the Mentone Lumber Company pays to the estate of the late Richard Grey, the sum of $6,000 in settlement for the death of Grey on April 1, of this year.

Grey, a young man of 31, was walking home from his work at the Burns Bakery at noon, and upon passing the door of the Mentone Lumber Company, a board, which was buried from a rip saw being operated by Mr. Elbrey, struck him in the abdomen, inflicting severe internal injuries.

Grey was rushed to the Woodhaven Hospital at Rochester immediately, but died in a few hours. The widow and nine children were left.

WHO WINS THE SLOGAN PRIZE?

Who wins the $10 prize for writing the best slogan for Mentone?

The winning slogan has been selected and the $10 prize is waiting to be given to the lucky author of the slogan, but the original letter in which the slogan was submitted, containing the author's name, has been lost, and there is now no way to ascertain the identity of the lucky slogan writer.

"MENTONE WELCOMES YOU—HOW ARE YOU?" has been selected as a fitting slogan for Mentone. If the author will write or see Carl Myers, and prove himself to be the author of the slogan he will be awarded the $10. So if this is your slogan, consult Mr. Myers immediately. The Chamber of Commerce is anxious to learn the identity of the person who is furnishing Mentone with a proper slogan.

The slogan committee met Wednesday evening and found there had been 140 slogans submitted. A few had been duplicated. A committee of Judges, which was appointed at the close of the contest, had failed to meet, so the men at the head decided to ask a number of citizens to make a choice of those submitted. This was done, with the following result.

Mentone, Town of Friendly service 3 votes; Mentone at Your Service 3 votes; Mentone, Xcells, 2 votes; Mentone, Like Home 2 votes; Mentone 100%, American, 2 votes; Mentone, Heart of the Blue Grass Country, 2 votes; Mentone Welcomes You—How Are You? 7 votes.

Each slogan was typed off on an otherwise plain card. No names were on the cards whatever. The judging by the citizens was done wholly as to the quality of the slogan and no partiality whatever entered in.

In some manner the original letter bearing the name of the author of the winning slogan has been lost or misplaced. There is no possible way to award the prize, other than to depend on the author to claim his award.

The slogan itself is excellent. It shows the spirit of Mentone to the world, a spirit of welcome and interest in your welfare. The slogan will be printed on sideboards to be placed at the corporate limits of the town.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

United States and Japan Oppose British Cruiser Demands.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BRITAIN rules the waves, and she intends to go on ruling them, if the efforts and arguments of her representatives at the Geneva naval conference are a true indication of the manner in which last week the countries devoted themselves to the subject of cruisers, earnestly discussing the conclusions reached by the naval experts and, at this writing, having reached nothing like an agreement. As was explained a week ago, the British demanded a minimum of 100,000 tons of tonnage, most of them preferably below 7,500 tons each, on the ground that their world-wide commerce lanes and their need of protecting the home food supply required this, and evidently because they believed that such numbers would enable the vessels to restricted cruising radius to operate anywhere America wanted the limit put at 250,000 tons and said the United States needed vessels of 10,000 tonnage, not having any naval bases abroad. Her demands, however, in the effort to make the conference a success, offered tentatively to make the maximum limit 400,000 tons.

Then the Japanese, who previously had supported the British demand for a minimum of 100,000 tons, came out strongly against the British naval demands. Having received cable instructions from Tokyo, Admiral Saito announced that the original minimum American figures of 250,000 tons as the maximum cruiser tonnage for America and Britain were quite acceptable to Japan, and that he would demand the British figures, totaling approximately 600,000 tons, are out of the question so far as the Tokyo government is concerned.

"Japan is anxious to achieve a real reduction and limitation of armaments," said Admiral Saito. "We find the figures in the American plan to be reasonable. Japan believes the minimum American figures should be adopted rather than the higher tonnage, which, by promoting construction, would increase armaments. The other issues are of a very larger tonnage, which would require the other interested powers to build up to these high levels, would defeat the purpose of the conference."

"We would never dare get off the boat in Japan if we accepted the British scheme," one Japanese delegate said.

Much taken aback, the British delegates said they would look over their figures again to see what possible alterations could be made with a view to further discussions.

Observers in Geneva and official Washington said that the British demand for at least 500,000 tons was merely a manifestation of the British insistence on preserving the mastery of the seas. Lord Robert Cecil and his colleagues, they say, are convinced that, though America would be granted parity with England in tonnage, it would not permit the British to do so large a tonnage for reasons of economy and because the United States has no fear of war with Great Britain. Indeed, Viscount Cecil said as much last week. "America does not fear us; America knows the impossibility of war with Great Britain—they who sees Washington insist on limiting our navy below the strength the admiralty states we require?" he said. "We must have the cruisers we demand. The admiralty insists they are essential to our defense. Consider that the United States demands 10,000-ton cruisers he asks: "But who does America need these boats? What possible potential enemy can she have in mind for such weapons?"

In the expert opinions concerning submarine warfare, the United States was won over to Britain's efforts to have two 21-inch caliber torpedoes reduced were rejected and the Anglo-Japanese proposals to divide submarines into two classes—coast defense craft of about 600 tons and fleet submarines capable of going to sea with a combat squadron approximating 1,600 tons, were abandoned. The experts decided merely to limit the size of the largest submarines and set 1,800 tons as the tentative maximum.

China's voice was heard in the conference for the first time when Chao Hsien-tung, representative in the court of the League of Nations, made this announcement:

"It is repeatedly reported in the press of the Far East that the naval conference may also consider questions relating to China. I therefore have been requested by the Chinese national government and the Chinese delegation to state that the republic will refuse to recognize any decision affecting China which may be arrived at by the present, or any other conference in which China is not represented, the Nationalist leader, who opposes the surrender of Egyptian claims to independence.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE had a lot of fun last week, mixed up with business, in the first place he celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday, the second his return from a reviving inspection, eating a wonderful cake and receiving the mounted boy scout troop from Custer. The lads presented to the President a beautiful boy mare and complete cowboy outfit of clothing, and the president accepted the gift with pleasure. Next day, still recovering his cowboy heat, he attended the Tri-State Roundup at Bellefonte. Mrs. Coolidge accompanied him, and they enjoyed huge the doling of the wild horse race in war dress, whoops and trick riding from all parts of the West. The Chief Executive had ignored protests from organized sentimentalists against what they called the "commercialized cruelty" of the rodeo. Wednesday Mr. Coolidge got off his chaise and took a long ride on his new mare.

Most important of the week's visitors at the summer White House was Ambassador Shefford, who conferred with the President on the Mexican situation, reporting on conditions in the neighboring republics, presumably also discussing the question of his resignation. He has been wanting for a year to give up his post and the time may be considered opportune. John J. Garrett of Maryland and Silas Sawyer, having been mentioned as successor to Mr. Shefford.

COMMANDER BYRD and the other members of the crew of the transatlantic plane America were the recipients of many honors in Paris, and the title of Legion of Honor was awarded to the aviators. The aviators brought passage for return to the United States starting July 12. Byrd says he plans to lead a two-plane expedition to the Antarctic in the fall with which will spend perhaps a year in building up information about the continent at the South Pole. Clarence Chamberlin also planned immediate return to the United States by steamer, having declined to pilot the Columbia back, but Charles A. Levine said he was hunting for a Freeport pilot who would bring him home on the big plane.

GENERAL CHEN and a large part of his Chinese army went over to the Nationalists and as a result the southerners gained possession of Shantung province and at last reports were back to Tientsin. The northern forces were still holding Tsinan, the capital, and a narrow strip north of the Yellow River. Conditions in Shantung were such that Japan decided to send two thousand men to Jiaozhou, and Dairen to Tsinan, and a hundred military railway men and telegraphers also were hurried into that region. This movement further enraged the Chinese against the Japanese and caused them to forget their animosity against the British.

KING FUAD of Egypt, whose sovereignty was threatened recently by Great Britain, went to London on a state visit and was received with great pomp by King George, the royal family and the government. He was received by the Premier, King Fuad, and the British foreign office undertook to work out with him a treaty which should settle the relations between Egypt and Great Britain for years to come. This plan, however, was opposed by Lord Lloyd, British commissioner in Egypt, who believes the parliamentary regime there will collapse before long and that the British will then turn to the French protectorate. King Fuad is entirely subservient to the British, but Sayyid Pasha is said to be under the influence of Zaghloul Pasha, the Nationalist leader, who opposes the surrender of Egyptian claims to independence.

THOUGH stories of counter-revolutionary movements in Russia are often not trustworthy, those coming now are too numerous and too detailed to be ignored. The revival of the old tsarist terror by the Soviet rulers has failed to satisfy their demands and the anti-British campaign conducted by the government does not distract the attention of the population from domestic to foreign questions. In secret meetings held in central Europe the courtesies of the country are being observed, and there is an increase in the dissensions among the Bolshevik leaders, with a new man rising in the background as a lieutenant of M. Stalin, present dictator of Moscow's policies. He is M. Ellman, a tall, thin, dark man, dressed in a simple suit, and steadily gaining influence over M. Stalin, since he, too, is a former south Russian peasant. Meanwhile 50,000 counter-revolutionaries have succeeded in smuggling themselves into Russia factories.

AT LAST D. C. Stephenson, former ruler of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan and now a life convict, told to the authorities his story of alleged corruption in Hoosier politics, and the people of Indiana are awaiting his trial in Indianapolis. Stephenson made his revelations to Prosecuting Attorney W. H. Reeny of Indianapolis, and that official declined to tell what he heard until he is ready for action. Indiana newspapers asserted that Stephenson's story is that he is a high and low official, but that he revealed how he managed and paid for the campaign of Gov. Ed Jackson; that he told of ruling the legislature, dictating which bills should pass and which should die; that he played a role in the election of Mayor John L. Duvall of Indianapolis; that he beat Duvall in the election of a United States senator, and much more along that line.

On the other hand, Stephenson's attorney declared that his client's only charge has to do with the pending prosecution of Mayor Duvall. The ex-grand dragon himself said in part:

"There's a little seat in the chair shop next to me that is vacant, and I expect my company before long.

I have not told that to anyone in the Indiana situation. Reeny did not insist that I do so. The rest will come later, and I promise that when the entire truth is told there will be a clean-up in this state, that will startle the country and will benefit the state immensely."

REPUBLICANS of New Jersey, in state convention, overrode the decision of their resolutions committee and the protests of the women delegates and adopted their platform a plan calling for a Volstead law to extend similar to that passed by the voters of New York last fall. The debate was bitter, the final vote being 67 to 18. It is believed the action will have an important bearing on the gubernatorial and senatorial elections of 1928.

The New Jersey Democrats also held their convention and adopted a platform demanding the right to make and consume light wines and beer.

ATLANTIC CITY had one of its most disastrous fires in years. Nearly one-half of the famous Board Walk was wiped out and eight hotels and rooming houses went up in flames. More than five hundred persons were made homeless, and many excursionists lost their belongings.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made in an article under New York American copyright that Henry Ford has ordered his publication, the Dearborn Independent, to discontinue all articles hostile to Jewish people. Ford makes a statement which is an apology to the Jews for admitted injurious attacks.

LOVELY RAIMENT FOR BOUDOIR; THE MODISH THING IN PRINTS

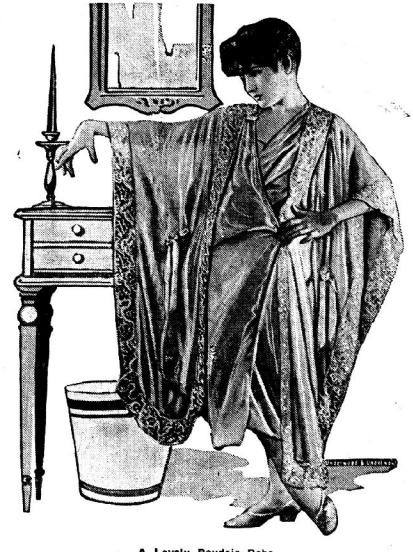

WHOMO would forfeit the pleasure and satisfaction of owning lovely raiment for the boudoir, since any one possessed of an artistic sense of taste, values, and a little ingenuity can conjure upuring garments at a slight expense, which look as if they cost a "million."

The first requisite for one contemplating making a midsummer boudoir negligee is to rightly choose the material, next comes the pattern, when it comes to the purely feminine types now so in vogue—this being interpreted means dainty chiffons and lace in their plain grounds, their gay color accented further by solid navy or bright borderings or trimmings—perhaps an inset portion of the plain silk is introduced in a manner as illustrative.

If you have not acquired a silk print, frock it is safe guess that you will before the season is over, for few there who will escape this epidemic for printed chiffons, flat silk or crepe de chine which is sweeping the country.

One does not stop at the dress when ordering print silk for the costume. It abundance. And the colors! The rainbow, the emerald green, the pale pink, the heart of a rose or a bouquet of the tecture's choicer blossoms tell the story of tones and tints which blend into a symphony of beauty under the artful maneuvering of creative genius.

Who can resist a picturesque silhouette, draped in a flowing gown for its accomplishment, if sleeves one may call the long floating panels and drapes which fall from the shoulder with such infinite grace, as do those in this picture. The color scheme for this is a combination of a light blue and white, the latter placed over the former, the latter placed over the former, the thin material on top of another. Quantities of deep cream lace edging the long floating panels and sleeves which fall from the shoulder with such infinite grace, as do those in this picture. The color scheme for this is a combination of a light blue and white, the latter placed over the former, the thin material on top of another. Quantities of deep cream lace is very proper to line one's solid-color coat throughout with this same print, or you may make a little circular piece of the silk with which to accompany the frock!

Plated printed silk is wonderfully effective in combination with the smooth figured fabric. If you are making your silk-print frock at home, up-plate flowers on the skirt, or an entire plated skirt. A little ingenuity spent on plating and hemstitching is a guarantee against that "ho-ho" which ever dwells in the mind of the amateur—the fear of a "homemade" look.

It adds to the appearance of the silk-print frock if each ruffle is decorated with a hand of solid color. If the edge is picoted before plating the ruffles are given an exquisite finish.

Picoted plain silk should then also be used for the waist and bodice. Single shoulder or bustle bodice and also be made of the solid-colored silk, which should be picoted on each edge, ribbon or else exquisitely faggoted.

JUST HUMANS By GENE CARR

"NO, HE'S NOT A GENIUS, BUT HIS NAME WILL LIVE!"
"SO I HEARD—IT'S SMITH."

Mother's Cook Book

A DAY WITH SAUCES

If you make life worth living,
Try these six things worth while:
They'll sure 'em up ag'in—
Just love an' work an' smile.

A SAUCE as an accompaniment to a dish is as essential as the ordinary meal itself. It is impossible to make a dish appealing. A very necessary dish with an appropriate sauce has made many a chef famous and gone down in history as a worth-while achievement.

Certain foods are best with certain sauces. The flavor of the sauce enhances the flavor of the dish. A lamb roast with mint sauce is taken out of the ordinary class. Pork roasts needs apple sauce to make the pork more tasty and digestible. We like turkey and cranberry, mustard with capers, venison with tomato or onion, and so on ad infinitum.

Venison, a choice dish at all times, is greatly improved with a spiced grape jelly; duck with sliced oranges or a tart jelly.

Fish of any kind is always better served with a sauce, usually of the caviar variety. Oyster sauce is a great favorite with fish. Bechamel and brown sauce are also good sauces as sauce tartare and tartar sauce.

Wildfowl is especially good with—

Rhubarb.

Melt four tablespooms of butter in a saucepan; add one sliced onion and cook until slightly brown. Add five and one-half tablespooms of flour, a tablespoomful of salt and a little pepper. Stir to a smooth paste. Add two cups of broiled stock gradually and continue stirring, stirring constantly. Cut the meat from a dozen ripe olives, cover with boiling water and cook seven minutes, then add to the sauce.

—Lemon Butter.

Cut a slice from the ends of three or four green peppers, remove the seeds and all the white portion. Cook to boiling water until soft. Drain and chop fine, rub through a sieve; there should be two tablespooms of the pulp. Cream one-half cupful of butter and add the pulp, stirring until evenly mixed. Spread over planed fish, steaks or chops—it will enhance the flavor.

—Green Pepper Butter.

Cream one-half cupful of butter, add lemon juice—about two tablespooms, drop by drop—stirring constantly. This fine for any fish mixture, lobster or crab meat. This is a delicious sauce spread over a broiled fish, planed fish or cooked hot lobster.

What Does Your Child Want to Know?

Answered by BARBARA BOURJAILY

WHY DOES STARCH MAKE CLOTHES STIFF?

The molecules which form the starch are very large and thick. And so they can't escape, but stick all through the cloth, and stick.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT By F. A. WALKER

GROWING OLD

TO THINGS the human mind dreads —Old Age and Death.

Both of these we battle against, and off as long as possible because of the terrors and difficulty which it entails, the other because we know not what is beyond.

The present of this is that very few of us grow old gracefully and attractively.

We strive to be young, when we should be willing to be old.

We ape the tastes and fashions of youth when we have long been unactivated to them and make ourselves ridiculous when we might at least be interesting.

It is truer, perhaps, of women than of men that the appearance of a gray hair and the permanent establishment of a wrinkle is looked upon as a sort of individual disgrace, an indication that we have been left undone that should have been done, something done which should not have been done.

As a matter of fact, there is nothing more beautiful and nothing more interesting than attractive old age.

Wisdom, which comes only with age, should then reach its highest development.

Judgment which in youth is neither sound nor trustworthy, should then be dependable and worth while con-

The time to prepare for old age is before it arrives.

The time to prepare for the harvest is in the seed time, and youth is the seed time.

If every young man and young woman would keep the future in mind, plan for it, and for study for it, old age would less likely bring terror and we should look forward to it as the time when we should enjoy the results of a well-arranged preparation.

For the old age which follows a lack of this preparation is that old and sad, the old age which has no memories but regrets, its future gone, its past a failure.

WE GET AS WE GIVE

By EVELYN GAGE BROWNE

IF YOU would be happy, make some somebody glad, And the joy you are giving away, The smile you bring to hearts that are sad.

Will shine in your heart some day, If you would be rich, then give of your store, Freely and joyfully, too, And all that you give—with even more—

Will surely come back to you, If you would climb to life's higher things,

Then help some unsatisfied soul To reach the heights, and you'll find it brings—

Your heart to its chosen goal, If you would be loved, then love all men.

As your Brothers upon earth, And the love you give will come back again

To the earth that gave it birth.

We get as we give—in equal amount— Of love and everything true; So give and gain without measure or count.

And it ALL will come back to you!

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21 Arthur D. Little got the hard job of his life.

AT 21 I got the hardest job I ever had. A company in Rhode Island had set up a mill to make paper by the sulphur process, a process which had been taken over and developed commercially by the Swedes and the Germans. This was the first to use this process commercially in the United States, and was charge of a Swede inventor and a German engineer. The officers and board of directors knew nothing about paper making. They thought they could employ some one who had a little about chemistry, and when I applied for the job the president offered me two dollars a day. He would not so far commit himself as to go into the week.

Arthur, established with my arrival the German engine got into a row with the president and left the place flat. The board of directors held a solemn meeting and as I seemed to be their only resource, they voted me to be their only resource. I was only twenty-one and the youngest man in the plant. Arthur D. Little.

TODAY—Arthur D. Little is one of the most celebrated chemical engineers in the country and is the head of the largest private laboratory in the world, located at Cambridge, Mass. He left the mill referred to above soon after he became the superintendent and, after a long struggle, established himself with a large clientele. He is an expert in industrial chemistry, and a pioneer in applying the wood pulp process.

"For fifty-one years you've been getting bad starts, young man! "Isn't that late, though, to get a few good stars?"

"For nearly forty years I was a good four inches taller than she, and, bending down on him like a good humored and intelligent girl, she answered his look. "Abigail, what can't be endured must be cured! " I told her, many years ago, to drop that name, but she just said, "John, I take to tell the people that she is the same as a pack of sinners all, and the poorest preacher ever staled in their pulp, sacrifices lots more than they did, and likely as not was a heap too good for them, I told her— "She stopped, but she hadn't told him this, nor would I, for she wouldn't criticize a man's wife, not even her favorite nephew.

He read between the lines of her wide smile; he felt himself making a suddenly resolve; he rose to go. DAGGER IS FOUND IN UR 5,000 YEARS OLD

Hilt Made of Lapis Lazuli With Studs of Gold.

Lapis Lazuli—A wonderful five thousand-year-old golden dagger was one of the many treasures of Ur described by Dr. T. C. Leonard Wooley, head of the British Museum section of the Anglo-American expedition which has been excavating the highlands of the birthplace of the patriarch Abraham. The flight of time is vividly depicted by Wooley in his latest report to the British museum when he emphasizes the nature of the expedition's finds date from a period "more remote in time than Nippur or Uzzar that Nebuchadnezzar is from us, about 2,000 years or more older than the treasures of Tut-Ankh-Amen with which they challenge comparison."

The excavation work has just been closed for the season, partly owing to lack of funds, but Wooley and his fellow-scientists strongly favor an extensive examination of the ruins for, he says, "The further we go back the more elaborate and the more finished seems to be the art of Sumera." At the end of the expedition's fifth season, archaeologists and students are now able to picture in detail the civilization of Mesopotamia in 3500 B. C., and "what is truly surprising is the wealth and the high level of the culture of that remote time."

As regards the dagger, Wooley states, "The hilt is made of one piece of deep blue lapis lazuli decorated with studs of gold; the blade is of gold, sharp and bright; the sheath also of gold, is plated at the back, but is otherwise covered with an exquisite design in silver. When it was found a golden reticule also decorated with filigree, containing a tiny toilet set, tweezers, stiletto and spoon, all in gold. They were at least five thousand five hundred years old."

Sumerian Kings.—Excavating the ancient cemeteries during recent weeks the expedition found cylinder seals of no fewer than five early kings, of whom three were unknown to history. It was while excavating 100 feet below the two thousand-year-old graves that they made the best discoveries, for below these they found three thousand nine hundred-year-old reliques and still lower, graves going back to 3,500 years before Christ.

The Sumerian graves were the richest, though naturally not all the treasures they once contained had survived the passage of time. There were no rock-chambered tombs, hermetically sealed, such as preserved the woodwork and even the linen fabrics in Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb.

"In a sandy land formed entirely of river silt the artifacts, but dug a hole laid at the bottom of a square of matting, placed on this the body, draped like a mat, with round it such offerings as they could afford, spread another mat over all and then filled up the pit again."

"Natural offerings were few," says Wooley, "much has perished. What may have left a film of brown color in the soil, black tinder may represent the tasseled garments or the shroud of the dead, but that is all. Silver is easily melted, copper may survive, or may become sand or splinters, the very bones of the man himself may have vanished, only gold remains untouched by fire."

But although much has gone a vast amount yet found to throw light on the earliest period of Mesopotamian history. During the last month of the expedition's work not a day passes that did not produce at least one gold object; vessels of pottery and stone, copper tools and weapons, beads and amulets, brooches daily in bewildering numbers are recovered and then there was a special prize in the shape of some unique monument of art."

A Gaming Board.

One such remarkable treasure was a gaming board. The actual wooden board is long since decayed, but the incrustations which had covered it remained in position. One corner was a difficult and lengthy task to lift without disturbing them the hundreds of tiny bits of faience that composed it, but this was done at last and now it is only to rebark and clean the mosaic to possess again, just as it originally was, this royal "chess board."

The edging of the board is of mother-of-pearl, the border of mother-of-pearl, lapis lazuli and lapis lazuli. The board is divided by straight blue lapis and red pastes of shell engraved and inlaid with red and blue in geometrical designs. Wooley says it is indeed a triumph of ancient craftsmanship.

Incomes in U. S. Increased Billion Dollars in 1926

New York.—Total income in the United States among its 110,000,000 inhabitants was $73,649,000,000 for 1926, compared to $77,300,000,000 for the preceding year, the National Income Commission Board reports.

If the value of all goods and services produced in the country last year had been evenly divided, every man, woman and child would have received $671.43, the report says.

Pays Tribute

Andorra.—This little Pyrenean republic of 5,200 inhabitants has just paid its annual tribute of 1,000 francs (about $36) to its two "co-princes," the President of France and the Roman Catholic bishop of Urgel, Spain. For 69 years Andorra has paid tribute and enjoyed undisturbed sovereignty.

TREE RINGS CLEWS TO HISTORY AND WEATHER

Life Story Is Revealed in Own Cross-Section.

Washington.—Announcement by Dr. A. Douglas of the University of Arizona that the study of the sequence of tree rings reveals the true value in long-time weather forecasting recalls that tree rings already have furnished valuable clews to dating pre-Columbian history of America.

This method was used in conjunction with pottery types in fixing the date of a period "more remote in time than Nippur or Uzzar that Nebuchadnezzar is from us, about 2,000 years or more older than the treasures of Tut-Ankh-Amen with which they challenge comparison."

The excavation work has just been closed for the season, partly owing to lack of funds, but Wooley and his fellow-scientists strongly favor an extensive examination of the ruins for, he says, "The further we go back the more elaborate and the more finished seems to be the art of Sumera." The Mentone Gazette.

The life of a tree of almost every tree is revealed by its own cross-section, this year's growth being recorded by a new ring. If any given year has been one of scant rainfall, the particular ring for that year will be thin and brittle; and, conversely, if the rainfall has been heavy, there will be a corresponding increase in the thickness of the annual ring.

Periods of drought or excessive moisture, it has been learned, tend to repeat themselves at fairly regular intervals, thus in a more or less orderly sequence of thick and thin annual rings which do not vary, to any marked degree, in all the trees of any one district.

"Certain of these ring series possess individual features that quickly identify them, no matter in what locality they may be found, and these are naturally suited by a taxonomist as keys to the problem he is seeking to solve. And what is true of living trees is likewise true of dead trees, and beams or roofing timbers from prehistoric ruins like Pueblo Bonito."

"From the foregoing, it will be obvious that if any overlapping series of annual rings can be discovered that is, if a given sequence of rings can be found both in a beam from Pueblo Bonito and in a tree still living, it will be possible to date the former with reasonable exactness." Trees Calendars—"Missing Link."

"Such a direct connection, however, with no intervening links in the time chain from the beams of prehistoric Pueblo Bonito to the living trees of New Mexico, is rather beyond the reach of any scientific research committee of the National Geographic Society in connection with the exploration of Pueblo Bonito."

"Cross-sections from 49 timber units earthed during the explorations of two beams were examined by Doctor Douglass with very interesting results. These beams, taken from the eastern portion of Pueblo Bonito, are seen to have been cut within a period of 12 years.

"Some timbers excavated in the north-western quarter of the ruin, however, were cut several years earlier, thus corroborating the archaeological evidence previously presented."

Horsehide—Double Tanned That Always Stays Soft

Here is a Wolverine shoe for year 'round wear. The tops are high enough to keep out the wind and dirt of the spring and fall, low enough for coolness in the summer. They are ideal in the winter to wear under an overshoe. Because of its general utility this Wolverine is one of our largest sellers. Made of Cordovan horsehide, there is almost no wear-out to the upper; our experience has been this upper will wear out on an average two pairs of half soles. A light weight work shoe that is soft when you buy it, and stays that way.

ENGLAND'S STORY REVEALED IN INNSFaded Signs Tell Part of Many Villages

Birmingham, England.—English villages in agricultural sections are often more than 1,000 years old, and bits of their history are often written in quaint signs which have survived for many centuries.

Next to the church, the inns and smithies are usually the buildings built in the days in which hand tools were supplied by industries. Before the days of railroads and motors the smithy was the center to which everyone had to go both in peace and in war.

In signs are particularly useful in tracing the history of villages, as they often show the name or location of lords under whose protection the village thrived in past ages, and frequently indicate the past character of the neighborhood.

But the most useful signs are even more interesting than those which have historical background. One sign which used to be very common on old English inns was the "Five Alls." The sign represents the king, "who governs all"; the bishop, "who prays for all"; the lawyer, "who pleads for all"; the soldier, "who fights for all"; and the laborer, "who works for all."

Although many individuals in villages of descent link the present villagers with their ancestors before the Norman Conquest, the story of today often knew little about the history of their communities, and search of village records often yields little information about the early struggles of the tiny communities which are made up of low brown cottages screened by trees and vines.

Says He Has Found Lost City of Ophir

London.—After a search lasting 20 years, a British mining officer, commander C. E. Turner, has discovered the lost lands of Ophir, whence the queen of Sheba brought to Solomon her magnificent gift of 32 tons of incense, spices, gold, jewels, apes, peacocks, pearls and other valuable articles. Lecturing to the United Services Institute, recently, he said: "I have found what I sought, the city of Ophir exactly where it ought to be—in Arabia, about 400 miles east of Aden.

The city, with its ruined temple of God, is now little more than ruins, which have been looted and sold, but they have never identified it. The commander suggested that excavations on the site would be richly repaid, and said that the land, which was minimally wealthy, should be developed.

"The city is ideally situated," he said. "It has a harbor to the north and has a river which gives wharf space for a seaport. But a thin ribbon of coral sand is drawn across the harbor mouth, so it is difficult to sand that sheltered the life of Ophir. There is great wealth in Ophir still."

"Palestine now is the Palestine of King Saul. It lies in our power to develop the land to the prosperity of Solomon. There are gold mines and precious stones in the ground, a veritable Transvaal there."

French Alchemist Again Reports Making Gold

Paris.—France's most famous alchemist, Jolivet, cast out of Lyons again is asserting that the trait of the famed but unfound philosopher's stone with which the ancients believed base metals could be transmuted into gold.

This alchemist asserts his process of producing gold synthetically now is completely provable.

Out of six grams of silver, two of sulphur of antimony, one of orpiment and one of tin, he affirms, he has produced ten milligrams of gold.

He melts the metals, he says, heating them to 1,100 degrees Centigrade, and a selected process ends in precipitating the gold.

The addition of tin, he says, has improved his earlier process. He claims that besides the gold, almost all the original quantity of silver is recoverable.

Briton Makes Bungalow on Air Liner Cabin

London.—Everyone knows that most English houses of any antiquity at all generally boast a small collection of spooks, but it is believed that no house on these islands is quite as "shady" as the sumptuous home of Capt. G. H. Leverton, in Wallington, Surrey.

Through the shades of 10,000 travelers who have flown over the city of London in the Vimy-Rydeau, Rovair liner on the airways. After the big plane had unloaded its usefulness flying from London to Paris, Captain Leverton bought it and turned the roomy cabin into a bungalow.

INITIATIVE

The world bestows its big prizes, both in money and honors, for one thing. And that is Initiative. What is Initiative? I'll tell you: It is doing the right thing without being told.

But next to doing the thing without being told is to do it when you are told once. That is to say, carry the Message to Garcia; those who can carry a message get high honors, but their pay is not always in proportion.

Next, there are those who never do a thing until they are told twice; such get no honors and small pay.

Next, there are those who do the right thing only when necessity kicks them from behind, and these get indifference instead of honors, and a pittance for pay. This kind spends most of its time polishing a bench with a hard-luck story.

Then, still lower down in the scale than this, we have the fellow who will not do the right thing even when some one goes along to show him how and tells to see that he does it; he is always out of a job, and receives the contempt he deserves, unless he happens to have a rich Pa, in which case Destiny patiently awaits around the corner with a stuffed club.

IN MEMORIAM

RICKLE. In loving remembrance of our dear wife and mother Mary Duplap Rickle, who passed away three years ago, July 15, 1924.

A task each day, a word of loving cheer.

And oftentimes mercy's deed in kindness wrought:

A life that hath to others been most dear,

A life that prompts not one unhappy thought.

Through sixty years in life and death she stayed,

The hands of him who journeyed by her side;

To him she ever was the same sweet maid

As when he won her for his loving bride.

As son and daughters came her life to share.

In loving sacrifice she gave her best; For each dear child she did a burden bear.

Never paused to give a thought of earning rest.

Tis thus I think of her, fair mother mine,

Who all through life had been my friend and guide;

Though sometimes grieved by word or deed unkind.

A patient smile her wounded heart did hide.

Near fourscore years had gently passed her way.

E'en trials and cruel grief she oft had borne;

A kindly Providence had been her stay.

Who tempers winds unto the lamb that's shorn. The Family.

Advertising in a weekly newspaper lives longer than the advertising of a daily newspaper.

Every merchant who advertises in a daily paper, must certainly realize that the life of his ad is pitifully short. If his ad runs in a morning paper, the ad is worthless when the afternoon paper appears; if the ad runs in an evening paper it is dead next morning.

No one saves a morning or evening daily paper, after the next issue has appeared. It is thrown away and given no more thought. The paper is never picked up again for careful perusal of the ads. It is as dead as the moment just past. No ad in a daily paper can possibly stay before the public more than twenty four hours.

This is most certainly not the case with a country weekly newspaper. The paper comes into a home, say on Wednesday. First the news is read by each member of the family. It is then put somewhere where it can be kept at least until the next issue arrives, seven full days away. Your advertisement is kept in that home, before each member of that family, for at least seven days—SEVEN TIMES LONGER than the daily paper.

TO CAN PEACHES AND APRICOTS AT HOME

Most Satisfactory Plan for Canning.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Peaches and apricots are the best fruits for canning at home. They should be canned as soon after picking as possible. Only clean, sound fruit should be used. The canning may be done by the water-bath method—that is, in a wash-boiler or any covered pot sufficiently deep to allow the jars coming from the oven to stand upright. The following directions for canning peaches are taken from Farmers' Bulletin 1471-F, "Canning Fruits and Vegetables at Home," which may be obtained free from the United States Department of Agriculture.

Before preparing the fruit make thin syrup, using 1 cup of sugar to each 3 cups of water. A richer syrup may be made if desired, if the peaches are not very sweet, using only 2 cups.

of water. Put in one cracked peach pit for each quart of syrup. Boil 5 minutes and strain.

Immerse the peaches in boiling water for about a minute, or until the skins will slip easily, cut the peaches into halves, and discard the pits. If any quantity of peaches are to be handled, it is better to use a lye solution for peeling them, as the method does not require the use of a bulletin canner. Pack the peaches into jars as soon as they are peeled and cut into pieces, placing the halves in overlapping layers, concave surfaces downward. Fill up the containers with boiling syrup. Put a piece of plain glass over each jar 23 minutes or longer, if the fruit is fairly firm and hard, or for 20 minutes if it is ripe and tender. No. 2 and No. 3 sizes are processed 15 minutes.

Apricots are handled in the same way.

white bias tape, which serves to keep them in place. The bottom of the scalloped lace is bound with the tape, and the cuffs on the short sleeves are trimmed in the same way. The tie is made interesting by having pearl buttons in graded sizes set in it, and they are attached by a few pearl buttons. Many other trimmings could be developed in dotted swiss, and this style, as well as others, could be made up in numerous cotton materials appropriate for street wear. The new printed chintzes, gingham, organdy, seersucker, and linens are all attractive and practical. All-over patterns on dark backgrounds are generally best to select when one must ride in public conveyances or handle dusty books or papers.

USE WHITE ICING FOR LAYER CAKE

Successful Way of Making Cooked Frosting.

Here's an entirely different and always successful way of making cooked frosting for layer cake. The outside of the icing will have a crisp, shiny crust and the inside will be moist and soft. The bureau of home economics suggests this recipe, which can be modified to chocolate or vanilla frosting. If directions are carefully followed there should never be a failure with this icing.

Put the sugar, water and unboiled egg whites into the upper part of a double boiler. Have the water in the lower part boiling. Commence beating the mixture with an egg beater at once and beat constantly while it cooks for about 7 or 8 minutes. It should then appear just like ordinary beaten frosting and should be thick enough to spread. Take it from the stove and continue to beat about 5 minutes or until it has thickened.

If the icing proves to be insufficiently cooked it may be placed in the oven to broil, after being cooled for a short time. Or if it is too stiff add a small quantity of water and cook again.

Chocolate Frosting—Melt 2½ squares of chocolate and pour into above mixture just before removing it from the stove. Beat back and forth until smooth. Add a small amount of water or such amount as will produce the desired flavor; and continue as in vanilla frosting, above.

Food Materials Wasted Because of Preparation

It is more economical to serve small, though adequate portions and permit second helpings to the larger ones, than to heap up the plates, only to have much food thrown away.

white bacon lard tape. There are two collars, the upper one white and detachable so that it may be washed more often than the entire dress requires. The dress appears to be two-pieces, one for the body, the other for the skirt. The joining being concealed by a dark blue belt matching the tie. There are three pleats on each side of the skirt, bound on the edges with

SAMUEL ANOINTS DAVID

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 16:1-13. GOD'S CHURCH—THAT is, the church of God, thy people, but thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy Chosen.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Plan for a Boy's Life.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How God Chooses David.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Discovering Future Leaders.

1. Samuel Mourns for Saul (v. 1).

2. Why he mourned. The death of Saul was no doubt a personal loss to Samuel, but Samuel's communion and brother personality. Then, too, the ruin of so promising a career would deeply affect Samuel. Finally the humiliation to God and God's people grieved his heart.

3. Excessive mourning rebuked. The fact that God had rejected Saul should have lifted Samuel out of his grief. Samuel's grief over that which God does is a reflection upon Him and should be rebuked. When sorrow becomes a hindrance to the discharge of duty, it merits rebuke.

4. Samuel Sent to Anoint David (vv. 3-4).

5. Samuel's fear (v. 2). Perhaps by this time Saul was becoming a desolate character. Samuel still knew that if Saul should hear that he was taking steps to anoint a successor to the throne, his own life would be in danger. Samuel's desire to submit to the Lord's command to him was to be brave. However, even when going on errands for God we should not court danger.

6. The Lord's direction (vv. 2-3).

The Lord smoothened the way for Samuel. He showed him how to act. Samuel did not know the danger. He was told to take a brazier and announce that he was going to offer a sacrifice unto the Lord and to call Jesse to the sacrifice. The prophet was not told all that would happen. This is usually God's way. He guides us step by step. Samuel's purpose was known only to himself. It was to be kept a secret so that the news would not reach Saul. This was a shrewd device but entirely legitimate. The many ways in which we are guided have no right to know, especially when such a disclosure would be detrimental to the success of our mission. What Samuel said was true.

II. Samuel's Obedience (vv. 4-13).

1. The trembling elders of Bethel hem (vv. 4, 5).

The traditional movement was an occasion for alarm. To the elders' alarming inquiry Samuel responded with the assurance of peace, inviting them to join him in worshipping the Lord.

2. Examination of Jesse's sons (vv. 6-12).

The Lord had revealed to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the next king, but not the particular one.

3. Elijah rejected (vv. 6, 7).

Elijah was the eldest son and therefore he was the first presented as having first right to the place of honor. Furthermore, he was the spiritual man of the household, tall and majestic in manner, so that Samuel was captivated by him as he had been by Saul (10:24). Outward appearance is favorable, but the real test seen by God were against him. We frequently estimate men by their outward cultural appearance, wealth and position. These are only surface manifestations and frequently lead us astray, but God looks into the heart.

4. David chosen (vv. 8-12).

All but one of Jesse's sons had been looked upon, but still the search continued. Samuel's question as to whether all his children had appeared seems to imply that David was not of much importance. At any rate he was only a boy, while his brothers were already young men. He was considered good, though not the best, but not bad. He was called to the feast. This is ever the way of man. He overlooks the very ones whom the Lord has chosen for places of honor and influence.

Because David was faithful as a shepherd boy, he was in line to be a promoter of God's cause when it arrived.

5. David anointed (vv. 12).

When the shepherd lad appeared, the Lord directed Samuel to anoint him. When the oil was applied the Spirit of the Lord came upon him.

David was a gifted and attractive lad, but he did not have all that about him that the Spirit of God. Only as we are anointed by the Holy Ghost can we truly do the Lord's will and work.

III. We Can Choose

We cannot tell what shall be on the horizon, but we can choose what we ourselves want to receive, to live faithfully wherever besides.

We can walk with the bright angels, and wrestle with the dark ones, and oblige the flying hours to leave a blessing behind.—N. Y. Frothingham.

That which we do for ourselves is forgotten; that which we do for Christ is immortal.

CHAPTER XII

Lowell was appalled at the swiftness of Kennedy's deduction. He stared nervously over the gray man's head at Armitage. Armitage seemed cool enough, but as a matter of fact he was in the clutch of a mild form of hypnosis.

"Well, I'm waiting," said Kennedy. "Which of you two took Jeanne Beaufort away from me?"

"Kennedy," returned Lowell, "we admit you to be the shepherd of this flock; but sometimes you go a little too far. We're not under your orders, you know. And yet you storm into this room and demand—as if you had authority!—to know who snatched Jeanne Beaufort out of our clutches." He stopped the day at the right of her life, for no other purpose than to ask me the name of the man who married her. I refused, but I gave her twelve hours in which to leave the city. I consider that I acted as a gentleman and with honor, military or civil, whichever you will."

"I too," said Armitage.

Kennedy, choking with insane rage, whirled upon Armitage. "You were the man!"

"Yes. And I would do the same thing over and over, as many times as you contrived to catch her. Is that frank enough?" Armitage got up, throwing off his dressing gown. "Let us have the truth while we're about it. What is the North or the South to me, so long as I love Jeanne Beaufort?"

None of them could ever recollect how it started, that terrible contest which carried all three of them here and there about the room, toppling chairs, overturning bookcases, bursting into openings, two against one, the oddly enough fighting desperately for their lives.

At length bruiser, panting and disheveled, they drew back from this Hercules. The battle came it its end quite as abruptly as it had begun. Kennedy staggered over to a chair and fell into it, covered his face with his hands—and wept!

"Kennedy?" said Armitage.

"Yes, son—I guess I'm quite mad. It came over me with a rush—I had to do it—quite mad!" Kennedy dropped his hands from his face. "I might have killed you both, I'm sorry, but I couldn't help it. I'd better be getting along—dizzy."

"Drink this sherry," said Lowell.

Kennedy drank it and rose. Then he picked up his hat and left the room without turning his head.

On the following morning, Morgan rode madly along thepike toward the Bigarm plantation. He did not stop until he reached the command officer's tent.

"General," he said, "I have to report that the Yankees, ten thousand strong, are within an hour's march, perhaps less. Their cavalry will be on us in half that time. Their object is to cut us off and cut us off from joining Lee."

"Five or six miles away?" cried the general, astonished. "I received information last night that the Yankees were still in camp, thirty miles away."

"They have marched all night, sir. I know—because I marched with them. I got away by the barest chance," said Morgan indicating his forehead. "It could not be cut for it as sooner. I've been inside those three days. I was discovered, by a man named Parson Kennedy. He had the newest musket and used to show me I caught the bayonet in time to prevent it going into my skull. I knocked him flat with the butt. Anybody got a drop of whisky? I'm about done."

He sat down on a camp-stool, accepted a task, and drank rather deeply for one who wished merely a tonic.

The side who had offered the whisky did not even drink this way when they arrived for something called "Mentonecoffee."

Morgan returned the flask, ripped the sleeve from his left arm and made a wide bandage for the cut on his forehead.

The General was already issuing orders. The bayonets were in position, the grand men were to ride with the guns to hold the Union flag in check until the little army had won the danger of a hard engagement.

"You?" cried Morgan, running his tongue over his lips.

"You? Defend yourself. I'm going to kill you, Morgan!"

The two men started at each other with death in their glances.

Armitage was first to move. He suddenly realized as doubtless Morgan had, that there could be no true satisfaction in steel; he wanted to tear and rend and break yonder man with his two bare hands. And this desire became registered in his face, now no more agreeable to look at than Morgan's.

Jeanne felt something vaguely prudential stir in her heart. She knew they were going to fight for her; and the victor would slings her over his shoulder and make off with her—that is, if she could find no means of defending herself.

The terror in her face resolved itself into something akin to anger. She dropped her hands from her cheeks and caught hold of the edge of the table.

Armitage's rose and fell violently but without gaining any advantage. Morgan was quite his master, if not his master, with the sabre.

They pushed each other backward and forward. Armitage wanted his man with his back to the fireplace. Morgan was maneuvering to crowd Armitage against the table behind which Jeanne stood.

"The bricks!" cried Jeanne. "Push back!"

She was without mercy; she wanted Morgan to die.

"Thanks, sweetheart!" said Morgan.

She was without the least fear.

Indeed, she was one of those who, when she was here and yet not here, it was only her soul, her body was elsewhere, and so nothing could hurt her.

Through the broken window she saw men in butternut running, turning to fire as they ran.

A man pushed through the door. A bloody bandage was wound around his head at a rakish angle; the grim of battle was upon his face.

He ran to the window and emptied his revolver at the shadows pouring into the smoke. He turned back to retrace—and discovered Jeanne.

"God in heaven, you here yet."

"Morgan," she murmured.

The house rocked. A rubble of brick and mortar came plilling into fireplace. A shell-shock struck the chimney.

"So you wouldn't run away? That's like you!" Morgan laughered. "But what of that, sweetheart? While there's life there's hope!" He laughed again.

In the face of this new danger Jeanne forgot all about that outside.

The man was battle-mad, shorn of civilization's veneer, reckless and primal.

"Henry Morgan..."

"Yes, I understand. You've found out the truth. Yes, I was there in Richmond that night. I was one of the eleven. Can't you guess which one? What then?"

He walked over to her. She stepped behind the table. She was unarmed; and she was no longer without fear.

"Do you know why I am here, Jeanne? Have the tools cut each other's throats; you and I will begin the honeymoon!"

He threw out his hand unexpectedly and caught her by the wrist, dragging her from behind the table. "It is I, sweet wife! Henry Morgan! Home sum! I am the man!"

She struggled furiously to release her wrist—and saw the symbol on the man's forearm.

Outside were blue-clad figures, among them one she knew.

Morgan was pressing her head back to kiss her lips, when she screamed.

"John, John!"

Armitage came in through the broken window, grim and disheveled. It took him but in instant to understand. He seized Morgan and flung him against the wall. Jeanne ran back of the table again, her eyes wide with terror.

"You?" cried Morgan, running his tongue over his lips.

"John, John?"

Armitage came in through the broken window, grim and disheveled.

It took him but in instant to understand. He seized Morgan and flung him against the wall. Jeanne ran back of the table again, her eyes wide with terror.

"Jeanne how could I help loving you? How could any man? But you shall not live in dread and doubt any longer, oath or no oath. I was not the man who stepped out and first offered to marry you. It was Morgan. He knew who you were."

He made the mark on his arm.

"It was made recently. God knows what dark idea he had in mind. Besides, the mark isn't quite identical to the true one. See?" He rolled up Morgan's sleeve.

"Girl, do you think that I'll ever let you go again, now that I've got you? What's the north or the south to you and me?"

"Son!"

Parson Kennedy lurched through the shattered French window. He was a grisly object, covered with wounds, and the greenish pallor on his unshaven face foretold that he stood on the brink.

"Jeanne Beaufort..."

"Kennedy!" Armitage ran toward the gray man, but Kennedy waved him aside.

"I am dying!" A strange gentleness formed about his mouth and eyes. "Jeanne Beaufort, forgive! I, who once breached the Lamb, have come to the Wolf." Then he said:

"Forgive them, for they know not what they do."

And I—have not always known what I did! — Poor child! He beckoned to Jeanne, she knew.

"Jeanne Beaufort, the man you married is dead. No, not Morgan..." As Jeanne mechanically turned her head toward the quiet form by the fireplace, "It was Armstrong, the man who died in your garden. Presently God—will judge us both together."

Kennedy stretched out his hands, one upon each head. From the gray man's lips came with incredible evenness of tone the marriage ritual.

When the word was spoken, there came a deep suspiration. The hands slipped limply to his knees, both Jeanne and Armitage looked up quickly.

John Kennedy's stormy son had passed out into the quiet Harbor of Eternity.

THE END

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

In as much as death, the great archer and destroyer of human hopes and happiness has pierced with his dart and stopped the life blood of a dearly beloved neighbor, and as it has pleased God, the dispenser of providence, in His infinite wisdom to remove from our Camp a devoted Neighbor, and whereas there comes to each member of our camp, a sense of personal bereavement it is befitting that we express our sorrow and sympathy, esteem and respect for our noble neighbors, therefore be it resolved,

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.
FATHER PLAYS BEAR.
REASON TO BE THANKFUL.
IF I HAD SOME MUSH.

Justice Taft says he likes the law better than the White House, and, nearing his seventieth year, announces he will not retire. He certainly should not retire, but he owes to the public many future years of good effect. His mind and his smile are as young as ever, and every well-informed man in the United States, big or little, would gladly submit any issue to the judgment of Chief Justice Taft.

In six hours New York's National Guard laid out an airplane base, ready for use, with radio, telephone and all other requirements. A fine achievement.

The United States Government should take as much time as necessary to provide an airplane base for every great city.

Governors Island in New York Harbor should be given up entirely to flying, with a big dock for sub-marines.

The richest city, New York, contains the United States Treasury and all its gold, is unprotected from the air.

There ought to be an air field there from which swift United States pursuit planes would rise like mosquitos from a stagnant pond, to meet any invader.

Human beings are like children. A father plays "bear" with his little child, and the child is relieved when the bear stands up and becomes once more, "father."

England the eclipse put out the sun, changing day to night, and everybody knew that it was only make-believe night. Nobody feared that "the devil was eating the sun." Nevertheless, when the eclipse passed and the sun came shining out again, more, the crowds cheered. They were glad to have mother nature stop playing bear.

When Uncle Sam's fiscal year ended last week, he found a surplus of $35,000,000. Secretary Mellon had "guessed" $625,000,000, a good prophecy.

Uncle Sam really is a rich person, and can afford anything he needs. He ought to dig canals, harness water power, build the greatest air and submarine fleets in the world. He should stop trying to persuade Europe to do what it doesn't want to do, attend to his own business and be in a position to make other nations mind theirs. Until this nation is prepared to defend itself against any ten other nations, the Government will not have done its duty.

"Well done, but what did you do the next day?"

Fokker, airplane builder, would have an answer ready for Napoleon's favorite question. On Wednesday a Fokker plane flew to Honolulu. Next day a Fokker plane reached France. Now Fokker announces a plane to fly, nonstop for seventy-two hours and go from Seattle to Tokio, 5,000 miles. This Government should contract with Fokker to keep him here for life, and let the American Monarchs and Popes offered and induced that would bring great artists to their courts. The great artist of today is the airplane artist.

GOLDEN, not ten yards off Sing Sing Prison, MA were strung up Prison C. Convicts begged permission to the boys, but the guards rifles leveled, forbade them to follow their impulse, jump into the river and pull the drowning boy ashore.

The three boys drowned while guards and convict stood on, some of the latter weeping.

Once more those convicts feel that they never had a chance, not even a chance to help others, at risk to themselves.

They had a bad start in life, most of them, and things have gone wrong with them ever since. When they missed the opportunity to save life, they again felt cheated.

If the prisoners had no chance in the beginning, is not the fault of society, whose fault is it?

NUNGESESSER: THE AVIATOR ALIGHTS NEAR ROCHESTER

"I am Nungesser the French aviator. I was forced to land with my plane in a wheat field nearby because of a terrible storm while on a non-stop flight from Paris to Chicago.

Can I have shelter for the night?" said a man who awoke Milo Garner, a farmer who lives three miles east of Rochester on the Akron road from his bed at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning during the progress of the severe electrical, wind and rain storm which visited Fulton county at that time.

Garnier from an upstairs window questioned the stranger who spoke with a foreign accent but fearing that he either wished to hold him up was drunk or demented refused the request. Garner however, met his neighbor Fred Carl who hurried to the farm in his machine before he arrived the supposed aviator had left.

Sunday morning it was found that the man after the refusal of shelter at the Garner home made his way to the farm home of Elzie Ducker a quarter of a mile east of the Garner home where he made a similar request but Ducker had the same fears as did Garner and refused to permit the man to come into his house.

Nelher Garner or Ducker because of their fears had the presence of mind to ask "Mr. Nungesser" where his fellow aviator Colli was or where they had been for the past six weeks while the world has been anxiously awaiting word from them.

SUFFERS SEVERE BURN

While about her household work last Tuesday morning, Mrs. Herschel Nelland accidentally spilled boiling water on her foot. The foot was so severely burned that she has been unable to be about on it since.

Under-inflation destroys more tires than any other one factor. It causes ruts, tread wear and fabric breaks. When a casing is run flat or nearly so, it is liable to burst, twisting literally tears the tire apart.

The remedy for most tire trouble is proper inflation. This means maintaining the correct pressure at all times. A drop of more than three pounds in a balloon tire before inflation will cause any or all of the serious result sof under-inflation. See that the nut at the base of the valve is tight and that the valve inside is firmly screwed down. Do not guess at the pressure. Always use an air gauge, making certain to get a balloon tire air gauge for balloon tires.

STROMBECK POLICY CAUSES TROUBLE

Although the Kosciusko board of trustees refused to adopt a resolution presented by Milo Strombeck, trustee of Tippecanoe township, which bound the board not to employ any teacher who used tobacco or carried hip flasks, or women teachers who use lipsticks or wear skirts shorter than six inches below the knee, a number of the trustees are following out the Strombeck policy.

Willard East, trustee of Harrison township, has refused to employ teachers who use tobacco. Information from authoritative sources states that all employees teachers from Rome to coach for the Mentone high school. When he learned he smoked he informed this man that in the contract there must be a clause that he would refrain from using tobacco.

The new coach promised to do this and several weeks passed and he never appeared.

A few days ago the Harrison township trustees engaged a Warsaw man, former teacher and coach at Atwood Ind., as coach.

When this man arrived to sign the contract with Trustee East the man from Rome City also appeared and demanded the contract.

Both the Rome City and Warsaw man now claim they were engaged by East on a "non-tobacco contract" and threaten to file suit if not allowed to sign the contract for each of Mentone and Harrison township schools.

Mrs. Angie Barber, age 71, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elsie Jones of Mishawaka, Tuesday, July 12. Mrs. Barber had been taken to the home of her daughter about two weeks ago to be cared for.

Mrs. Barber was born April 19, 1856 in Rush County. She was married to Edwin Barber on March 13, 1877. They came to Mentone about fifteen years ago, where Mr. Barber passed away in 1918.

Mrs. Barber was a member of the Methodist Church of this place.

Rev. C. G. Yeomans of South Bend had charge of the funeral services, which were held at the Plymouth M. E. Church. Burial was made at the Plymouth cemetery by the side of her husband.

OBITUARY

Angie Barber was born April 19th 1856 in Rush Co., Ind., passed away July 12th 1927, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Jones in Mishawaka. She was married to Edwin Barber March 13, 1877. Two weeks ago she was taken to Mishawaka to be cared for by her daughter, where she passed away. Funeral services were preached by C. G. Yeomans, of Mishawaka at the Methodist church at Mentone. LIGHT YIELD OF MINT PREDICTED FOR 1927

With the opening of the distilling season, a light yield of mint for 1927 is predicted by the majority of the local growers. Excessive rainfall, with considerable loss in spots from the corn drowning out and with much of the acreage showing a rank, heavy growth, is given as the reason for the decrease in yield.

Some mint has distilled in various parts of the local crop section, with the resulting yield varying from two or three pounds to twelve pounds or better is reported. The average for the early crop is estimated at about 10 pounds per acre.

Many local growers are estimating that ten pounds per acre is a high figure for the prospective yield. Some are more optimistic and think that it will pass that mark. Experienced mint raisers hold that a rank growth yields considerably less oil than the normal crop. That coupled with the damage caused by water standing on fields will reduce the average it is pointed out.

FIELDS which were not damaged by water and which do not show unusually heavy growth are expected to yield well this year. In the case of rank growth, in addition, many growers are hoping to get good results from a second cutting late in the fall. There has been a slight improvement in the oil market recently. It has been expected that the local new crop would start at about $3 per pound.

FLOUNCE, SLEEVES, AND BONNETS WIDE OF BRIM

IN THE fluttery, flowery chiffon dresses which glorify this summer's mode, which are the specialty of Dame Fashion, fulfills her promise of recapturing the far-time lost art of an alluring feminine styling. It would seem as if these lovely frocks had filled the cup of beauty to the brim and over-flowed—yet the program of enchantment continues.

One of the fascinations lately thrown upon the screen of fashion is the dainty gown of diaphanous white latter, brims which frame the face in a most enchanting manner.

Even the tailored straw and felt hats have yielded to the wide-of-brim idea. Types of straw with felt, such as pictured first in this group, are among leading midsummer models numbered. The unattractive model is the conventional way of banding the felt crown, at the same time bordering the straw brim with felt.

It is, among other things, the versatility of the new wide brims which which has a skirt adorned with tiers of hemstitched petals, and sleeves flowing open from the elbow with untold grace, just as you see in this picture.

It is astonishing how many ways, drawn, jotted, sketched, painted, drawn and the like can be devised on one chiffon frock without overdoing the matter. However, such is the scheme of design for these sheer frocks, now so popular, they must achieve a soft elusive silhouette through intricate trimming, rather than through independent of any applied trimming.

Another item of interest in regard to the adorable gown as illustrated is that it is made of white chiffon trimmed with the flowered rather than being entirely of the print. A word should be said concerning the large rose patterning, such as this model fascinates. Some of them flounce flap in such a winning way; others assume a cartwheel aspect, while many recent types suddenly narrow at the back, suggesting a bonnet-like silhouette. She who wears this type must right away be the one who can tell where her eyes are blue or brown, such a teasing way have these brims of shutting off the view from the side. That this type is the cunningest ever, is a truth attested by the clever model of black straw trimmings below the picture. It is simply banded with ribbon, of course, for the ribbon trim is outstanding at this moment.

The zig-zag fabric applique is a feature worth taking note of as it appears on the hat at the left to the right. It's a nice way of embellishing the chapter without disturbing its contour. There is a pretty play of color reveals. These single immense florals either on dark or light grounds are the top of the mode for dressy wear. To be sure the prevailing style trend is toward this excess, but the enormous rose motif is one of the many exceptions to the rule.

It is also part of the "elegance in dress movement" that the sheer summer frock be accompanied with a picture chapeau, especially favoring transparent capelin, which is a most appropriate touch to the frock. The last word in midsummer millinery is the exquisitely colorful flat feather skull cap.

Dainty footwear, too, harmonized to the general color scheme is an essential to the ensemble. Satin shoes in colors in excellent style for formal wear.

Femininity, at least so far as fashions are concerned, has recovered her femininity. She now wears picturesque frocks with picturesque millinery—which means for the in the interworking of several shades of taffeta for this model.

There is also an effective two-color scheme displayed in the straw-and-fabric hat pictured to the left below. The never-to-be-brimmed straw straws of many colors are joined together in around-and-around stripe effect.

The last hat is a beige hair body. The last thing this summer to trim the straw hat in matching velvet ribbon. Little roses at the side unite with a fan of velvet by way of a finishing touch.

"Not that I know of," answered the waiter.

"Strange, very strange," muttered the other; "I can still hear him whistling."

Better to Live in Hopes

Expectations can Be a great
For those who live
In constant fear.

Tough Work

"My poor husband was a wonderful artist," sighed the landlady as she hacked at the pie crust. "He always said he found inspiration in my cooking."

"A sculptor, I presume," said the gloomy boarder, surveying his beat tort.

Great Concern

"I'm nearly sure that's an old friend of mine sitting at that table over there."

"Then why don't you speak to him?"

"I'm afraid to, because he's so shy that he would feel quite awkward if it turned out to be another man after all."

Such Ignorance

A farmer's boy brought a cowhide to the village produce dealer and asked what the price was for hides.

"Is it a green hide?" asked the dealer.

"Now," replied the boy disgustedly, "they ain't no green cows. The one this skin came off was a brindle."

That's a Cinch

Wife—You don't allow me half enough money for clothes.

Husband—if I did you would still go around half dressed.

GETTING BACK AT HIM

"You are lucky to be alive."

"Yes—among so many dead ones."

A Tail

Mary had a little dog
With pedigree quite tiny:
It tried to cross the street one day—
Honk, honk, bologna.

Warning!

Edgar—Phyllis wears a big sweater with W. P. on it.

Edwin—West Point isn't a co-educational school.

Edgar—That doesn't mean West Point—it means Wet Paint.

Resting on His Laurels

English Woman—There's my livin' with my husband now, ma'am; fame's ruined 'im. Since he got cured by them pills and 'ad his picture in the paper, he ain't done a stroke.

The Usual Distinction

"I admire determination in a man, don't you?"

"That depends. If it brings success, I praise it as splendid perseverance; if failure, I denounce it as contoured obstinacy."

Yes!

Barrister—What possible excuse did you fellows have for acquitting that man?

Juryman—Insanity.
"Really! The whole 12 of you?"

"HOW'S IT? HE'S SO LUCKY AT CARDS AN' FLOPS WHEN HE PLAYS THE PONIES!"
"CAUSE HE CAN'T SHUFFLE TH' PONIES!"

Mother's Cook Book

If every one were poor and sweet,
And every heart were billy;
If every heart with gladness beat,
And none were melancholy;
If none should complain,
And none should labor;
In evil work, but each were fair
To love and kind;—
One world, my world would be
For you and me, for you and me.

SUMMARY GOOD THINGS

DURING the warm weather we like to think of juicy fruits, chilled dishes and desserts that are refreshing without being too much work. With a small freezer one may prepare the most delicious desserts and have such variety that the family will always look forward to the dessert with anticipation.

If you wish to start off your dinner with something especially cooling and unusual, serve the honey dew or cantaloupe melons topped off with a tart sherbet.

Lemon Ice.

Take one and one-third cupsful of sugar, three cupsfuls of water and one and one-half cupsfuls of lemon juice. Boil the water and after five minutes, add the lemon juice and cool. Freeze as usual. This will make one quart of ice.

Thousand Island Dressing.

Take one-half cupful of olive oil, the juice of half a lemon, the juice of half a medium-sized onion, one and one-half cupfuls of grated onion, three tablespoonsfuls of chopped parsley, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard, six olives chopped or sliced, one teaspoonful of Worcester-shire sauce, one-half cupful of mayonnaise and one-fourth teaspoonful each of salt and pepper. Turn all the ingredients into a jar, after having mixed the dry ingredients and dissolved them in the fruit juice. Put on a rubber seal and shake until ready to serve. Finely chopped hard-cooked egg, green pepper and various other vegetables may be added for variety.

Figaro Figs.

Steam pulled figs until plump and soft. Sift one sift and insert half a marshmallow and a few nuts. Roll in sugar and serve on a paper doily-lined plate.

THE CLOCK WORKER

By EVELYN GAGE BROWNE

THE man who works with his eyes on the clock.
Just gets to the end of the day—but he doesn't get far on the road to success.

For he isn't headed that way.

He hasn't an ounce of genuine "push."

Except to "push the clock"—

And then when other folks get ahead.

He loves to sneer and "knock."

He gives just so many hours a day.

And he draws no joy from his work;

The only thing he draws is his pay.

And it's all that he doesn't shrink.

He puts nothing in—except his time. So gets nothing out at the end. Besides some pastray dollars and cents, which he straightaway proceeds to spend.

It's the chap who renders service-plus,

Not just by the hour or the day; But by all that's in him, and gives his best.

For the love of his work—not for pay;

Who's going to sit in the leader's chair?
And give to the very top?

He's headed straight to be truly great.

And nothing can make him stop.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—George Arliss Was Unknown in Metropolitan Circles.

AT THE age of twenty-one I was from a company touring the English provinces, my chief ambition being to achieve distinction in the London theaters.

Strangely enough it was an American that gratified this ambition. Charles Frohman, George Arliss' teacher, was the foremost character actor in America. It was Mr. Frohman who introduced Arliss to London audiences and by the same oddity in his career, it was in America that he achieved his first great success. This was in "The Daughter of the Gods," a Belasco production.

These combinations may in one case be a plant, in another a human body. In either case when death comes these entities separate and exist in the various manifold realms themselves into life, shadow and form.

In the human these entities which were characteristic of the person and which remained associated and constitute in their continued existence the after-death life.

An interesting theory, but not a new one.

There have been many guesses, beliefs, theories, suppositions as to what we are, what constitutes personality, what lives after death.

It is true that 25 centuries ago Democritus, a very learned man, evolved the theory that everything in the universe was constituted of invisible atoms. These atoms he believed to be "entities" which, as no atom depended upon another for its life and was therefore everlasting.

The varying association of atoms he believed made up the various forms of life which continued only as long as the association was maintained.

Democritus had, for those times, very original ideas.

He was the son of a very rich family in Thrace, and when he came into the world he was sent to school and studying, deviating at the end of his journeys that "if of all men have traveled over the greatest extent of country and have listened to the most experienced of men."

He had probably traveled a less distance than you would go in a summer vacation motor tour, but he was held by those who knew him to be "most divine" in his wisdom.

Life was not, as we say, "the Laughing Philosopher," although history gives no reason for the nihilistic application.

Maybe he, in his wisdom, laughed at the impossibility of proving his own theories as perhaps Edison did as he made public his doctrine of "life entities."

We know he was, and "Why we are" have puzzled mankind.

After centuries and centuries of honest testing, earnest investigation and wisest theorizing we are still as far from an accurate determination of established fact as when we began.

We know we are, and there, so far as absolutely provable fact goes, we are.

We know that we are conscious of a surrounding universe which one philosophy tells us is real and another tells us is unreal, existing only in thought.

Science tells us that all matter is energy, the indivisible atoms of Democritus easily divided into the elements, which are not matter at all, but electricity and that matter is really nonexistent.

What we seem to see, it may be we do not see at all, and what we seem to be, may, after all, be not at all what we are.

TRY THIS

By EDNA PURDY WALSH

Protecting Shoes With Tire Patches

FOR the summer pump of this sole and small heels tire patches make excellent protectors for both heels and tips where the wear is first shown. If a small triangular piece of rubber patch is applied to the pointed toe of the sole the leather tip above will look neat more than double the time.

Tire-covered wooden heels and leather heels can be adequately protected from wearing over by cutting these tire patches to the shape of the heel and cementing onto the heel.

Since the patches have a cement already on them which will adhere to leather and wood. If the patch does not stay on solidly, a cement made of gutta percha in carbon bisulphide will unite the rubber and leather. The edges of both rubber and leather should first be roughed by a sharp glass edge, and after the cement has been applied they should be pressed and held together. A tool chest will serve as a press.

It is a good idea to use gum rubber soaked in a small quantity of naphtha or gasoline to help the cement set.

These thin rubber heels and toe protectors are very long-wearing. While not as springy as ordinary rubber heels they do not change the shape of the heel.

Cat Hangers From Magazine Covers

EXCELLENT cat dress hangers can be made from magazine covers which have been read, by rolling them and tying in the center firmly with string or ribbon. They serve as a good padding to the bottom coat so that it does not lose its shape.

The small-sized magazine covered with a pad or single layer of pretty cretonne is an excellent protector for the dining-room table against hot dishes, coffee pot, etc.

A very quick way to warm a cold bed for an infant is to keep a radiator during the day, and when retiring time comes a few of these put into the bed will quickly warm it, doing a more extensive piece of work than the old-time hot iron. Paper holds its heat for a considerable period and makes an excellent insulator, and cold.

Excellent paper "coal" for the stove may be made by soaking old magazines or paper in water and shaping into balls to dry.

Old French Province

Burgundy was the name of one of the old provinces of France. It joined Switzerland and Savoy on the east and included parts of the basins of the Loire, Rhone and Seine.

It was one of the richest agricultural districts of France. One of its leading products is wine, known by the general name of burgundy. Dijon is one of its chief cities.

Washington's Swords

The only references we can find to the sword George Washington used when he died are in two books on Mount Vernon, one by Mianie Kendall Lowther, and the other by J. E. Jones. The former refers to three swords left to his nephews, while the latter says,

"There are four swords, three of which Washington presented to his nephews." —Washington Star.

Reasonable Supposition

A seal was recently killed off the shores of New York, presumably for the reason that seals are only infrequent visitors. One may reasonably suppose, therefore, that New York would be prompt to take a pot shot at an angel from heaven if that were ill-advised enough to go there.—Philadelphian Ledger.

Lesson for July 24

DAVID AND GOLIATH

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 17:1-58. GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Boy Overcomes a Giant.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy's Brave Deed.

INTERMEDIATE—A Boy and His Friend.

SENIOR TOPIC—A Boy and His God.

TEACHING POINT—David and Goliath.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Victory of Faith.

IC—Victory of Faith.

I. The Contending Armies (17:1-3).

On the north side of the Valley of Elah, on the highlands stood Saul and his army, and on the south side stood the Philistines, arrayed in armor for battle.

According to an ancient custom, the Philistines, having a warrior among them of great strength, sought to decide the war by a combat between two selected champions. The nation whose champion was slain was to be beaten.

II. The Champion (17:4-37).

Goliath of the Philistines. (a)

He was a giant (v. 4), perhaps eleven and one-half feet in height. The appearance of such a man greatly intimidated the Israelites. Saul, who once was brave, now made no attempt or effort to meet this giant.

(b) He was bold. No doubt he was a rough-hewn man among the Philistines. Their possession of such a man recalled the former experience of their nation when Samson, the Israelite giant, wrought such great mischief among them.

(c) He was strong. He openly declared to the army of Israel—the people of the Most High. That is just like the champion of Satan's hosts now.

He is becoming more and more defiant of the Lord's people, and ultimately will defy the Almighty Himself.

(d) He was simple. He treated the Israelites with the utmost contempt. This is what Satan is doing daily. He treats God's people with disdain.

2. David, the Israelite.

In the providence of God, David was sent to the meeting of this proud and contemptible Philistine champion. His three eldest brethren were in the army, and his father sent him with some provisions for them as well as for the captain. While David was tending his flock against the bear and the lion, he observed his brothers fighting with the Philistines.

When Goliath beheld David coming up against him, he cursed him by his gods—Dagon, Baal, and Ashtar, showing that he intended to kill him.

When David and Goliath met between true and false religion, David hastened and ran to meet Goliath. The stone from his sling smote Goliath in the forehead and he fell to the earth upon his face. David then took the spear of the Lord of hosts—that is, the spear of the earth which knew that there was a God in Israel. The whole matter shows that the battle is not with the strong, but with those who put their trust in God.

III. The Battle (vv. 38-48).

When Goliath beheld David coming up against him, he cursed him by his gods—Dagon, Baal, and Ashtar, showing that he intended to kill him.

When David and Goliath met between true and false religion, David hastened and ran to meet Goliath. The stone from his sling smote Goliath in the forehead and he fell to the earth upon his face. David then took the spear of the Lord of hosts—that is, the spear of the earth which knew that there was a God in Israel.

The whole matter shows that the battle is not with the strong, but with those who put their trust in God.

IV. The Victory (vv. 49-53).

The Philistine champion was killed by the spear of the Lord of hosts—that is, the spear of the earth which knew that there was a God in Israel. The whole matter shows that the battle is not with the strong, but with those who put their trust in God.

V. The Trial of Your Faith

That the trial of your faith being much more precious than gold that perishes, though it be tried with fire, might stand unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ.—I Peter 1:7.

Souls That Surrender

Souls that surrender to the Lord will have the witness of the Spirit given and they will know beyond one doubt whether or not they belong to the Lord.—Echoes.

MENTONE GAZETTE, AKRON, INDIANA

CLAIMS BLOOD OF NOW EXTINCT RACE

INDIANA'S FIRST AIR RACES TO BE STAGED

IN PERU, JULY 23-24

The first airplane races ever held in the state of Indiana will be staged Saturday and Sunday, July 23 and 24 at Peru. Indications are that immense crowds will see the programs on these two days, numerous aviation stunts will be staged by daring flyers.

The races are sponsored by Jerry Marshall, vice president of the Indiana University school of aeronautics. Mr. Marshall is a former Peru resident but for the past three years has been connected with the south university.

Mr. Marshall has already secured seven entries for the races. They include Charles Quinn of Quincy, Ill., who will drive the Waco K-6 plane which won second place in the Ford reliability tour last year. Other noted flyers entered include Bob Merritt of Austin Texas; Red McVeigh of Ft. Wayne; Erneste Bashman of Muncie; Ted Sellers of Jacksonville, Ill.; Louis Price of Big Springs, Tex., and Mr. Marshall. These flyers will be the top airplane men in the country.

The race will be held over a triangular course, marked off by poles.

The racers are but fifty feet above ground during the races.

In addition to the races, special features have been planned for both days. On Saturday, a formation flight over Peru will be made by the entire squadron of racing planes. At 3 o'clock Ted Sellers, a racing pilot and daredevil, will give a thrilling rope ladder act while dangling from a swiftly moving plane. At 4 p.m. an hour of wing walking and stunt flying will be staged. Mr. Marshall will then make one of the most difficult feats in flying—a dead motor landing. He will stop the propeller of his plane at an altitude of 2,000 feet and land on a designated spot 10 feet in diameter.

Saturday night, a splendid aerial night fire works display will be shot from a plane piloted by Mr. Marshall.

Passenger flights will be in vogue Sunday morning. At 1 o'clock, sellers will again perform his rope ladder act. One hour later, Mr. Marshall will make another dead motor landing, using a Waco 9 plane.

At 3 o'clock the semi-finalists will fly down by all ships not eliminated in the Saturday race. At 4 o'clock Mr. Marshall will make twenty consecutive loops in his plane. At 5:30 o'clock the 3 ships finishing first, second and third in the semifinals, will race for the prizes.

Quinn and McVeigh are racing rivals of long standing and both are confident of reaching the finals and thus fight out the supremacy in the big event.

During the stunts on both days, there will be contests demonstrating the different qualities of performances of each ship, making each afternoon a continual round of aerial activity.

ANTIDOTE FOR POISON

Victims of poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumach can end their misery very easily. Just ask your druggist to make up a 5 per cent solution of potassium permanganate and swab it on the poisoned places, with a bit of absorbent cotton or a soft cloth. The permanganate destroys the ivy, poison, but does not harm the skin, except that it makes a brown stain. Most of us do not want to let this remain, and it can be removed by washing with a 1 per cent solution of oxalic acid.

Rev. C. B. Sweeny of Wahash was greeting friends in Mentone Thursday day.

Believed Only Survivor of Nah-Dah-Ko Tribe.

Anadarko, Okla.—Blood of an extinct race flows in the veins of Harry Shirley, believed to be the last of the Nah-Dah-Ko Indians, who attained a degree of civilization as long as four centuries ago.

His father, Pat Shirley, was a white trader, but his mother was a Nah-Dah-Ko. With his white wife and two children, Shirley lives on a farm near Anadarko, which is the old tribal seat. Virtual annihilation of the Nah-Dah-Ko was completed when Shirley was four years old, and his knowledge of the fate of his people is vague. The band, which was a branch of the Cadet tribe, was a great many numbers, and Shirley believes it was annihilated in an internecine war, when he was a child. He was taken to Texas by his father when hostilities broke out, and did not return until the war ended.

The town of Anadarko is named after the vanished Indians. Legend has it that when Shirley, Irish name, was born, the Nah-Dah-Ko pronunciation of the tribal name was responsible for the corruption of the name from Nah-Dah-Ko to Anadarko. Although the present town was not founded until 1901, an Indian agency of the same name was located near here as early as 1858.

The original home of the Nah-Dah-Ko band was in Louisiana. Records of a Spanish explorer reveal that in 1542 the Indians lived in houses, farmed extensively and owned cattle. The Indians were well known for the crook-neck of the white man and gradually lost their identity through absorption into other tribes and losses in warfare.

New Diamond Fields Attract Farm Labor

Pretoria, Transvaal.—More than 60,000 Europeans and 120,000 natives are working on the newly discovered diamond fields in the Lichtenburg area, according to Dr. H. A. Lorentz, Dutch agricultural advisor.

The lure of lucky strikes is responsible for a great dearth of farm labor, and Lichtenburg farmers are bemoaning the fact that kaffirs cannot be induced to do farm work when they can earn 30 shillings a week in the diamond fields.

No less than 43 per cent of the diggers belong to the agricultural classes, and only nine per cent are diamond miners or trade.

Curious tales of fortune hunting abound. Some who believed they had the secret of success, quit point-blank, while, on the other hand, an old man who sat down when he saw he was being beaten in the race for claim pegging, dug where he sat and struck a rich patch.

In another case, a digger cursed when he sprained his ankle, falling over a tuft of grass, but later discovered that he had fallen on a claim that is now panning our rich.

Find 100-Foot Worms Off California Coast

Berkeley, Calif.—Species of sea worms classified as "swarming creatures," some of which are said to be 100 feet long, have been seen and studied in the Pacific ocean near San Diego by Prof. W. G. Coe, Yale university entomologist research worker at the University of California, Scripps Institution of Oceanography, at La Jolla, he reports.

These remarkable sea denizens, known by the scientific name "nemerteans," have been examined by few biologists, and Coe says the worm is believed to be the only living creature knowning much about them.

To zoologists the worms are especially notable for their length, some of the more common species extending a yard or more, but being only a fraction of an inch in width. Coe says the nemertean species are reported to be longer than any known animal, 100 or more feet. Even the whale has not been found to reach quite that length, says Doctor Coe.

Soot From Smudge Pots Colors Grave Monuments

Torpenish, Wash.—Sextons are busy with sponge and chamois cleaning grave monuments after the soot from the smudge pots burned in central Washington to fight the frost. Polished granite was as infested for soot and most of the tombstones in cemeteries resembled charred tree trunks in fire-swept forests. The heavy smoke and soot did much temporary damage, but through it all the fruit and prosperity were both saved to the apple growers.

Honey Burden Weighs Down Roof of House

Gosnall, England.—There's so much honey in the roof of a fifteen-century farmhouse here, called "Cole Kitchen farm," that the ceiling of the room immediately underneath is giving way beneath the weight after 100 years' service as a gigantic beehive.

T. H. English, the owner, says nobody ever tried to get the honey out, and it would necessitate removing the roof.

In the swarming season the place is smothered with bees.

BY MAN SHALL HIS BLOOD BE SHED

(By D. J. Walsh.)

THE wounded man roused himself, then motioned to the nurse. She bent over him.

"Read to me."

"What chapter?"

"Genesis; fifth chapter, fifth and sixth verse."

Turning to the place designated, the nurse said:

"And surely your lives of your blood must require it and at the hand of every man will I require it, and at the hand of every man's brother will I require the hand of every man who slayeth his brother; for in the image of God made he man."

The man had been silent since he heard those words you just read."

"You must not talk. The doctor's orders are for you to remain quiet."

"Those words," he went on, ignoring the nurse's commands, "impressed me little ten years ago, except as being taught in school. But now, in my mind and occasion, it was in a little church at Valcourtier. The congregation of soldiers—part of the 33,000 Canadian expeditionary forces that landed first in England in October, I had left my colors in Canada to enlist, but was rejected—too old!"

"I stayed on anyway, several days visiting with Calhoun, who had enlisted and was eager as any of the men to be away at the front."

"Calhoun, that is the name of the man who signed you last?"

"The same. But it isn't the first time you have heard of two old friends turning on each other like a couple of wolves, is it?"

The nurse admitted she wasn't.

"I am," he said. "I was in church that day in a little church at Valcourtier from the verses you just read. He told the solemn, silent congregation where they were going many of them would shed the blood of their brothers and fathers in their own cause, rising in anger and wrath. His blood was precious, sacred, an atonement for the soul—a vehicle belonging to God, and always demanded, always forfeited, sooner or later the soul was contracted, and exonerated them from sin, still needlessly. How weighty and significant his words seem now when they then but passed with the hearing."

"You were strong and well then. You will be again if you obey the doctor's orders. What appears momentary to a sick person shrinks to nothing when they are well and strong again."

"A man," he rumbled on self-analysis, "may regard death lightly, tramping heavily on his days, but he never will stand it out. It smolders on, one day to blaze."

"All my life I have been a man of slaughter. Shedding blood needlessly—a trapper in the Canadian wilds! I have made countless orphans. Many, many animals and feathered parents desolate that night—scared to death. I have enough now, provided from that source, to supply all the needs of life, and have wasted as much again in useless excesses."

"Remembering of their blood?"

"But the body says 'Yes' the mind of ever boast! If the mind of house does not count why is it mentioned? I went back to the wilds. Returning with fur to sell. Was at the station when the boys entered on the Canadian. Not long after the second time where they would take ship for the front. I had my knife with me, had a deerfoot handle. I had carried it all my trapping days. It had been dipped in the blood of beast countless number of times—so often that the pinching blade had become dimpled with dark brown stains—blood dried and would not smear off in sand or any way I tried. That blade had been stained with human blood, too! I had used it more than once to eat over game poached from traps and traps poison. I wore the knife in my belt as I stood on the train talking with Calhoun. He leaned from the window, noticed it."

"A pretty knife you have there, Jim Letts told it."

"I handed it to him. His fingers closed around the handle and he made several swipes with the blade through the air."

"A dandy weapon in a set-to with a boche!"

"It's a sure fire. Take it along, I yelled as the train pulled out."

Suddenly he straightened up from his pillow, his eyes wild, demanding: "Where is the weapon? He cut me with?"

"True, there," the nurse seethed as she reached over and attempted gently to force him back on his pillow. "You have exerted yourself enough, too much, already. Recieve and go to sleep."

He pushed her hands away. His voice low, insistent and urgent: "Get me that weapon. I must see it!"

"You have already seen it. You pulled it from your side with your own hands when he cut you," the nurse replied, alarmed, but hoping to quiet her patient.

"True, I did. But I was too excited —too drunk to notice whether I had been stabbed with a knife, a sword or a bayonet or in himself did not know. Crashed, in our dreary quarrel, he reached up among the collection of weapons on the wall brought back from the fields of Ypres, the Somme and Vimy Ridge. His fingers closed on the first they touched and he started me."

With hopes of quieting the patient the nurse stepped over to the telephone.

"Mr. Keller; this is Miss Collins. Old Man Priest wants you to bring him here. He is still situated with us. Says he must see it at once."

"He brings it right over," she reported, returning to the bedside. The patient relaxed on his pillow. He was so weak! It was pitiful to see him like that, but a few hours before strong and robust, as he had been a child.

Keller, the lawyer, thought he might be in the way of obtaining some new legal points in the case, came hurrying over, the weapon wrapped in a newspaper. The patient roused himself and sat up as he heard the parcel enter and approached the bedside. He snatched the parcel and tore off the wrapping.

"The same knife!" he gasped, sinking back on his pillow. "Old Calhoun! I am holding his fingers around the unique handle and holding the knife up to his eyes."

He raised his burning eyes to those of the lawyer.

"Do not prosecute Calhoun. I do not want him prosecuted. He shell-shocked, gassed in France. Maddest in the world, but when I saw him in our darkest round, I did not know what he was doing. Promise!"

"I shall present your request at the examination," rejoined the lawyer.

Priest sank back on his pillow and again applied a spell. The rousing again suddenly stopped at the worn bright blade. Held it up so that the sun's warm rays cast long shadows on the glittering steel—he held it up for the nurse and lawyer to gaze.

"You must not talk. The doctor's orders are for you to remain quiet."

"Calhoun, that is the name of the man who signed you last?"

"The same. But it isn't the first time you have heard of two old friends turning on each other like a couple of wolves, is it?"

The nurse admitted she wasn't.

"I am," he said. "I was in church that day in a little church at Valcourtier from the verses you just read. He told the solemn, silent congregation where they were going many of them would shed the blood of their brothers and fathers in their own cause, rising in anger and wrath. "You were strong and well then. You will be again if you obey the doctor's orders. What appears momentary to a sick person shrinks to nothing when they are well and strong again."

"A man," he rumbled on self-analysis, "may regard death lightly, tramping heavily on his days, but he never will stand it out. It smolders on, one day to blaze."

"The nurse hastened to the patient's side. A smile had parted his lips. His hands relaxed and dropped heavily onto the pillow. She bent over him, clutching his fingers to her nose. He fell back heavily against the pillow with a tired outburst of breath. His head fell forward, rolling on his breast.

The lawyer sprang to assist the nurse, but all they could do was straighten the deserted body.

MAKING CURTAINS TO FIT WINDOWS

Use Yardstick for Accurate Measurements.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Before you buy your material it is a wise precaution to draw to scale the window to be curtained. Use a yardstick or folding ruler, as a tape-line may stretch, resulting in inaccurate measurements. Measure the exact dimensions of the window, your drawing, and also the width of the trim and apron. Then sketch in lightly the kind of curtains you wish to have and decide whether or not they are suited to that type. If the window is wide, the valance may not need a valance, since that emphasizes the horizontal lines; if the window is narrow and high, a valance and side draperies set far over at the edge of the trim will help to correct this.

Let us assume that you are going to make glass curtains of seeling muslin, quizzette or net, with side draperies and a gathered valance of cretonne, unlined. Following directions given by the United States Department of Agriculture, you will probably begin with the glass curtains. They are to be made of glass curtains with the same case as in making the glass curtains. Slip the selvages at intervals of 3 or 4 inches or trim them off. Turn a hem $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches on the underneath edges and a 2 or 3-inch hem on the top edge. Make a casing at the top for the rod to run through, since there is to be a valance.

The valance when finished is usually one-sixth of the length of the finished side draperies. Hem, heading and casing allowances are added to this in calculating the material required. The width of the valance across the window is one and a half times the width of the window and side trim if the valance is gathered, twice that much if it is plaited. Make the valance in the same way as the curtains.

Three rods will be needed for hanging these curtains, since the valance and side draperies should not be hung on the same rod. The glass curtains must be set closer to the window than the other hangings. The neatness of general appearance of the finished curtains will depend on the way they are hung. Solid round rods which fit into sockets are preferred for glass curtains. Flat or round rods may be used for the overdrapery.

All curtains should be pressed when finished. Avoid making crosswise folds in them, or any unnecessary lengthwise creases.

Organdy Appears Again as Material for Frocks

Organza, a fabric that has long been forgotten, is revival this year, in part due to interest in fluff, full-skirted dresses in delicate shades and flowered patterns for young girls and party frocks, afternoon dresses, and summer evening wear generally. It is made of such materials as pink, peach, orange, pale blue, and maize, both plain and in designs.

The textile division of the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, calls attention to the pleasing qualities of organza as a fabric for dresses and undergarments. It is sheer and cool, yet has a crispness that remains after laundering. It can be washed at home successfully. Full-skirted fashions are recommended for development in economy, with trimming of organdy in the form of bows, ruffles, etc. Shaded effects can be produced by combining two or more colors in various ways. Slips of baronet satin or other rayon fabrics are good under organza because of their sheen and luster, and they are washable. Organza trimmings for other cotton materials are effective, as, for example, bands of organdy with tissue piping, or collar and cuff sets of organdy, or matching hats. Organdy is also recommended for dainty bedroom curtains and lamp-shades.

Each curtain length should be measured and checked before any material is cut off. Before cutting, draw threads if possible to provide an accurate guide. Trim off all selvages and put in the side hemns, then the top and bottom hemns. They should all be turned under the depth of the hem. Otherwise when light shines through

VEGETABLE PLATE EXCELLENT FOR DINNER

Stuffed Pepper, Celery, String Beans and Fried Eggplant Make a Good Combination.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When vegetables constitute a large portion of a meal or when one is serving the type of dinner sometimes called a "vegetable plate," attention should be given to variety and contrast both in color and flavor. The colors should be at least one hearty color, that is, one that contains a rather high proportion of protein and starch, either in the vegetable itself or in the other foods combined with it. Milk, cheese, eggs, etc., often used in sauces on vegetables are added to the proportion of protein. There should also be something crisp, something soft, something mild-flavored, something acid, and at least one protein-rich vegetable to give zest to the entire combination. These elements should be enough richness in the seasoning of the vegetables or the way they are cooked to make them substantial enough for the main course at dinner.

the curtains, an irregular line is seen inside the hem. A tuck should be taken just below the casing to allow for shrinkage when the curtain is laundered. Hemns look better when put in by hand rather than by machine stitching, and must draw. If there are many curtains to be made, however, machine stitching is advisable.

Skimped side draperies are not attractive. Cretonne is usually 36 inches wide, and you will need to add the width of the material for each side. Fibrous materials may sometimes be split lengthwise and finished with an extension hem. In estimating the length of the side draperies, measure from the top of the side draperies to the top of the valance, plus the width of 9 inches for hem, casing and shrinkage. If there is a decided pattern in the material, you must see that the pattern matches on each side before the material is cut. A little extra yardage may have to be allowed for this.

Measure and cut the side draperies with the same care as in making the glass curtains. Slip the selvages at intervals of 3 or 4 inches or trim them off. Turn a hem $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches on the underneath edges and a 2 or 3-inch hem on the top edge. Make a casing at the top for the rod to run through, since there is to be a valance.

The valance when finished is usually one-sixth of the length of the finished side draperies. Hem, heading and casing allowances are added to this in calculating the material required. The width of the valance is one and a half times the width of the window and side trim if the valance is gathered, twice that much if it is plaited. Make the valance in the same way as the curtains.

These rods will be needed for hanging these curtains, since the valance and side draperies should not be hung on the same rod. The glass curtains must be set closer to the window than the other hangings. The neatness of general appearance of the finished curtains will depend on the way they are hung. Solid round rods which fit into sockets are preferred for glass curtains. Flat or round rods may be used for the overdrapery.

All curtains should be pressed when finished. Avoid making crosswise folds in them, or any unnecessary lengthwise creases.

POULTRY

WATCH IN SUMMER

The summer and fall seasons are the ones in which the producer of market eggs must be most particular about the quality of the product if he expects to receive the top market price. At "that time of the year" said the poultry department of the State Department of Agriculture in Brunswicke, "the spread in price between the two top grades of eggs may be as high as 12 to 15 cents per dozen as compared with a spread of 2 or 3 cents in the spring, which indicates a great increase in the market value of eggs." The market value of eggs at the end of the year may depend to a large extent upon the quality of his summer and fall eggs.

There are several factors entering into the cause of this wide spread in price at the same time, but probably the most important is the fact that the interior quality determines very rapidly, and the eggs reach the market very loose and watery.

sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it is a truth that so many constipated infants and children had to take cathartics, pills, tablets, salts, calomel and many oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's ills, he reluctantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

WARN AUTOISTS TO WATCH ROAD HOBOS

Free Riders May End Up in Robbery.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Despite the fact that only a small percentage of "highway hobo" are criminals, they are a menace to motorists because they are organized and profit by protection on Missouri's roads. T. B. Cutler, state highway engineer, is warning to motorists, says that the number of ride seekers has doubled or trebled in the last three years.

Travelers, elite and rough, were not slow, however, in getting into the automobile transportation. Missouri's high ways became more heavily traveled. Sometimes a motorist would carry them long distance and the time required would not be greatly in excess of that of the de luxe passenger train. In some cases, before the blind beggars and empty box car were forsaken in favor of the back seat of a comfortable motor car. To day "Weary Willy's" hijackers and adventurous youths half motorists for "lifts."

"Many young men," Mr. Cutler said, "who ordinarily have paid rail road fare are tempted now because of the success of others to sponge off the motoring public."

"People picking up strangers on the highways should be discouraged. It is not only increasing the number of tramps but it is fraught with much hazard to the motorist. It affords unexpected opportunity for robbery, assault and other frequent misgivings against traffic."

"The experience of a road contractor about a year ago is well to the point. Traveling along route No. 60 toward Kansas City he met an elderly woman, poorly dressed, head covered with huge sunbonnet and a basket containing her possessions. At all appearance she was carrying home a day's washing. The contractor stopped his car and invited the woman to have a ride. Without saying a word she climbed in beside him and asked him for some food. He passed his sandwich and noticed a large-sized man's shotgun. Immediately he suspected the washwoman's garb was a disguise.

Gets Rid of Woman.

"Reaching the top of a hill and observing that he had a long stretch of grade ahead, the contractor suddenly stopped his car a little beyond the crest, saying he believed his rear tire had gone flat. His emergency brake was not working so that he would have to use the foot brake to hold the car.

"To get the woman to get out and look at the rear tire. With a little show of hostility the woman set her basket down, alighted and started toward the rear.

In an instant the driver released the brake, threw in the clutch and started the engine as hard as he could. When he reached the next town he stopped to examine the contents of the wash basket. Lifting a big blue gingham upon, he found the sole contents of the basket was one large navy revolver, loaded for business."

Hunt for Mammoth

Shifts to Oklahoma

Washington: The tail of the prehistoric American elephant has left from Florida to Oklahoma. Dr. James W. Gidley, paleontologist of the U. S. National Museum, has just returned from a party successful search for elephant bones to complete a great mammoth skeleton being assembled for exhibition purposes. Near Alva, Okla., he found portions of a mammoth elephant which is of unusual scientific interest, but of a different species from the composite skeleton which the museum experts are mounting. This particular variety of mammoth came from Florida and attained a huge size, twice as large as the ordinary elephant.

A prehistoric relative of the armadillo, probably a hitherto unknown species about as large as a cow, was among skeletons unearthed by Doctor Gidley in Oklahoma.

The thorough exploration of Oklahoma for mammals of past ages was made by Doctor Gidley. He stated the state was rich in rock formations containing evidences of the life of 500,000 years ago.

Frenchmen Draw Line at Colored Umbrellas

Paris.—Light-pink and vivid-purple hand-painted umbrellas are the elements of Paris' most popular art, but an umbrella maker who tried to sell them colored rainsticks had his trouble to his pains. No one bought, and he is having a large supply dyed a sober black.

A prehistoric prediction that bell-shaped coloring would mark male cloth for the year have been realized only in part. "Sardine blue," a rather bright effect and several more or less intensive browns and mauves found a good many buyers. But few persons indulged in the pinks, purples or other more vivid colors.

CAR OWNERS WARNED TO BE ON GUARD AGAINST FAKE SOLICITORS

Indianapolis, Ind., July 19.—Local car owners were strongly warned today to be on their guard against fake solicitors of so-called "Gyp" motorizing organizations who reap their biggest harvest of motorists' money during the touring season.

The warning was issued by officials of the Hoosier State Auto association which is broadcasting the information that the high pressure salesmen of "Gyp" clubs are usually active throughout the country at the present moment.

"We are receiving frequent complaints from people who have been 'stung,' but about all we can do in such case is to inform these people that they were apparently victims of fakers and to call attention that neither the AAA nor its member clubs collect money in advance for advertising or services of a similar character."

"On the other hand, we feel a particular responsibility in the pratter, for the reason that many of the fake organizations deliberately imitate the well-known AAA trade mark by using a combination of letters bearing a sufficient resemblance to the 'Three A' letters to take the unwary car owners off his guard."

"The 908 motor clubs in the AAA chain are making every effort to drive the 'Gyps' under cover. The operators of several of the most notorious of these organizations have been prosecuted and a considerable number of them put in jail. The Post Office Department and the Department of Justice are hot on their trail, but they 'fly-by-night' from place to place and so soon is one gang put behind bars, than another gang gets on the scene."

"If the car owners would remember that all AAA clubs, which now constitute 98 percent of the functioning motor clubs in America are invariably governed and conducted as service and civic agencies under the supervision of prominent local, professional and business leaders, they would not fall such easy victims to the lure of the fake solicitors and the fake salesmen of fake motorizing organizations. Motorist gullibility in this respect is costing thousands of dollars to the car owners of every fair-sized community in the United States, and the total collected by the 'Gyps' amounts to probably more than $25,000,000 a year."

WARNING!

THE FIGHT for business leadership is no monkey business in this day and age, as is evidenced by the latest report from commercial centers—and which has to do with the future of towns exactly the size of Mentone.

It has been learned that the big mail order houses now maintain a department, the duty of whose staff is to read weekly newspapers from all over the country and continually make a survey of the different districts to learn of mail-order selling possibilities.

And it is a fact—that immediately that department finds a town or country wherein the local merchants are not using the local paper to advertise their merchandise, that district is flooded with catalogues, because it is virgin territory and mail-order houses have learned that they can do good business there.

We pass this information along to business leaders of Mentone and assure them that all of our support is of course with them. We maintain a local advertising service which can be used to advantage, and for such service we make no extra charge.

Business goes to those who go after it.

HOW MUCH MONEY?
ELIZABETH AND ESSEX.
MAN'S A POOR FISH.
CANCER AND THE 3rd EYE.

If you have $81.16 in your pocket you have twice as much cash as the average. The Times tells us that money circulation July 1 amounted to "only" four billion eight hundred and thirty-four millions, one hundred million less than last year. $40.55 for each inhabitant.

The real wealth is credit. Four men in the United States, Rockefeller, Ford, Andrew Mellon and George F. Baker, could, with ease borrow more money than all the cash that is in circulation.

Long ago Elizabeth gave a ring, her face engraven upon a stone set in it to her lover, the Earl of Essex. No matter what he did, he would be forgiven if he returned that ring.

Accused of saying that Queen Elizabeth's mind was as crooked as her body, which was probably true, she was a great queen and a hard woman, he failed to return the ring and his head was chopped off.

The Countess of Nottingham dying confessed that she failed to deliver to the Queen the ring that Essex gave her.

Elizabeth, in despair spent her time sitting on the floor weeping, and died at the end of twenty days. That's the story.

Now the ring is sold at auction for $2,700. It has dropped in value. Elizabeth would have given £1,000, 000 for it.

A well-meaning politician suggests a law admitting children to all baseball parks for twenty-five cents per child. A better law would supply city baseball parks in which children could play baseball. That is what they need, not the right to sit on a bench, paying twenty-five cents to watch somebody else play.

If young and old men of this generation played MORE, and watched LESS, it would be better for them.

VOLUME 44.

E. F. EMMONS DIES IN MICHIGAN

E. F. Emmons passed away at the Beyers Hospital in Ypsilanti, Mich., Tuesday, July 19, after an illness of about a week.

Mr. Emmons had been a sufferer of ulcers of the stomach and had been bothered quite frequently with the trouble. On Thursday, July 7, he suffered an attack which forced him to bed at his home in South Bend, where he thought he had recovered sufficiently to resume his duties as traveling salesman on the following Tuesday. He had gotten as far as Ypsilanti, Michigan on Thursday and was there stricken again. He called a doctor, who advised him to start home immediately. He started to South Bend, but got in such a serious condition that he was taken to the Beyers Hospital in Ypsilanti, where he was cared for until the following Tuesday, when he passed away.

At the time of his death, Mr. Emmons was 53 years, 9 months, and 10 days of age. He passed much of his life here in Mentone, where he plied the blacksmith trade for many years. He then married a Momenie Illinois girl and moved to South Bend, where he secured a position as a traveling salesman.

Survivors are the wife, Mabel, son George, and two grandchildren, all in South Bend, two sisters, Mrs. Frank Warren and Mrs. William Morgan of this place, and four brothers.

Funeral services, in charge of Rev. Liddle, were held at the M. E. Church, Saturday afternoon. Burial was made in the Mentone Cemetery.

BODY OF MAN, VIEWED IN,
GARY BY WARSAW MEN,
IS NOT FRANK TUCKER'S

Kosciusko and Whitley County authorities who made a trip to Gary last Friday to view the body of a man found there, and thought to be that of Frank Tucker, who disappeared from Warsaw on the night of January 28, positively decided that the body was not Tucker's.

The body found near Gary a couple of weeks ago by small girls picking berries, and after identification could not be made by Gary authorities, it was buried in Potters Field. A description was broadcast of the body, and Warsaw authorities found it tallied pretty closely with Tucker's. So the boy was ordered not to drive Police Winebrenner, Milo Maloy, Walter Brubaker, and Robert Breadick, Tucker's former employer, and his brother, Fred Tucker went to Gary Friday when the body was exhumed.

The most important feature of the proof that the body is not that of Tucker, was the fact that the Gary boy had a mouthful of natural teeth, and that Tucker had a full set of false teeth.

Vera Martin is said to have made some statements to Sheriff Hayes which is though will soon clear up the case.

NEW STREETS WILL SOON BE OPEN TO TRAFFIC

It can be truly said that Mentone has improved herself by the paving of the streets just recently finished. Nothing helps a town like well-kept concrete streets, both in business and residential districts.

The paving here has now been finished and Franklin street is open to traffic and Broadway and Harrison streets will soon be thrown open.

The Gatz Construction Company, builders of the streets here, moved their machinery Monday to the South end of the Eller road where they still have a small stretch to pave.

MENTZER STORE
JOINS I. G. A.

Announcement has been made by Mentzer Stores that they have joined the Independent Grocers Alliance, an organization of Grocers all over the United States.

The I. G. A. Stores are not chain stores in that they are not all owned by one man or company. Each grocer owns and has separate control of his store, but does his buying through the I. G. A.

Each store must comply with certain rules of the association. Each store must carry out a color scheme of white with blue trimming, all merchandise must be tagged with price cards easily visible to the customer, and the interior of each establishment must be arranged to conform to certain standards.

The Mentzer Store has undergone a great change in the past week. The exterior of the building has been painted an attractive combination of blue and white, the windows have been re-arranged, the counter on the inside have been set in different positions, and the grocery stock is now in a position for the customer to select his own articles if he so desires.

Mr. Mentzer has announced his intention of passing the savings in prices on to his customers.

STATEMENT BY THE PROSECUTOR

In reply to an article written by a certain female reporter for Prairie Farmer who signs "P. M." and published in the Prairie Farmer in their issue of July 16th, in regard to the Walter Graff Chick-filthy case, Prosecutor Loehr wishes to make the following statement:

There has come to my attention an article in the Prairie Farmer of July 16 and reprinted in the Warsaw Union July 18, 1927, in which it is covered attack upon our Court and Judge Royce's policy of suspended prison sentence for first offenders in certain cases and of which I have approved or made recommendation.

I should like to set the public right to facts and some documents in the Walter Graff case.

A certain female reporter for the Prairie Farmer who signs "P. M." was in Warsaw a few weeks ago which was four months after the case in question. She on hearsay evidence, out of court, took it upon herself, without ever seeing the defendant, to decide the case in her own mind and in this her self constituted court decided that Judge Royce and I had made a big mistake the disposition of the Graff case and she demanded and insisted that Graff's suspended sentence be revoked and that he be sent to prison at once so that J. L. Hibschman, L. N. Kitson, W. A. Winebrenner and Frank McKrell could collect the reward which her paper offers for the apprehension of chicken thieves if sent to prison. But this man having received a suspended sentence, not going to prison, had cut them out of the case record.

The investigation and reports on Graff stated that he has kept his word to date and had gone straight, was abiding, and working to support his wife and three kiddies.

The purpose of the law is not to torture people but to help them to go right and to reform. To now send him to prison when he is doing his best, is going straight and keeping

BACKHAND NOTE, MEANT FOR FORMER MENTONE MAN,

IS SENT TO WRONG HOUSE.

"If you don't grow a moustache and join our gang of bootleggers, we are going to seize you," said a black hand note which Mrs. Thomas McElvie, 409 N. Jefferson St. Rochester, found at her feet, after it had been buried there by some person lying in the hedge at the side of the yard.

The incident happened Thursday evening while Mrs. McElvie and her husband were seated on their porch about ten o'clock. The note, tied in a small paper sack which was attached to a stick, was thrown by two men lying in a hedge at the side of the McElvie home.

Steve Kinsey, who operated the Armour creamery here for several years, is a neighbor of the McElvies. He arose when he heard the commotion and his men in looking for the two provokers.

Kinsey told the sheriff that the note was probably meant for him and his wife, the McElvies, and the men had made a mistake in the location of the houses, Kinsey said that while he was living in Mentone he purchased two trucks, which he leased to people here after his transfer to Rochester, and that the trucks were now being used for the transportation of booze, from Detroit to South Bend.

When one of the runners was recently arrested, Kinsey was forced to make out an affidavit that he did not know his truck were being used for that purpose, and the bootleggers knowing Kinsey will be the State's star witness against them, have tried in every manner to intimidate him. He has received four letters, and in one instance an attempt was made to kidnap his wife.

Kinsey has been promised protection by the officers and given permission to carry a revolver for self-protection.

THEATRE IS AGAIN OPENED

The local theatre again underwent a change of hands, Friday, when an agent dealing for Grace Gorham of Laketon, Indiana, purchased the house of Minor Mellesher.

The local show-house has undergone a period of "ups and downs." Men who have tried to run it in the past asserted that the movie crowds here were not large enough to warrant the operation of a picture house and that no money could be made.

But Mrs. Gorham is trying an altogether new method of operation for the theatre. Each of the shows displayed will be one of the latest and most up-to-date productions. The gentleman who made the deal for the house, Sunday made a trip to Indianapolis, where he purchased a number of good films which will be shown here in the near future.

The name of the "Liberty Theatre" has been retained and the show will be known by that name from now on.

The first show will be given tomorrow night, Thursday July 26. LaPlante, a very popular star will be featured in a play called " Beware of Widows."

FORD IS CALLING

MEN BACK TO WORK

The Ford Motor Company is calling old employees and hiring new men at the rate of about 5,000 weekly. It was revealed by the Detroit Employers Association, which conducts a weekly labor barograph.

Several recent indications have been that Ford plans to be in full stride by September 1, on the new car. Following the statement of the Detroit street railways that 125 new cars had been ordered for delivery by that date, principally to take care of the increased traffic at the main Ford plant in Fordson, a western suburb.

Detroit retail merchants announced that their Saturday business had been the greatest of any day in the past several months.

DINNER PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mentzer entertained Mrs. Lizzie Grove, Miss Margaret Mentzer, Mr. and Mrs. C. Baumgartner and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wistman and family at dinner, Thursday evening.

CHILD STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

While on her way to Sunday school with her brothers and sisters Sunday morning, little Mary Ellen Gray, age 5, was struck and knocked to the ground by a Ford Touring car driven by "Bus" Oscar Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Smith.

The little victim is the daughter of Mrs. Richard Gray, and was on her way to attend Sunday School, when she darted across the street in front of the Jones Grocery, while the Smith car was coming from the east. The youthful driver of the car was said to have applied his brakes but too late to avoid striking the child, and the machine passed clear over her.

The driver of the car, only 14 years of age, did not stop after the accident, it is said, but turned down an alley and returned home, where he reported to his parents. The boy is legally under age to operate an automobile.

The Gray child, though not seriously injured, suffered several ugly bruises and bumps. She sustained a bad bump on the back of the head, and ugly bruises on one leg and several other bumps.

A report Tuesday morning, though not officially confirmed, had it that the boy was ordered not to drive again till of legal age.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mr. Hoover Offers Flood Relief and Control Plan to President.

BY EDWARD W. PICKARD

FLOOD relief and control work by congress, covering a period of ten years, estimated at $100,000,000, is recommended by Secretary of Commerce Hoover in the comprehensive report on the Mississippi valley disaster of this year which he laid before President Coolidge at the summer White House. His control project, besides providing for drainage and improving the levee system, embraces a plan for completion of the navigation program of the Mississippi and its main tributaries which he says can be carried out at an additional cost of fifteen to twenty millions a year.

Mr. Hoover declared that the flood control project must embrace the following principles:

1. Higher and consequently wider levees and the extension of federal responsibility for levees in some of the tributaries.

2. A safety valve upon the levee system by the provision of a spillway or by-pass to the gulf to protect New Orleans and southern Louisiana—most notably the Atchafalaya river for this purpose.

3. For further safety measures the engineers are examining the possible extension of the by-pass to the northward from the Atchafalaya toward the Gulf of Mexico, the selection of emergency flood basins, and the possibility of store in the tributaries.

Concerning the relief work Mr. Hoover said in part:

"The financial situation on relief is that we can complete all these programs and still have funds available for animals, house construction, administration. By the first of November we estimate we shall have spent $12,400,000 Red Cross funds, $7,000,000 equipment and supplies from the Red Cross, $1,000,000 from railway transportation and received $1,000,000 for county health clinics. We should have left $3,000,000 from the $16,500,000 subscribed to the Red Cross with which to face continued necessities after November 1. It is impossible to determine what the necessities will be after that date."

ANOTHER caller on the President was Senator Snoot, chairman of the senate finance committee, who presented his plan for tax reduction. This program is based on tax cut of $300,000,000 and includes the following items:

Reduction of the corporation tax from 13% to 12 per cent, lopping off $150,000,000 annual revenue.

Exemption of tax on club and social dues, cutting the nation's income $37,000,000 yearly.

Reduction of tax on passenger automobiles from 3 per cent to 1½ per cent, costing $50,000,000.

Graduated scale reduction on incomes between $15,000, and $60,000.

MICHAEL, a golden-haired child not yet six years old, is now king of Rumania, for the picturesque King Ferdinand succumbed on July 20 to the malady that made his death, tumultuous and much mourned. The new monarch, reached his eighteenth year the country will be ruled by a regency comprised of his uncle, Prince Nicholas, Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian orthodox church, and Judge Budugan the supreme court.

In announcing the death of Ferdinand the government issued an official statement saying it will not waver from the decision of the crown council of January 4, 1923, at which Prince Nicholas was designated and Prince Michael, his son, proclaimed crown prince, and that the government will support the regency, and if necessary, resort to arms to prevent the reinstatement of Carol."

The Rumanian army corps, stationed in Bucharest, issued a statement informing the country that the state of siege continues, and warning newspaper men that if they spread false alarms they will be liable to court-martial.

Prince Carol, in his home of exile in Neally, near Paris, received word of his father's demise and at once secluded himself, sending word to the press that he expected to be recalled to Rumania and calling himself "king."

Princess Maria wrote as he died in the arms of Queen Marie, "I am feeling tired."

His body lay in state in Cotroceni palace outside Bucharest until Saturday, when the casket was placed in the family vaults at the castle of Peles.

Primer Britain took strong measures to prevent any uprising, public buildings and strategic points being occupied by troops and meetings being forbidden. Queen Marie called for days of condolence from all over the world, including one from President and Mrs. Coolidge, and the British and Belgian courts went into mourning.

TAKING advantage of a strike of protest ordered by Vienna Socialists against the acquisition of some Fascist ships, the communists in Austria then tried to get control of the city, looting public buildings and burning the palace of Justus, and placing the police under arrest. The local contingents of troops were dislodged to fire on the crowds, so the Seipel government called in troops from the provincial garrisons. These, with the help of the Social Democrats, gained control of the situation, and the civil war which the communists were trying to stir up was averted.

The strike had stopped all transportation, and threats were received from Italy that if Italian troops were sent to Austria, the German troops would be sent into the Austrian Tyrol, occupying the rail road line up to the German border. The government of Austria threatened to take radical steps to end the strike, and the communists in the anti-socialist peasantry and the loyal Heimwehr or home guard gave Premier Seipel full support. So the labor unions and Socialists of Vienna distinguished flying cross.

Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger, who flew to Holland had a triumphant return to the United States.

On the return of the flyers to Washington, where Secretary of State Kellogg and other government officials greeted them warmly. They, too, will receive the distinguished flying cross when President Coolidge returns to the capital.

Coleton Lindbergh picked up his "spirit of St. Louis" at Mitchel field, New York, and started on a tour of the country to take the people of the advance of aviation and the needs of aviators and their airports. His first stop was at Hartford Conn., where he spoke at the Hartford club.

Capt. F. T. Courtney, British aviator, was all ready for his attempted flight from England to America, with stop in Ireland, but was delayed by adverse weather. He was to carry a crew of two men and intended to fly from the Irish town of Newfoundland.

DOWN in Nicaragua one rebel leader, General Sandino, refused to submit to the peace terms imposed by the United States, and last week led his small detachment of 500 in attacking the naval detachment at Ocosta. Capt. G. D. Hatfield was in command and his little force fought back desperately. Marine scouts planes carried word of the battle to the naval detachment and a column of troops commanded by Maj. Rod E. Rowell flew to the rescue through a severe tropical storm. With bombs and machine guns they speedily routed the rebels. The rebels lost about 300 men killed. The rebels lost only one man. Sandino's detachment fled to the mountains and a column of troops was sent out with orders to get him.

Delegated to the fifth congress of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, in Mexico City, where he denounced this killing of Nicaraguan citizens, and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, who presided at the opening of the congress, sharply denounced American intervention in the domestic affairs of Latin American countries and wrote a letter of protest to Secretary of State Kellogg. In reply Mr. Kellogg warmly defended the action of the marines, and set forth clearly the conditions in Nicaragua which had caused the rebellion. General Sandino, who had neither the support nor the approval of any of the leaders of the political parties in Nicaragua, who presided at the opening of the congress, sharply denounced American intervention in the domestic affairs of Latin American countries.

Mr. Aaron Sapiro has dismissed his million-dollar suit against Henry Ford, accepting the automobile manufacturer's apology and a "substantial sum" of money.

Standard Oil Company of New Jersey agreed it will have no business relations with the Soviet government of Russia so long as that government declines to recognize private property rights.

Hankow and Hanyang, China, were occupied by Gen. Ho Chien, a Conservative general, and his wife, Mme. Sun Yat-sen, widow of China's first President, retired from political life.

manding the marines in Nicaragua has recommended that the distinguished service medal be awarded to the little garrison at Ocosta from great loss of life and almost certain destruction.

GREAT BRITAIN and Japan have reached some sort of accord on the cruiser question, the conference at Geneva and the plan was presented to the Americans, who did not seem especially pleased with it. Then the British government called Vice-Chairman W. C. Bridgeman to London for consultation on the problem, and at once there were reports that the conference was on the verge of a breakdown. This was strongly denied in London, where a foreign office spokesman asserted that the hope for an agreement was stronger than at any time since the conference began. The Japanese delegates in Geneva also were optimistic, predicting that an agreement would be reached by the middle of August. The British, before leaving Geneva had agreed to release their ships for cruisers and destroyers from Nov. 80,000 tons to 500,000 tons, as insisted upon by the Japanese, and hoped this would induce the Americans to agree to buy 10-inch guns on all 100-ton cruisers; but Mr. Gibson had not surrendered this point.

TAKING advantage of a strike of protest ordered by Vienna Socialists against the acquisition of some Fascist ships, the communists in Austria then tried to get control of the city, looting public buildings and burning the palace of Justus, and placing the police under arrest. The local contingents of troops were dislodged to fire on the crowds, so the Seipel government called in troops from the provincial garrisons. These, with the help of the Social Democrats, gained control of the situation, and the civil war which the communists were trying to stir up was averted.

FIVE transatlantic flyers—Ryder, Noville, Acosta, Balchen and Chamberlain—returned to the United States by steamship after spending 10 days in the Atlantic ocean. They were given a hero's welcome at New York's special noisy reception with parades, parades, banquets and musical entertainments.

The two first were awarded the navy's distinguished flying cross. Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger, who flew to Holland had a triumphant return to the United States.

Capt. F. T. Courtney, British aviator, was all ready for his attempted flight from England to America, with stop in Ireland, but was delayed by adverse weather. He was to carry a crew of two men and intended to fly from the Irish town of Newfoundland.

JACK Dempsey, former heavy weight champion, "Game Buck," in the fight with Jack Sharkey in New York and won the right to challenge Gene Tunney for the title. He knocked out the Boston lad in the seventh round with a hard left hook to the jaw. The battle will live long and arouse the enthusiasm of 83,000 persons who were present. Sharkey claimed that he was fouled in the final round, but this was denied by Dempsey and by Referee O'Sullivan.

TOWA's Lowden for President announced that more than 100,000 persons in that state have signed the petition asking Frank O. Lowden to seek the Republican Presidential nomination and placing him in the running. Senator Hammill and more than 90 percent of the employees in the Iowa state capitol building. Action of the governor in signing the petition nullified the hopes of his friends that Mr. Hammill would like to leave. Lowden has become a leader in the farm relief fight, might become a vice presidential candidate next year on a Coolidge ticket.

PROPER COSTUMING FOR SPORTS AND DAYS WHEN THE SKY LEAKS

SYOU are "not going to buy any more clothes until fall?" One look at the picture of this white satin sports frock and how quickly that resolve is apt to weaken!

It simply is not within the power of inclination of modern woman to resist anything so fascinating as this adorable sports-wear model. Anyway what's the small matter of a few denier which are now so popular? "Prepare for a rainy day"—just as the British fashion is doing! For good or ill, and the array of smart waterproof apparel which appears as if by magic, at the coming of every summer shower. The vivid notes of color which these gay ensembles of coat and hat and umbrella add to the scene act as an antidote to the gloom yards of white satin, plus a few hours of sewing—prepared to the joy and satisfaction of owning such a tricky two-piece as this!

Perhaps you do not feel the urge to do your own sewing or to hire a seamstress these midsummer days. That need not stand in the way of getting a white sportswear ensemble in the illustration, or similar, for the sports-wear departments everywhere are making a specialty of white satin apparel, now that there is such a call for it.

The venue for white satin sports wear fits in so snugly with the tide of summer style designs for all the fashionable world is wearing white these days.

Without its quota of stylish rainy-day apparel and what stunning equipment the mode is turning out to protect from the rain. One of the very latest summer items is the rainbow cape, the long medallion circular silhouettes of gossamer webbing and in dainty coloring which looks as if it had caught the tones and tints of the rainbow on its blue-of-the-sky background.

The striking rain ensemble in the picture is made of a combination plaid with decorative crepe as chin-trim, very new and distinctive brought out this season, which is proving popular.

It is fashionable to wear a hat to match the coat. The model which tops the coat in this illustration has a rippled hem which is intended to add a touch of color beauty to even the most dismal rainy day scenes.

As to popular white fabrics for the frock—white wash satin—there's nothing finer for sports wear unless it be tubular white georgette in heavy weight. For the evening wear when choice white crepe satin, or filmy white chiffon.

POULTRY

FIND WORMS IN POULTRY FLOCK

Three types of worms are found in considerable number in poultry. They are not fatal to poultry unless they occur in large numbers. However, it is important to control them, as badly infested birds are more likely to contract other diseases because worms lower resistance.

From experiment stations where large numbers of diseased birds are examined, it is reported that a big percentage of the poultry sent to them show worms in their intestines. The common worms are the large roundworms, small roundworms and tape-worms. In most sections the large roundworms cause the biggest losses.

The large roundworm is found in the large intestine. It is white or yellowish white. It is round or cylindrical and from two to four inches long. The female of this species is much larger than the male and is pointed at both ends. The male has a fan-like expansion at the rear end.

In mature poultry, light infections do not cause any noticeable symptoms, but heavily infested birds will show marked evidences of disease. In younger chicks lighter infections may cause diarrhea, inactivity and death. The symptoms of the worms are not very characteristic, as the same symptoms may be caused by other diseases of the intestinal tract. There may be a loss of appetite, an enlarged appearance, dullness, emaciation and loss of color in the feathers and comb. There is sometimes a numminess or even a partial paralysis. Most advanced cases often show a complete loss of control of both wings and legs. There may or may not be diarrhea.

One of the most successful and practical treatments for roundworms (large and small) is the use of tobacco dust. The California experiment station found that tobacco dust containing 10 to 2 per cent nicotine applied to the ground or 2 per cent of the dry mash by weight, and fed continuously from one to four weeks, removes practically all of the large roundworms and about three-fourths of the small roundworms. This treatment usually gives a better result than prepared tobacco dust with the dry mash in the proportion of one pound of the tobacco dust to 50 pounds of dry mash. This medicated mash is fed from three to four weeks.

Poor Economy to Crowd Pullets in a Henhouse

Counting pullets before they are housed this fall is not nearly as foolish as counting chickens before they are hatched, practical poultrymen believe. After counting the pullets, the good poultrymen should measure his brooder pens and calculate the number of pullets required to add a touch of color beauty to even the most dismal rainy day scenes.

Attractive three-piece sets for rainy weather include a coat and hat plus an umbrella. These are not necessarily 4 square feet per hen. Less than this area of floor space per hen and the heavier breeds, including Reds, Rocks, Orpingtons, and Wyandottes, should have 4 square feet per hen. Less than this area of floor space will not only cut down the production of the flock, but it will increase the chances for disease infection.

If the poultry raiser has more pullets than space and has no chance to build more good housing facilities, he had best sell his pullets to about the right number and let them grow.

The light breeds should have 3 square feet of floor space per hen and the heavier breeds, including Reds, Rocks, Orpingtons, and Wyandottes, should have 4 square feet per hen. Less than this area of floor space will not only cut down the production of the flock, but it will increase the chances for disease infection.

"Pip" Not a Disease

What is known as "pip" is really inflammation of the mouth. It is a symptom which occurs in cases of cold or fever, when the nostrils are obstructed and the fowl breathes through its mouth. In that case the mouth and tongue become hard and dry, and a bony tip may form on the tongue. Generally, moistening the nose with a mixture of equal parts of glycerine and water is about all the treatment needed. Do not attempt to remove by force.

Mash Chick Rat

An all-mash ration for chicks is advised by the specialists. It is the Wissconsin all-mash ration and consists of 50 pounds ground yellow corn, 2 pounds whole oats, 5 pounds pearl grits, 5 pounds raw soybeans, 1 pound of salt and skim milk in place of water. The milk should be used in place of water during the first six weeks. At the end of this time mill meal gradually replaced by adding 15 or 20 pounds of meat scrap to the mash mixture.

Discard Homemade Crate

There is little gained in trying to use homemade crates made of rough heavy material. All that you save by not purchasing a galvanized wire crab with a strong bottom is lost in the increased expense. With any kind of wire in building, however, it is worth while patching the commercial crates with heavy wire sides and tops should be good for about a hundred trips. Such crates show up the birds to good advantage and are easy to open and close.

The Sandman Story

Martha Martin

HER BIRD VISITOR

A LITTLE girl named Jerry, said the sandman, "was ill in a hospital. Oh, she had felt so sick and had so writhed a time, but now she was feeling better and she was sitting up in bed every day for several hours."

"Sandman sat up in a chair for a half an hour now every day, and one day while she was sitting up in her chair, having her supper, a little canary bird flew in the window. Jerry was afraid the little bird would be very much frightened, so she spoke to him in a low voice.

"I don't know your name, so I shall call you Dicky Bird," she said. The little canary had perched upon the back of a chair, and now that he had been spoken to, he turned and looked at Jerry and, putting his head on one side, chirped a little greeting to her.

"Won't You Have Some Supper?" Asked Jerry.

"Oh, you are little bird, how pretty you are," said Jerry. Again the little bird chirped as though to say that she was very glad she was pleased with his manners.

"You must have been a pet bird and I suppose you flew out of an open window and then lost your way," Jerry continued.

"The little bird chirped again as though to agree.

"I wonder if you're hungry," Jerry said.

Then he sang a bit of a song as though to say he would sing and so perhaps earn a nice supper.

"Jerry put some bread crumbs on a saucer and put the saucer a little distance away from her on a bureau.

Soon the little bird flew over to the bureau. It had been watching Jerry very closely.

"Won't you have some supper?" asked Jerry.

"And the little bird, as though in answer to her question, tried to get the bread crumbs. He seemed to know that Jerry decided she would put some crumbs on her hand and hold her hand out to see if he would come and eat from her hand. And sure enough, he did. He did not seem to be frightened at all. Jerry acted as though it was not at all unusual for him to be fed.

"Then Jerry took a leaf of nice, crisp lettuce which was on her tray and gave it to the bird before she put the bread crumbs in the saucer. After the bird had eaten the lettuce, she knew that salt and pepper and vinegar and oil would not be good for the bird. And the bird ate the pieces of lettuce from her fingers and when he had finished he perched himself upon Jerry's first finger, holding on with his little talons.

"Then he gave a peck at Jerry's finger as though to say, 'I could eat a little more, young lady.'

"And Jerry took the hint.

"She gave him some more lettuce and salt and then she gave him a few tiny crumbs of bacon too. Next, Jerry put some water in a little saucer and not only did the bird drink some water, but he took a little shower, too.

"Then Jerry dug his fingernails into the saucer and said, 'Of course she said, 'I don't used to bathe in our drinking saucer, but maybe you need a bath and yet you have seemed to eat your supper.'

"And anyway, I think your bird manners are excellent. You haven't been good, and yet you have seemed to eat your supper.'

"Jerry finished her supper and pretty soon a maid came in to take her tray. "Oh, I've a little visitor," cried Jerry, "and I feel so much better already. You can't imagine how she cheered me up. Oh, ever so much."

"Yes, I can," the nurse said, "for you look so much better already—better than you did an hour ago, in fact."

"The bird did not seem frightened by the nurse, although he flew back to the chair where he had first perched himself.

"Then he began to sing. Such a magnificent song as he did sing! Oh, it was a wonderful song, and how Jerry did enjoy it.

"Well, the bird became a hospital pet. He had a cage given to him, but when the windows were closed, the doors were closed, for if he flew out of a window again he might not be so lucky in finding so pleasant a home as the hospital. It was filled with such nice children and Jerry said he often thought that she was happy and giving happiness to a hospital filled with children."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

A LOVE POTION

THERE are so many love potions warranted to work that it is amazing that there are not more people so busy. Here is one, said Miss Bergen in her "Animal and Plant Lore," issued by the American Folklore Society, to be popular. Take a number of red rose leaves and forsythia blossoms, and add a few drops of water for the sixteenth part of an hour. If three drops of the resulting liqueur are put into anything the perfume whose affections you desire to capture is to drink, the desired result is assured.

This charm ought to work for there is historic warrant for the virtue of the ingredients in such cases. Rose leaves from most ancient times have been considered to possess mystic virtue in the cure of love and were frequently used with other substances on Midsummer Eve to be used in love potions which would indicate that the rose was one of the sun plants supposed to receive its greatest strength at the time of the summer solstice. —Take a rose bud and a portion of the sun's vitality. The legends regarding the rose are almost numberless. Its use in love potions is undoubtedly a relic of sun worship.

To the forget-me-nots its very name denotes remembrance which have from before the dawn of man been attributed to it. Many are the legends as to how the flower became connected with love matters. Of these the Persian story is the best. A certain being got into trouble by loving a dangerous earthworm and was allowed to return to Eden until the girl he loved had planted the flower now called forget-me-not in every corner of the earth.

Do You Know
...That:...?

"LET her go daughter" is an expression which was at one time heard all over our country. Judge Beaver had a trotting mare which was driven by one Gallagher. On a certain occasion the judge entered the stable at noon to find some sports thought that for once they would catch the judge and so entered a noted fast trotter. At the end of the first half the two trotters were just about even, neck to neck. Then the excited judge said, "Let her go, Gallagher, and Gallagher, catching the word, let loose the lines when the mare picked up her feet and walked away from her opponent most beautifully and came in the pole more than dozen lengths ahead.

Lesson for July 31

DAVID AND JONATHAN

LESSON TEXT—Samuel 18:1-4; 13:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—There is a friend that is closer than a brother.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Good Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David and Jonathan.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing the Right Kind of Friends.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Obligations of Friendship.

The friendship of David and Jonathan has become immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interests. Jonathan was the crown prince of Israel, destined to inherit the throne, while David was his natural personal rights to the one he knew God had chosen.

1. Friendship Established Between David and Jonathan (1 Sam. 18:1-4).

Following the interview of Saul and David after the victory over Goliath, Jonathan's soul was knit with that of David. He loved him as his own soul.

While there was mutual love, this pleased Saul, who was jealous of David. In Jonathan there had been no thought of the throne to which he had been born.

2. Jonathan Defended David Against Saul's Frenzy (1 Sam. 19:1-7).

David went into the battle with Goliath out of zeal for God and true religion—not for personal glory, but turned out always as though he had made God first, God honored him.

Upon his return, however, Saul's victory over the Philistines, according to custom, was met by a triumphal custom when he was met by a triumphal chorus of women from all the cities of Israel chanting praises to him for his victory over their enemy.

They assailed more press and honor to David than to Saul. This caused Saul to seem to sing as answering chants.

The one sang, "Saul has slain his thousands," the other answered, "and David his ten thousands." To hear the praise of a shepherd boy surpassing his own was too much for Saul. He was so angry that he struck Jonathan, who had been slumbering in his heart and moved him twice to attempt to kill David. This wickedness was in his heart as a bitter feeling, but this occasion turned him into a fine, manly and a burning passion of life.

In Saul's third attempt to kill David, Jonathan defended him before his father and exonerated him from the oath that David should not be slain. He thus exposed himself to the anger of his infuriated father for David's sake.

3. Jonathan Revealed David Saul's Murderous Intent (1 Sam. 20:30-40).

The beginning of the new moon was celebrated by sacrifices and feasting at which all the members of the family were expected to be present (v. 5). Saul's wife, for behold, also was that he might go hunting to attend yearly sacrifice of the entire family.

The annual feast was more important than the monthly feast. Matters were now so serious that Jonathan and David renewed the covenant between themselves. In this covenant the terms were broadened beyond the life of Jonathan (v. 4, 15). Saul's anger was now so fierce that for Jonathan to be found in David's company was most dangerous, so he cleverly planned a trap by which he could be known to David. Saul's attitude and position.

We prove our friendship by warning those who are exposed to danger. David's heart responded by pledging fidelity to Jonathan's seed forever. This pledge was faithfully carried out by David. See Sam. 9:1-8. Concerning real friendship observe:

1. It should be made while both parties are young, when the hearts are capable of being knit together.

2. Real friends are few. We should be careful in the formation of friendships, for there are many who are not worthy of our confidence.

3. Real friendship can only be with God-fearing people. Both David and Jonathan recognized their obligation to the Lord.

Satan on Watch

Prayer is the strategic point which Satan watches. If we can succeed in causing him to miss his mark, he has won; for where communion between God and His people is broken, the true source of life and power is cut off.

ENGLAND'S STORY REVEALED IN INNS

Faded Signs Tell Past of Many Villages.

Birmingham, England.—English villages in agricultural sections are often more than 1,000 years old, and bits of their history are often written in quaint signs which have survived for many centuries.

Next to the church, the inn and smithy were usually the oldest buildings in the villages which have not been engulfed by industries. Before the days of railways and motors the smithy was the center to which everyone had to go both in peace and in war.

The signs are particularly useful in tracing the history of villages, as they often show the seals or insignia of lords under whose protection the village thrived in past ages, and frequently indicate the past character of the people.

But the purely fanciful signs are even more interesting than those which have historical background. One sign, which used to be very common on old English inns, was the "Five Alms." The sign represents the knight, the geese, the alms, the bier, "who prays for all"; the lawyer, "who pleads for all"; the soldier, "who fights for all"; and the laborer, "who works for all."

Although many individuals in direct line of descent link the present villages with their ancestors before the Norman conquest, the villagers of today often know little about the history of their communities, and scarcely of village records often yield little information about the early struggles of the tiny communities which are made up of low brown cottages screened by trees and vines.

Says He Has Found

Lost City of Ophir

London.—After a search lasting 20 years, Captain C. Crawford, commander of the British Royal Engineers, has discovered the lost lands of Ophir, whence the queen of Sheba brought to Solomon her magnificent gift of 33 tons of incense, spices, gold, jewels, and pearls, which he could not value. Lecturing to the United Services Institute recently, Commander Crawford said he found the city of Ophir exactly where it ought to be—in Arabia, about 400 miles east of Aden.

The city, with its ruined temple of God, was built on a sandy plateau, which has been visited by many seamen and political agents, but they have never identified it. The commander suggested that excavations on the site would be richly repaid, and said that the land, which was mineral wealth, should be developed.

"The city is ideally situated," he said. "It has a harbor to the north and has a river which gives what space for a port. But a thin ribbon of coral sand is drawn across the harbor, so that the harbor is cut off and that strengthens the life of Ophir. There is great wealth in Ophir still."

"Palestine now is the Palestine of King Saul. It has in one power to develop the land to the prosperity of Solomon. There are gold mines and precious stones in the ground, a veritable Transvaal there."

French Alchemist Again Reports Making Gold

Paris.—After a long absence, Jean-Pierre Cugnot of Paris, again assure he is hot on the trail of the famed but unfound philosopher's stone, with which the ancients believed heavy metals could be transmuted into gold.

This alchemist asserts his process of producing gold synthetically now is complete and practicable.

Out of six grains of silver, two of sulphur of antimony, one of orpiment and one of tin, he affirms, he has produced ten milligrams of gold.

He melts the metals, he says, heating them to 1,100 degrees Centigrade, and a complicated process ends in precipitating the gold.

The addition of tin, he says, has improved his earlier process. He claims that besides the gold, almost all the original quantity of silver is recovered.

Twin Runaways

New York.—The Runaway twins of Brooklyn, aged five, have run away from home 11 times now. Each time a policeman has found them, their faces as like as their sailor suits, asleep.

Briton Makes Bungo Low of Air Liner Cabin

London.—Everyone knows that most English houses of antiquity at all times have had a small collection of spoons, but it is believed that no house on these islands is quite as "shady" as the summer home of Capt. G. H. Leverton, in Wellington, Surrey.

Through 4,000 of the shades of 10,000 travelers who have flown over the city of London in the Vimy-Roller Royce air liner of the Imperial Airways after the British plane had landed at Hendon flying from London to Paris, Captain Leverton bought it and turned the roomy cabin into a bungalow.

FAKE AUTO ASSOCIATIONS

Fake oil stock salesmen are not the only frauds abroad. There are the representatives of fake automobile associations as well. They promise impossible things to the automobile owner to get the first fee and that is the last the new joiner ever hears of the organization or its services.

There are 22,011, 393 automobile owners in the United States, according to latest calculations, and they provide a fertile field for a swindler.

All motorists should be alert to this type of faker because he is abroad, and it is estimated that he swindled the gullible auto owners out of $25,000,000 last year.

If a motor club is identified with the American Automobile Association, known as the "Three A," the motorist may be assured that it is a reliable organization and will live up to its promises. There are 968 motor clubs in the chain and all are banded together for the service of the motorist.

The swindlers are most active during the vacation season. Then they promise accommodations for motorists in every hamlet. There is no limit to the special services they provide, all for the small fee. But the motorist is sadly disappointed when he puts some of the promises to the test. Then the high-powered salesman has departed and there is no recourse.

Automobile owners should remem-

STARS TIRE OF BEING IN ONE PLACE

(By D. J. Walsh.)

MARTHA BURNS clamped down the last jar cover and placed it on the shelf with others on the kitchen table. Four quarts of canned blackberries constituted her whole afternoon's work. It was a hot afternoon, too, and small kitchen smelled of sweet fruit and red-leafed stems. She dropped down upon the edge of the chair a moment before mopping the floor.

She was tired from the top of her gray head to the soles of her small shabby feet. But it was less bodily fatigue she felt than that soul heaviness with which she daily grew more pensive. The sight of the fruit visible through the glass containers sickened her. She felt that she would never live to eat these blackberries after all her efforts to pick and preserve them. Not that it mattered. She was tired enough to rest—e'en to sleep. The old man with whom she had told Henry the day before:

Everything had changed with Henry's going. Almost before she had regained her balance George had gone, had married Mildred Pease, a nice girl, although she had never heard much of the Pease as yet personally. There nothing would do but George must buy the place. She had been astonished at his offer. "But it will be yours, sometime," she had said gently. "But I want it now." George had replied. "Well, take it now." She had returned home. The pen had been drawn and signed. With a smile of the pen she had given away her home before she was through with it.

What was it old Mrs. Hoyt had said—"Your son's your son till he gets a wife"? She had laughed at it. George was George. If she had failed it was altogether her fault. George wasn't like Henry in any particular. He was like—he was like her own brother Jim, who had given them all so much trouble. Strange that he should have been like Jim instead of Henry. She had never been able to account for it.

As soon as she signed that paper she ceased to be mistress in her old home. But she had expected that. Mildred was younger, with newer, brighter ways. She had not, however, expected what had actually happened—that gradually her position should be shifted until she was doing most of the work without either praise or pay.

Her room, that little north chamber where George had been born, the porch with the crimson ramblers which Henry had planted, they were worth any price, even so big a price as she was asking. She had given up the love that she had cherished so long. Her home! But it was also Mildred's home. Mildred had had the rooms repapered, had had a partition taken out, a window changed here, a door there. Every alteration had paid her money. She had, when she had at last been obliged to consult him, told him bluntly that her heart wasn't going to stand much more wear and tear, even if her body held out, with the work she was doing.

It was growing dark in the kitchen. She arose and got mop and mop from the closet and began to clean the floor. Mildred was very particular about her linoleum, although she seldom cleaned it herself. Tired as she was, Martha slighted no crevice or corner. The varnish shone when she had finished. Said for the group of girls on the table there was no sign of her having toiled there the whole afternoon.

She had only her own supper to get, for George and Mildred had taken advantage of a holiday to go for a trip in their new car. Yet somehow she did not care for food. Even tea did not satisfy her. What she really needed was to go out and sit on the porch and rest.

She had to go upstairs for her shawl. Mildred did not like to have things lying around and Martha's few belongings had been gathered together in the north chamber. After she got the shawl she went out again to go downstairs again. Her bath came heavily and she needed air, so she sat down on the floor beside the wide-open window and leaning her head against the casing looked out upon the night world.

Such a scene flashed across her vision—a brilliant, moving light. She arose to her knees and leaned far out to see. Ah! There was another! A shooting star—strange, wonderful phenomena! What sent them forth awhirl? She had always wondered about them. "Maybe they get tired of getting stuck in one place," Henry had said. And when he had said it, she put his arms around her and kissed her merry mouth, in the same breath asking her to have him. Three weeks later they were married.

Another shooting star! Why, the sky was alive with them. Had they all got tired of being stuck in one place for themselves? And would the new places be any better than the old? One thing was sure—nobody ever heard of a shooting star going home.

How would it seem to go journeying through space with the speed of the wind—or, indeed, journeys unknown where? She had never been away from home, that is, to go any distance, but she had often thought she would. She and Henry had talked about going south, where it was warmer. Mary had wanted them to stay with Mary and Henry's sister—her twin sister, who lived in the South. When Henry died she had come all the way North to the funeral. Mary had wanted Martha to go home and help her. After her children had grown up, she had moved and she was left alone. She had opened a little shop in the front room of her home. Well, she was sensible; but, of course, being like Henry, Mary wouldn't be a bit like Martha.

Shooting stars! Shooting stars! She was home again, repeating: "Started out to find something new."

There was another light below, a bold streak of illumination which showed the blades of grass as a car swept into the drive. Above the motor the stars heard Mildred's high voice: "What's the idea? There isn't a light in the house!" Mildred and George back! She sprang up and hurried downstairs.

Mildred was at the door, slender, bobbed hair above her flushed sharp face.

"We had supper at New Inn. How do you get them sweet enough? Say! What did you do with the berries?" She was stopping to gather a handful of letters from the floor before the slot in the front door, through which the postman had thrust them. She ran through them hastily. "One for you, mother." She handed a letter to Martha.

From Mary! She was always so grateful for those infrequent pleasant letters. Mary wrote when she could, for she was busy. The first words she saw were: "When are you coming to see me?" She got no further. With bright eyes she looked from the letter to the girl.

"Mary! Henry's sister, Mrs. Combs, wants me to come. I guess I will go. I guess I'll take the train she took when she went back. I am small, I will be all right. I am small, I will catch up with the seat. Will—will you mind taking me along?"

Then before they could answer, in their astonishment and half dismay, she ran upstairs. She did not hesitate. She had money enough to buy her own ticket. Who wanted her? Mary who was so like Henry. It wasn't as if George and Mildred needed her. They would be happier without her.

A light darted across the dark area of sky outside her window. Another shooting star!

She must go now. For if she waited until morning when there were no stars she might not have the courage to start out to find something new.

Newspaper Has Largely Taken Place of Books

An American author has discovered the answer to the much-debated question: "Doesn't it get people away from books?" He says it is because they don't know where to put them. When it was unusual to live in spacious houses, there were libraries. Now so many have to live in tiny flats, where they really have no room for more than a small bookcase.

This is quite true of the big cities in America. But it is more or less true in England. But it does not apply to suburbs in either country. I fancy the objection of wives and servants to keep large quantities of books lies more in the desire to do it. But there is another and a stronger reason than either of them for the decline, not only of book buying alone, but of book reading. The newspaper provides nowadays so much that used to be found only in books. Essays, travel sketches, personal, fiction, verse, biography, all the parts of journalism in addition to news. An enormous number are content with this. They do not need books.—London Chronicle.

Study Soils' "Behavior"

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in co-operation with the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, is conducting scientific soil studies with the object of bringing about improvements in the design and construction of highways. Samples of soils from all parts of the country are now being collected. One of the most important studies is the relation of various suitable factors on the "behavior" of soils. These studies, it is expected will provide engineers with definite means of identifying soils with each other and to adapt design and construction to certain characteristics.

Constitution Changes

The amendments to the Constitution became effective during President Wilson's terms—the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth. The seventeenth, providing for the direct election of senators, had been submitted to the states for ratification during President Wilson's term. The amendment went into effect in May, 1913. The eighteenth, or liquor prohibition amendment, and the nineteenth, giving national-wide suffrage to women, were proposed, ratified and became effective in 1920.

If you are planning to trade-in your present car for a new car,
remember these facts:

- When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.
- Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.
- Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.
- The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.
- An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.
- First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

Revenue From "Hobos"

That hobos by no means are all penniless tramps is seen in the experience of the Denver and Grande Western railroad in collecting more than $15,000 in fares from 5,223 "head-end" passengers and freight-train riders last year. The special agent of the road arrested nearly 28,000 men in this class, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Those who had money were taken to the ticket office and instructed to purchase tickets.

Send to the United States Department of Agriculture for bulletins on food, health and nutrition, and keep the whole family interested in the relation of food to health and what constitutes a well-balanced diet. The taste of food is no guide to its value in diet, but a pleasing flavor aids in getting the proper amount of food into the system by everybody. There is plenty of each kind of food, well seasoned, and carefully cooked, but not too many kinds. Point out that on succeeding days there will be new combinations of meat, vegetable, fruit, dessert, and so on, so that eventually each preference will be catered to in turn.

FRUIT AND FRUIT DRINKS FOR PICNICS

Watermelon is a Good Fruit for a Picnic.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

More fruit and less pastry for picnics this summer, and there will be fewer chances of bad after-effects for the children. A great many fruits come in "individual packages," like oranges, apples, grapes, peaches, plums and pears. These are easy to transport from home and for the most part easy to eat from the hand. The children in the picture, which was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, are being regaled with watermelon cut up in convenient-sized pieces for hand eating, if not by the spoonful. A watermelon helps to quench thirst instead of causing it, as candy and candy do, and the flavor is popular and refreshing. The watermelon should be thoroughly chilled before the party starts and kept cold until wanted.

ed by being well wrapped up in paper or burlap. Various berries in season can be used at picnics, too, if paper plates are provided. They should be packed in separate halves.

Fresh fruit juice is an excellent means of quenching thirst, and also adds to the day's supply of important food elements. Vitamin C in particular is necessary to the growth and development of children, is abundant in oranges and lemons, but is found in appreciable amounts in fresh raspberry, grape and other juices that can be prepared at home and carried in bottles or glass jars. Lemon juice can be mixed with the necessary sugar and diluted at the place where the picnic is held if the water supply is known to be safe. Otherwise all water and beverages should be carried from home.

MILK OR ORANGE JUICE FOR CHILD

Glass of Fruit Juice Is Excellent for Youngsters.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

A rapidly growing child who is very active may well have food in the middle of the forenoon and afternoon if it does not spoil the appetite for other meals, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. But the patronage of the ice cream cone vendor and the everlasting munching of candy, half-ripe bananas, and pickles of form vicious habits to which American children are particularly addicted.

Pears are one of the best and easiest of fruits to can at home. Their flavor is so delicate that they may be combined with ginger or other spices, or canned plain, or never come amiss for salads or fruit cup combined with other canned or fresh fruits. If you have many pears, put them up in various ways. The general method of canning is the same for all fruits.

Pears can and quarter or halve the pears, and then cook them from 8 to 10 minutes in boiling medium syrup made by using 1 part of sugar to 2 parts of water. The size of the fruit will determine the length of time they should be cooked. This cooking makes the best varieties of pears pack better and enables the cook to remove them hot into the containers. They are then filled with boiling syrup. Process containers in the same sizes in the water-bath for 20 minutes.

The water-bath method of canning is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture for fruits and tomatoes. You may use a regular boiler or any vessel with a tight-fitting cover that is deep enough to hold the jars completely immersed in water, standing on a rack or a false bottom. The pressure canner at 212 degrees Fahrenheit may also be used for pears.

Adjust rubbers, tops, and springs on the jars, or seal the cans and place in the canner. Remove from the boiling water at the end of the time, seal glass jars air tight, invert, and place out of drafts. Plunge tin cans in cold water to cool quickly.

CREAM PIE HAS UNUSUAL FLAVOR

Popular Dessert Is Made of Very Simple Ingredients.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here is a dessert that has the merits of being simple to make and unusual flavor, and the additional virtue of reflecting very favorably on the housewife's culinary skill. Butter-cream pie is one of those certain-to-be popular desserts that can be made of simple materials usually on the kitchen shelf.

The recipe below is from the United States Department of Agriculture. The chief points about making it successfully are to cook the flour and milk thoroughly before adding the sweetening and to be careful that the melted butter does not become just waxy, not caramelized.

If you like individual pies for a "dress-up" dinner use the filling in that way instead of making a whole pie. The filling is also good served as a pudding with cream, plain or whipped.

Blend the flour and sugar with the cold milk, add to the hot milk and cook in the double boiler for 15 minutes. Meanwhile cook the brown sugar and butter until waxy, and add to the mixture in the double boiler. Then gradually stir in the beaten egg yolks, and cook for a few minutes, remove from fire and add the vanilla.

Place this mixture in a baked pastry shell and when slightly set cover with a meringue made by adding one tablespoonful of sugar to each beaten egg white, and a little salt and vanilla. Place in a slow oven until meringue is a golden brown.

PEPSIN

Duration of Soviet Rule Easily Proved

"Comrade" Kulinin is president of the Soviet Union. He is a peasant by origin. Like all good presidents Kulinin makes a speech occasionally. He makes a speech to occasion. He makes a speech at a farmer's reunion, at a school, at a wedding, at a peasant audience. Not long ago he made a speech at a farmer's reunion not so far from Nizhni. The president was drawing a grandiloquent picture of life under the Soviet regime. At one point he said his peasant listeners that Russia was the first country to throw off the yoke. Suddenly he was interrupted. Interruptions are not infrequent in peasant districts. "We have land and freedom," cried one farmer, "but under the czars we had no pants or shoes or pants and now we have only pants." "Comrades," replied the courageous president, "the negroes of Africa have no pants at all." "How is that?" came back the voice from the audience. "The czars took all the pants to be sold to us." If these people in Africa have no pants at all, they must have had Soviet rule for at least 20 years."—Pierre Van Paassen, in the Atlanta Constitution.

HOPE FOR TITANIC
SHAFT IN 2 YEARS*Sponsors in Washington Seek More Funds in Congress.

Washington—Obstacles which for fifteen years have blocked the erection in Washington of a statue commemorating the 1,500 victims of the Titanic disaster are slowly being removed. Members of the Wanamaker Titanic Memorial association hope that their objective will be reached in another two years.

Organized shortly after the disaster in 1912, the association promptly raised more than $100,000 for the memorial, but it was not until 1917 that a bill authorizing use of public grounds for the purpose got through the legislative jar in Congress, where the site which had been selected was denied.

A new site was chosen, on the Potomac near the ground dedicated to the Lincoln memorial, and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney of New York went ahead with completion of the statue from a design approved by a special Arts commission several years earlier.

The new site was under water, but plans had been made for construction of a sea wall as part of the program for linking Potomac and Rock Creek parks. Work on the wall was held up, however, and work on it had to be suspended in 1922, after only part of the cleanup foundation had been put in. The last congress granted $25,000 for resumption of the work, but that was entirely insufficient to meet the most urgent repairs on the old foundation. Engineers estimated that another $175,000 would be needed.

Mrs. William Howard Taft is interested in the plan, which is under the guidance of Mrs. John Hays Hammond, who is chairman of the association, and Mrs. Robert S. Chow.

These women are confident that the necessary appropriation will be granted by the next congress and that soon afterward they will be able to complete their task.

Colds in Head Prove Impervious to Vaccine

Manchester, England.—A cold in the head is still the cold in the head at the Manchester university, where the course of experiments has been going on to determine the value of vaccination. Two hundred and eighty-six persons took part in the test.

The conclusion that vaccination against colds has no preventive value was suggested by the results of an experiment conducted by Dr. A. F. Dove, Dr. J. R. Ferguson and Dr. W. W. C. Taylor.

Students and members of the university staff suffered their second colds during the course of the experiment. A stock vaccine containing eight different kinds of animal viruses and 125 were not inoculated.

Results showed that the 125 inoculated persons had 203 colds, the 145 uninoculated said they had 162 colds, during the course of the experiment and that the average duration of the colds among the inoculated was 18 days and among the others ten and one-half days.

The investigators, however, concluded that the evidence does not justify with certainty any conclusion that vaccine causes any harm.

One-Man Tugboats Now Being Used on West Coast

Seattle, Wash.—Tugpower is too valuable for dogs, for duplication, so one-man tugs for towing have gained favor. Towing conditions on the British Columbia coast and in Puget sound are causing the change in methods. Navigation rules require boats to be 100 feet long and nine feet beam to carry certified captains. There is no limit to the power equipment. Thus 20-foot boats are being fitted with 50 to 100 horsepower oil engines and one man does the tending, steering, painting the routines and stands watch.

Huge Sweet Tooth

Atlanta, Ga.—Americans seem to have a sweet tooth. They eat $25,000 tons of candy a year, but that's not enough for members of the National Confectioners' association.

Capital "Beauty" Plans Froze Aid to Parking

Washington—Some decided contrasts between the old and the new are being displayed as the capital gets down to the actual work of modernization. In one case, a particularly pretty part of which for years has been a constant irritant to those artistically inclined.

In the block adjoining the massive Post Office department store, there is a parking lot. In close tabernacles of cellars below the ground, an entire city block occupied by stores and other business houses was razed, and not a single basement was left intact without the dread of finding them ticketed for unkempt rear yards.

When the brickwork and other walls were required, a job reflected in a very short time, the ground was found to be so smooth that it was immediately covered by asphalt. As a result, when automobiles moved in, they left indelibly without the dread of finding them ticketed for unkempt rear yards.

TRACT SET ASIDE FOR NATIVE BIRDS

President Coolidge, by a recent order, has set aside a tract of 2,000 acres in the state of South Carolina as a preserve and breeding ground for native birds. The area embraces certain abandoned rice lands belonging to the United States and abutting on the Savannah river, near Savannah, Ga., and is to be known as the "Tract for Native Birds."

The new reservation has been placed under the administration of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. It will be unlawful for any person to hunt, trap, capture, shoot, kill any bird or wild animal of any kind whatever, to take or destroy the eggs of any such bird, or to injure, molest or destroy any property of the United States within the limits of the reserve, except under rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Department of Agriculture.

Favorable Criticism

At a recent meeting of librarians a speaker said that he was surprised to find that a man had never heard of H. G. Wells' "Death of a Salesman" and—would you believe it?—George Bernard Shaw!

Yet they knew a great deal about Caesar and something about Cleopatra. He once asked a boy who was returning "Vivian Vale" what he thought of Lucy Simon.

"Oh," replied the boy, "she was some dame."

Mineral Wealth in India

Origin of Shoemaking Traced Back to Egypt

New York.—It may look little to you that the origin of shoes has been traced to Egypt, though the foot was known from mummies in the pyramids, but in the days when "woman sang her arms, blinged her hair and blinged her face," as Homer or Herodotus put it, she always was careful to "irritate her toes," asserts Dr. Frank H. Vizcaino.

The earliest sandals were sandals. The early Chaldeans wore neither sandals nor shoes, but shoes were unknown to the Assyrians even in the earliest period, for they were indicated on the feet of far-off tribesmen as early as the Black Obelisk King Shishaknefer.

Dollars of Gratitude

There are three degrees of gratitude, according to men's several abilities. The first is to requite—the second to deserve—the third to contribute a small relative sum. The last is the last, but need not be the second, the last that would not be the third, the last man with death not the third.

—Thomas Fuller.

Milk Preparations

There is a difference of sugar content and method of preparation between condensed and evaporated milk. Condensed milk is prepared by drying sugar before evaporation. Evaporated milk is made by evaporating part of the water and preserving by heat after the product is in the final container.

TALMA NEWSSTATEMENT BY THE

that this female "P. M." wanted Graff double crossed and I refused to do it and in her anger she wrote the article about it to vent her spleen.

Altho she used the former prosecutor's name in her article, I do not believe that he personally had anything to do with the publication of it for he said personally to the Court and to me both on the day that Graff was sentenced and also after this female left town that the Graff had been properly handled, and I will do it regardless of the reporter "P. M."

Many of her statements are not the facts.

First, the chickens were Buff Orpingtons not R. I. Reds.

Second, these chickens were not taken all at one time, but there were three or four trips at different dates, twenty-two chickens taken on January 27, which is largest number.

Third, the petticoat charge was based. No witness saw Graff take them. All that the evidence would prove was that Graff sold some chickens that he had been raised and that Hibschman and Kitson were missing some, but they did not know how many. Neither could go on the witness stand and swear that Graff had taken them. They said that for us to arrest him and make him prove himself innocent. I told them that the law held a man innocent until proven guilty and that we have to prove our case and not his. Under these conditions not knowing but suspecting the thief I prepared an affidavit as Graff for dealing in poultry without a license and had it filed in Simon's Just

Court at Syracuse. There Graff let it out that he might have taken the chickens. We later agreed to plead guilty and save the taxpayers of this county the cost of a trial. If we would recommend a suspended sentence, which was done, Kitzon and Hibschman and I think Wm. Schreiner and McKrill, were all in court at the time, and the first objection they ever made was months after when they found out that if Graff had gone to prison they might get the reward. Then it was Sunday.
